Mr. Owen Acra and Miss Elvora Graves were united in marriage on Thursday afternoon, April 17th, at the home of W. R. Bradburn, by Rev. Paul G. Gillespie, pastor of the Florence and Burlington Methodist churches. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Graves, of Hebron, and is an unusually pretty and attractive young lady, her admirers being many. The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Acra, of Middle creek and is a fine, young man. These are splendid young people and the Recorder joins their many friends in extending congratulations and very best wishes.

The revival services at the Methodist church that were conducted by Rev. W. B. Campbell, President of Wesleyan College and the pastor Rev. F. G. Gillespie, closed Sunday evening. During the meeting Mrs. C. E. White, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Gaines, Misses Georgia Kirkpatrick, Dorothy Nell Furnish, Alta Mae Rouse, Dorothy Cason, Nell Martin, Louise Renaker Helen Huth Gaines, William and Bailey Greenup, Leon Bonita, James Cason O. S. Eddins and Stanley Easton united with the church. Rev. Campbell delivered interesting and instructive sermons.

The few warm days and April showers have caused the grass to grow fast and is making a good show. Everywhere are signs of early gardening, most persons counting by the time vegetables are up that danger from killing frosts will be passed. It is predicted that the coming season will be one of the best fruit years in several years, due to the fact that the trees have been kept back from budding by frequent freezes.

A splendid Easter program was given at the Burlington Methodist church last Sunday morning. After Sunday school the preaching services brought out a fine crowd and Dr. Campbell delivered a very impressive message. The church was filled with the singing service and the large crowd was treated to some splendid singing by the choir and a duet by Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Berkshire.

NOTICE

There will be a meeting of all members of the Farm Bureau, at 4:30 p. m., at Florence, April 25th, 1924 at 7:30 p. m., at Florence. All members must be present as we have business of importance to transact.

CLEM KENDALL, President.

LIFE-AS SHE IS.

Some woman walks hand in hand with death and we are born. Passion more than often unbitten all far from welcome—these be the things which create and greet us. Cold and croup and frequent misdirected care flies and fevers and fits and measles and mumps; eventually school with its dreary monotony and senseless endeavor. Then live butts in and from that momentous minute trouble begins. Whether you get her or she gets you or the other fellow gets what you thought you couldn't live without really doesn't matter—there's always a twanging of heart-strings—unspeakable longing for the unattainable with the final attendant uncertainty of a David Harum hostess.

And then there's life, with its ever empty flour barrel; the always abated bank balance or overdraft; the double cross from the fellow to whom you have always been a friend; gossip and greed and gross injustice; the work and worry of ceaseless toil and abortive effort, politics, investigations and worry prunes; financial, social and household griefs which often approach the horrors of a sure-enough red-hot hells the treadmill of existence which is always a tragedy and a happiness which at best is shot full of holes and garnished with a gray gauze.

One of the most interesting documents ever issued by our government officials, say that one out of every ten of all marriages that have been recorded in heaven and in the county, have resulted in divorces, but it does not refer to the number that ought to be divorced. This thought is not intended to be applied as a warning to the millions who are to be responsible for the manhood and womanhood of 50 years hence—it's all a part of life as she is—and it grows more so each year. First the roller skating rink and its dizzy whirl; then the bicycle and its attendant opportunities for deviltry; then the automobile—and there we linger a moment only for the airship has possibilities of getting into the clouds out in the realms of space where even the human mind is lost. The old globe whirling and round on its axis at the rate of more than a thousand miles an hour—but it's not to move on to keep up with the prospective procession of the next generation or two, believe me.

LIVING EXPENSES

Rich or poor we all require the same amounts of food, fuel and clothing. It is what we demand outside of the necessities of life, our desires for distraction and the demands of society in which we move (high rents in particular) which makes it hard for the one with a moderate income to make both ends meet.

A New York accountant has kept track of living expenses for 27 years and presents the actual costs for two persons for the year 1914 and the same items for 1923.

The retail prices actually paid for food during 1914 amounted to $243; the same items in 1923 cost him $257. Soap, coal and clothing ran the total up to about $500 for each year. The rent item however amounted to more than the cost of food and clothing making the total about $1,100 for two people. The lowest estimate made by our government survey places the cost of living for a family of four at $1,900 or year—making a small allowance for life insurance, doctor bills, taxes, amusements, etc. but nothing for the rainy day.

GOOD IN ALL EVIL

In nearly all evil there is some good. A very severe storm that resulted in flooding in some parts of the country and heavy snows elsewhere accompanied by destruction of life and property, also is reported to have saved crops estimated in value at $50,000,000 in the northwest by supplying needed snow for protection of wheat and assuring plenty of moisture where a drought was threatening.

And so with nearly all things that happen in life which at first appear to be unmitigated bad luck. Millions have come to realize the value of good health only by becoming ill. The loss of an inherited or an ill-gotten fortune frequently has made more out of weakling characters. A fire sweeps over a large city area causing great property loss, but in the place of the destroyed buildings there rise greater and more beautiful ones. An earthquake razed much of ancient Tokio, but a newer, richer and more modern and more comfortable Tokio is springing from the ruins.

"God moves in a mysterious way His wonders to perform," ran the old hymn that was a favorite of our fathers.

The annual argument about "day light saving" is coming up again. The best way to save it is to go to bed with the chickens and get up with the birds.

SAFE SHELTER

WHERE DO YOU BELONG?

There are three classes of people in every community and everybody fits into one of them.

There are those who go through life with a smooth unconcern that is seldom, if ever, ruffled. They are serene on all occasions because they never take the trouble to bother themselves with anything that is going on around them.

People of this class never do any real harm in the world and in rare cases exert themselves enough to do a little good. Everybody likes them, but they never command a lot of respect and admiration.

Then there is a second class, which we hope are in the majority, who do not hesitate to say what they think—who take a stand on questions of importance, after they get the facts and form an opinion.

In other words, they have convictions, and they do not hesitate to give praise where it is due, nor help on censure when it is deserved. They are the constructive citizens who though they may sometimes make enemies, are responsible for whatever progress is made.

And finally, we have the third class—the chronic complainers and kickers, whose happiest moments are when they are complaining about somebody or something and whose whole life is destructive.

But the fortunate thing about them is that they are more destructive to themselves than they are to society. They don't get as large a hearing as they once did but they are annoying, to say the least.

TRY A NEW METHOD

When you have occasion to speak of the place where you live, what is the burden of your remarks? Is it a mere complaint or grievance, no doubt.

The good things of community life we take as a matter of course and never give anyone credit for them. We believe that they are coming to us and we can see no reason for complaint.

If we have a good administration of affairs by public officials, we never take the trouble to tell them. If we have an unusually large number of public-spirited men who are working for the betterment of our local conditions, we seldom ever give even faint praise.

But let something go wrong and somebody is to blame, of course, we reason that that somebody needs a good reprimand, if not something worse.

Having let off steam, the most of us are ready for the next round and become almost human again.

But let's resolve to change our way of looking for the good things that may be found in abundance and boost them. It will benefit everyone who tries it and it will help the community too.

AFTER FIVE YEARS

More than five years ago the government instituted action against a number of air craft manufacturers involving $40,000,000 of course, we have been fraudulently collected at the end of the war. In less than another year they will be outlawed by the statute of limitations. The Daugherty investigating committee has asked for these records and Secretary Weeks insists that the facts be withheld from the public as publicity might prejudice the government's claims. The public may well wonder why the government has not long since moved to collect this great sum of money. A little publicity may stimulate judicial action. From this standpoint one may judge that Mr. Daugherty's offenses have not all been acts of commission.

The fellow who paints his house this spring will be quite justified in regarding himself a "leading citizen." Put up and strut up.

COUNTRY HOME COSTS

People who are living in cities and big towns usually find that it is extremely costly to make any improvements in their places, owing to high labor costs. The result is that many families are delaying in painting their houses. They let their wood work, walls, and floors go until they often become very shabby and perhaps suffer deterioration. People who rent homes have to pay for these charges in high rents.

Such work is not so costly to the country people for several reasons. Country town workmen do not usually demand extravagant wages. Much of this kind of work is done by farm helpers and odd job workers who are willing to put in good days' work for a moderate price. Their costs of living are not so high as in cities, so they can well afford to work for less. Also many of the country town people do these jobs for themselves. In that way the very heavy burdens created by the high rents and labor costs of the cities are avoided.

THE ADVANTAGES OF AMERICA

The one thing above all others that has given modern conveniences to the common everyday American citizen has been the character of our government which encouraged the individual of enterprise to go ahead and develop industries unhampered by stifling interference and official control such as experienced in other nations.

The following facts speak for themselves and are a testimonial to the advantage of the American system contrasted with methods which discourage private initiative. The use of manufactured gas in Great Britain, where the industry was born a century and a quarter ago, is steadily increasing and last year totaled 232,800,000,000 cubic feet or 552 cubic feet per capita on a population basis of 42,000,000.

New York State alone where first manufactured gas company was established in 1823, has developed a per capita use of gas nearly double this amount, with an estimated production this year of approximately 90 billion cubic feet.

The production of electrical energy in Great Britain last year reached a high total of 5,738,700,000 kilowatt hours whereas New York State this year will use approximately 9,000,000,000 kilowatt hours or nearly 800 kilowatt hours for each person in the State, as against 134 kilowatt hours for each of the 42,000,000 persons in Great Britain.

When it comes to telephones there is one or every 13 people in the nation, something unheard of in any other country in the world.

SPRING FEVER

In these bright spring days feelings of wanderlust or homesickness, called by some "spring fever," affect many persons. The man who has plucked away at work all winter feels a revulsion from his bonds. He longs to get out along some trout brook, or wander in wild country in vagrant fashion, free from care. It is a somewhat debilitating effect of warmer weather. Probably there is something of both elements in it. The system of civilized society, by which we get the highly complicated blessings of modern life, is a source for regret. It is a while, a bright, sunny spring day is so beautiful, that one longs to get out and just enjoy the season. But recent industrial changes have abridged the hours of labor a good deal, and most people get considerable chance for out door life in this lovely time of year.

The motorists are asked to help make the roads safe. Some people could help a lot by leaving their cars in the garage.

REPORT OF GRAND JURY.

To the Hon. Sidney Gaines, Judge of Boone Circuit Court:
We your grand jury beg leave to report as follows:

That we have examined 36 witnesses and found 21 indictments. We have also examined the county's buildings and find things in good shape except the post house needs a roof, and there is need of a new fence between County Farm and Hubert Gaines' farm. Considerable complaint has been made concerning violation of the liquor laws, especially at a social gathering in the western portion of the county. Many of our indictments have grown out of this investigation.

We have been equally diligent in investigation into violations of law by school children, and as those guilty of these violations were under seventeen years of age, we have called the attention of the Judge of the Juvenile Court to them and he promises to institute proceedings at once. We learn from the records from the County Clerk's office that over nine hundred licenses for dogs have been issued since January 1st, 1924, and that over one thousand such licenses were issued during 1923. This is only a comparatively good showing as we believe there are hundreds of other dogs in the county on which licenses should be paid. We warn all owners of dogs who have not done so to comply with the law at once. And suggest that the grand jury at the next August term follow up this investigation and return indictments against all unlicensed dog owners.

Having concluded our labors we now ask to be discharged.
W. L. CROPPER, Foreman
L. T. CLORE, Clerk.

STATE BOARD OF HEALTH

Miss Sarah Vance, director of the department of foods, drugs and hotels says that 20 per cent of Kentucky's $18,000,000 annual egg crop is lost through spoilage a great part of which could be prevented by proper candling. The state law which requires that all eggs sold in this State must be candled, is operative only between May 15 and January 15, the following year which covers the summer and fall when eggs are most likely to spoil. However Miss Vance reports that flagrant violations of this law have been discovered in the past by representatives of the State Board of Health working out of her department and she is planning an intensive campaign this year to bring all law violators before the court.

In a bulletin sent out by the State Board, the producers and handlers of eggs are warned to candle all that are put upon the market, first to help prevent this great financial loss on money paid out for bad eggs; second to increase the income to the farmer by forcing him to produce good eggs through non-payment for bad eggs; third to insure good eggs for the consumer and thus increase consumption and fourth to improve Kentucky eggs' reputation on the eastern market and allow our eggs to compete on an equal basis with eggs from other States where there are strict laws governing their production and sale.

SCHOOL NOTES.

The teachers' examination to be held May 16th and 17th will be the last conducted under the provisions of the old school law. As you know the prerequisites for this examination are evidence of the completion of one year of high school work and in addition thereto five weeks of professional training. It is best that applicants submit this evidence before going into the examination. You may accept evidence of three years' teaching experience in lieu of the requirement for high school training.

Supt. will not be in his office Saturday April 26th. He will attend K. E. A.

J. C. GORDON, Supt.

Some farmers are leaning too hard on their tobacco marketing association and expect it to bring prosperity from the inequitable system of one-crop farming. Because the tobacco association increased the price they increased the acreage last year and added to the surplus already existing when they should give attention to having a good pasture, to grow feed and hay and conserving their good dairy cows, should raise a garden, and plan to have a cash income every week large enough to meet their running expenses. Some farmers are buying corn and hay now to feed their teams to use in raising another crop.

Heard a farmer say the other day, "there are more vacant tenant houses in his section of the county this season than ever before." Tenants are leaving the farm and moving to town, where they will find work on roads and other jobs.

BETTER CITIZENS

The war department expects to take care of 40,000 soldiers in the summer military training camps which will open in all army corps areas in July. Young men between the age of 17 and 24 are eligible.

No service the government performs is more valuable than this because it offers the youth of the country a chance for a month's vacation at no expense that at the same time will be beneficial.

The summer training camps are an extension of the Plattsburg idea of 1915, favorite Americanization plan of Theodore Roosevelt. They have grown in popularity each year until all of the requests for admission are not be granted.

The country is only as strong as its young men. Anything that will teach them better living habits and that will make them better citizens is deserving and worthy of support.

COUNTRY TOWNS.

One of the best sides of country town life is the fine time which it gives to the young people. The great majority of young folks are completely lost in the life of cities. Unless the parents have considerable money or are prominent in society, their young people are likely to be ignored.

Millions of young people grow up in cities without the satisfaction of belonging to any particular group or bunch of people of their own age. They get their fun merely chasing around after shows and entertainments. But those do not take the place of the jolly life of a country crowd.

In a country town life is democratic. No one group sets itself up above others and claims exclusive privileges. The young people all get acquainted in school, and they are intimately tied with each other. They all get a chance at all the fun there is going. They form close associations of friendship that last all their lives.

Young people who never had this experience of growing up with a country town circle have missed something out of their lives. Never again and nowhere else can they get the jolly comradeship that develops from one year's ease to another, in a round of parties and out door sports and picnics and all the other jollifications.

The result is that country town people frequently have better manners and more social experience than those brought up in bigger places, who have not been able to get into the exclusive sets of their own towns. Families that were away to cities with the idea of giving their young people better advantages often find that they have gone farther but fared worse, and that their children could not gain entrance into the social circles that they desired.

Country Church Consolidations

The country churches have done a great deal to improve rural conditions, and in the future they can and should do still more. They should not confine themselves merely to their spiritual message, which is the heart of their mission, but they should also take hold of any good line of work that needs to be done.

To get good results they must rest on a substantial business foundation and be well supported. It will be necessary in a good many instances to consolidate churches, where there are more than can well be supported.

Two weak churches can not do as much good work as one strong one. Where there are more churches in a field than can be supported adequately, a certain element of competition may exist that is sometimes hurtful. Also there may be too much duplication of services. If two churches have to be kept repaired, painted, furnished, etc., where one would hold the combined congregations, then there is a loss in the two societies are doing separately a work that could not be done by one combined one.

The same duplication often appears in the service of ministers. Many churches by contracting are enabled to pay a better salary, and thus keep an able man who could not support a family of the meager pay given by many country churches.

The difference between the Protestant churches does not seem as deep as they used to be. As a result, many churches could unite on some statement of belief, and on some minister that would be generally acceptable. A strong church, able to keep its building in good shape and to make itself a community center for educational and economic progress, can be tremendously effective in any country town.

There is a gang of boys between the news of 12 and 14 in and around Burlington, whose objects should be that they are at home studying their lessons instead of running around the streets at night. We hear that the grand jury in session, last week, was investigating the conduct of these boys. It is easier to keep out of trouble than it is to get out after you have once gotten in.

DR. POLK WILL SPEAK HERE. Arrangements are being made for four night programs during the week of April 28th to May 1 by R. J. Matson Boone County Agent.

Mr. Matson has been successful in scheduling Dr. Polk Field Veterinarian from the College of Agriculture Lexington who will be the chief speaker of the evening. His topic will be "Farm Sanitation" which is a very important one, as it may often mean the prevention of livestock diseases. He will also have five reels of pictures which will be highly amusing as well as educational to all who can avail themselves of attending one of these meetings.

Two reels of the movies are entitled "Out of the Shadows" and deal with the transmission of tuberculosis from cattle to human beings. These reels should be of unusual interest since most people use milk in some form or other, and since the Fiscal Court has taken enough interest in the work to hire a Veterinarian to eradicate all Tubercular cattle in Boone county.

A second two reels will deal with diseases of hogs that are commonly found, and the fifth reel is entitled "Birds of a Feather" a few years industry has taken great strides in Kentucky in the last few years. "Birds of a Feather" a very good movie reel, which shows actual work in Kentucky and was taken on Kentucky farms.

Meetings will be held as follows: Walton Opera House Monday evening April 28th at 7:30.

Petersburg Movie House Tuesday evening April 29th at 7:30.

Burlington Movie House Wednesday evening April 30 at 7:30.

Hebron Movie House Thursday evening May 1 at 7:30.

Dr. Polk is one of the best men now on the Extension stage of the College of Agriculture at the University of Kentucky, and all who hear him will be prepared to answer questions asked by the lecture and will travel with the county agent throughout that week visiting farms where disease has been prevalent during the last season. Anyone having trouble with their stock should get in touch with our County Agent and perhaps it will be arranged for him to visit the farm and uproot the trouble.

Don't forget the dates.

BRIGHTENING UP THE HOME TOWN

To get an attractive town, you must have well kept homes. The first thing to be done about many homes is to attend to simple jobs of repairs that have been allowed to go neglected.

It is astonishing how much injury to the appearance of a place some little condition of disrepair will produce. A fence with a few posts missing, or one which leans over to one side, conveys a suggestion of deterioration. Just straighten up and repair the gaps in that fence and you have improved your place much as a good drill master improves a company of slouching soldiers.

Tumbledown sheds, chicken coops, etc., ruin the appearance of many homes. The removal of such a decrepit structure would add more to the value of many places than the cost of a new one to take its place. The first step toward brightening up the home town is more hammer and nail work in the back yards.

South Carolina is considering a four million dollar bond issue for road improvements. A very large number of the state's citizens have been unable to pay their taxes because of the damage to cotton by the boll weevil but they are game to the last degree and want improved roads. Two plans are proposed for this issue—one the immediate issue of the entire amount and the other the "pay-as-you-go" plan of about $1,000,000 at a time. It is probable the latter plan will be adopted.

EASTER CLOTHES

Easter is a many-sided occasion, notable not merely for thrilling music, and buoyant faith, but it has always been a time for popular festivity. One phase of this lighter side is seen in the old superstition that it is unlucky to omit wearing new clothes on that day.

In East Yorkshire in England this goes so far that people go to the nearest market town in advance to buy some article of dress or personal adornment, otherwise they believe that birds will descend on them and spoil their clothes.

Some people may regard Easter style parades as a display of vanity. Yet it is a pretty sight. Some folks make worse use of money than spending it on attractive clothing. But the churches should give just as hearty a welcome to folks who come in old stuff and can afford nothing else, as to one who comes in the highest tip of fashion.

The farmer's marketing problem is not solely to get the most out of what he has to sell; it is rather to buy less of those things he can produce on his own farm and make sales as often as he makes purchases. The low price of wheat would not hurt the Northwest if it had less to buy and more of other things to sell. The same condition prevails one year with another in all one-crop systems; times are hard because the farmers sell too little and spend too much for supplies.

COOLIDGE'S CAMPAIGN managers have ceased worrying about the Cleveland nomination and are concentrating on catching up various factional differences within the Republican party with a view to presenting a united front at the polls in November. The nomination by acclamation may not be possible because of Senator La Follette's Wisconsin delegates and Senator Johnson's scattered following, but the first battle of the campaign will be the writing of the platform, but this document will be short and to the point, and it will save little time in the drafting.

Most of it, in fact, will be dictated by the President next month. ONE OF THE LOCAL papers has a cartoon showing a solid line of voters, each with a magnifying glass, looking into the affairs of the new President. It is a true representation of the Washington picture, but only the town crier, with private detectives, prying and there, filing files and digging up records, but in the Senate itself, with one of its members under indictment it is a case of the investigators investigating the investigators of the investigators.

AN INVESTIGATION in Congress is to mean something. The word has lost its old-time punch. There are so many so-called investigations going on here now that only a few have any importance. The rest are in the shuffle and at least three or four which promised sensational results at the beginning of the session have drifted off into a final sleep.

A FEW WEEKS AGO it was pointed out in this column that Secretary of Labor James J. Davis is the only member of the Harding-Coolidge Cabinet who has not been touched by some kind of scandal. Davis is a solid record but no one knows when he will fall off. So far he has conducted his department in a high, creditable manner, winning commendations from employers and labor leaders as well.

HARRY DAUGHERTY sits alone in his apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel here and plans what he will do to his opponents in the Senate and elsewhere. Daugherty's plan now is not one of attack, but he is quick to strike when anyone attacks him. His friends say that he has something on nearly every one in public life in the country. His program is to hold his fire until they show their heads and then to shoot quick. The first evidence of this was his revelation that the animosity of Senator Pepper toward him was caused by a refusal to recommend the Pennsylvania Senator for a federal appointment. As one newspaper remarked a resignation from the Cabinet does not necessarily mean retirement to private life.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE is expected to sound the keynote of the Republican campaign in his speech before the annual luncheon of the Associated Press in New York the latter part of this month. The speech will probably be an outline of the accomplishments of his Administration to serve as a sign-post for Republican spellbinders during the campaign. It was at this luncheon last year that President Harding launched his campaign for the world court.

PROMISES ARE being made that the tax reduction bill will get thru the Senate by the middle of May. This does not mean final enactment, however, even though the bill has passed the House. There will be so many differences between the House and Senate bills that at least three weeks will be required to strike a balance. This job will be delegated to the ranking members of the Senate Finance Committee and the House Ways and Means Committee. In the final analysis it will be they who will write the tax bill that goes to the President. Senator Smoot threatens to bring Congress back here in July if the job is not finished before the first of June.

The geologists are said to be puzzled by the earth's movements, but the movements of the people on its surface would appear to others to be more inexplicable.

The people are called upon for a calm verdict at the election, but some people think there is more danger of a clam verdict.

The weather bureau frequently announces unsettled weather. They would also well announce that there are many unsettled bills.

Alarming Divorce Increase

Is marriage in America threatened with becoming a transient institution? Latest census statistics on divorce in the opinion of the University of California warrant the putting of such a question and the light of scientific scrutiny has just been turned on the American family at that institution. There was according to the census of 1922 one divorce to every twelve marriages in the United States ten years ago. It is one divorce to every seven marriages today. The galloping divorce rate moreover is steadily pressing westward and is finding its culmination in the States bordering on the Pacific Ocean.

Among American cities having the largest divorce ratio San Francisco probably holds the record. For the year ended June 30 1923 one in every two marriages in the city of the Golden Gate ended in divorce.

The divorce ratio for New York State is one divorce for every 22.6 marriages. One has to go as far south as Georgia to find the next best record—one divorce for every 19.1 marriages. On the other hand New York's next door Pennsylvania shows a divorce ratio more than twice as large as that of New York.

One of every 5.2 marriages in the State of Ohio ends in dissolution and this divorce ratio with trifling variations stretches across the continent to the slopes of the Pacific Coast.

The highest divorce ratio is reached by the State of Montana with one divorce to every 1.3 marriages. Following with one divorce to every 1.9 marriages and Oregon with one divorce to every 2.6 marriages, Nevada being the nation's divorce mecca is in a class by itself. In the state of Nevada the number of divorces for the year 1922 exceeded the number of marriages.

The problem of divorce has since the war in particular attracted serious consideration in the United States that it can no longer safely be left to the domain of theology or of the moralist to deal with exclusively. Science and sociology must come to the aid of the foundering American family.

Safety At The Throttle

In these days when the streets are filled with high-powered motor vehicles and the newspapers daily carry lists of traffic casualties, much is heard of "death cars." When an intoxicated or reckless driver is at the wheel it is no exaggeration to speak of "Death at the Throttle."

The more alarming these thoughts are to the public, the better. It is time the public were alarmed over conditions that caused more deaths last year than German bullets did to the American forces during the World War.

It is to be recognized of course that carelessness or thoughtlessness on the part of pedestrians is responsible for some of these mishaps—there are situations in which it is impossible to protect an absent-minded person.

The moral law makes us our brother's keepers at all times and its penalty is mental suffering for those who ignore it. The safe rule is to run no unnecessary risk anywhere with danger up your mind now that you are going to repentant Safety instead of Death at the Throttle.

The Historic Milestone Cover that appears on the May 1 issue of The Youth's Companion is a graceful and unusual tribute to the state of Virginia. Instead of choosing a single incident in the history of the state, the publishers selected something of greater moment; the contribution that Virginia blood has made to the West.

The cover depicts Cumberland Gap as it appeared in the days of Daniel Boone. It is printed in full color and carries the following text: Through Cumberland Gap, the Alleghenies, Virginia, the mother of pioneers as of Presidents, sent her children to the discovery and subjugation of the West. Dowered with courtesy, tolerance and hospitality as well as with courage and self-reliance, they took with them both the graces and the sterner virtues of the Old Dominion.

Massachusetts, the first establishment of the original northern colonies, thus greets her elder sister Virginia, of the old South, and offers her this assurance of appreciation and good will.

WATER

The old oaken bucket, the front-bowled bucket that hung in the well remains in song but not in reality. The country is rapidly disappearing. Although water service is one of the cheapest things we have today, what householder would carry his water even from his own yard to his home for five times the price. Today we merely step to the faucet turn it on, presto, we have water.

However few of us stop to consider the vital importance of our water supply. In the modern home it is so easy to obtain the water that it is necessary for our domestic use that we easily forget that back of the tap which furnishes us the water are facilities costing millions of dollars, and an organization that is working every minute of the day and night in the year in order to supply that service which we have come to accept as a matter of course.

Louisville, Ky.—The April crop report for Kentucky issued here by the local office of the U. S. Division of Crop and Livestock Estimates shows that the condition of wheat and rye in Kentucky is 29 per cent below the 10-year average; there are 17 per cent fewer brood sows on farms in this state than there were April 1 last year; and although the demand for hired farm labor is 11 per cent below normal the supply of such labor available is 21 per cent below normal. The condition of wheat in Kentucky April 1 was 57 per cent of normal compared to 85 per cent April 1, 1923, and an average of 86 per cent April 1 for the last 10 years.

The acreage of wheat sowed in Kentucky at fall was approximately 579,000 acres compared to 643,000 acres sowed in the fall of 1922; while rye (including only that sowed for grain) was 20,000 acres last fall compared to 20,000 acres sowed in the fall of 1922 for grain. Rye in the fall of 1922 was 60 per cent of normal April 1 compared to 88 per cent April 1 last year and an average of 89 per cent April 1 for the last 10 years.

Hired farm labor in Kentucky is 79 per cent of a normal supply compared to 85 per cent April 1, 1923, while farmers report their demands for hired labor are 98 per cent of normal compared to 97 per cent of normal April 1, 1923. Farmers report that this is due to the generally low prices of farm products compared to former prices and particularly as compared to the prices of manufactured articles and of labor.

WHO GOVERNS?

Washington is said to have twice as many lobbyists as there are legislators and twice as many detectives as there are lobbyists. In many departments sleuths are engaged to watch other sleuths and senators congressmen and officials in all departments are shadowed and spied upon and tagged in until life is not worth living. Ex-convicts jail-birds and crooks were never subjected to a more rigid system of espionage and even the hard-boiled newspaper reporters admit that the national capital has all the earmarks of a convict camp. Congress charges the lobbyist with governing; the people charge Wall Street with governing; Wall Street charges that politicians govern; politicians charge that detectives govern; between them all we're getting nowhere.

Holidays aren't the only times when folks enjoy good fruit cake. If you all haven't made up a good fruit cake yet this year, it isn't too late to make one now. Cousin Luella tried a new recipe last month which she says is just about the same as the darlings used on the old plantation only this one's more economical. Here's the way she gave it to me:

Cream a pound of butter and add to it a cup of brown sugar, beating thoroughly. Separate the yolks from 3 eggs and beat until thick; then beat whites until stiff and dry and add to mixture. Add two tablespoons of sweet milk and then two pounds of sweet chopped raisins, one-half pound blanched almonds and a pound of sliced citron; preserved orange and lemon peel are good too. Next stir a pound of self-rising flour and add this with two teaspoons each of mace and cinnamon to the mixture. Put in deep, well buttered pans, cover with buttered paper, steam three hours and bake one and one-half hours in a slow oven. It takes longer in a very slow oven. Everyone is sure to enjoy this delicious fruit cake and it will keep a long time (if they don't enjoy it too well).

The government publishes a statement placing the total wealth of America at $300,000,000,000, which is a mean way to tantalize the rest of the world.

"The first requisite of a successful publicity agent is pep," says a magazine article. The first requisite in taking what some of them hand you is a grain of salt.

It would occur to no one but a hardened scientist that the exercise gained in bowling is practically the same as that accumulated in chucking coal into a furnace.

The British publicist who says time will gradually solve Europe's problems probably means if France's birth rate continues to fall eventually there will be no one left to collect.

Maybe the scientists will learn to grow flowers by electric light, but cabbages so raised would be short of vitamins, and storing up vitamins is the best thing that cabbages do.

What Lincoln Means

The name Lincoln originated from Lincoln, England. Lin signifies a pool, pond, or lake, coin the ridge or neck of a hill, and the name was applied to a locality from its situation, it occupying the central ridge of a steep hill, on the river Witham.

Capite Florem

By THOMAS A. CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

WE were in Houston, Nancy and I, when I saw a beautiful picture in a shop window. I wanted to go in and buy it at once—the price was cheap beyond belief, it seemed to me, but Nancy urged delay. I yielded as all well-trained husbands do, but though I have been to Houston several times since and have visited shops elsewhere and peered in eagerly at windows, I have never found a picture quite so much to my liking; I should have bought the one which first satisfied me.

An old neighbor of mine had long looked forward to visit to California and the Northwest. He delays, going, not because he could not afford the trip, but simply because he hoped that next year conditions would be more favorable, or he could get away more easily, or he would enjoy the vacation more; but he never took the journey. He is hopelessly ill now, so that he will never have the pleasure which could easily have been his, and he is not now able to enjoy the retrospect of it.

We waste many precious hours in the contemplation of future recreations and enjoyments which may never come to us, when we might be getting happiness from the opportunities that are immediately around us. We delude ourselves with the hope that sometime in the future we shall have more time or be in better position for the enjoyment of life than today—when we are through college, when we have a good job, when the children are grown, when we have more money—forgetting that those people who have most money and most leisure are frequently the most discontented and unhappy.

We shall none of us be in a better position to enjoy ourselves than we are today; few of us, so long as we keep our strength and our faculties, at least, will ever have so much leisure for enjoyment or so great opportunity for happiness as right now.

I have always admired the courage of a dear friend of mine. She had for years owned a handsome set of mahogany dining room furniture, but being in moderate circumstances did not feel that she could quite afford to throw away the substantial but ugly one she had. She was left a little legacy, and instead of putting it out at interest, as perhaps she should have done, she bought the beautiful mahogany which she had so desired. She died within a year, and I've always been glad that she had those months of happiness and satisfaction in her purchase.

It is the part of wisdom, of course, to look forward to the future and to prepare for it; most of us take too little thought for the morrow, but the flowers of happiness and enjoyment are about us every day; we do not need to wait for the distant future to pick them. If we refuse them today they may be like my picture—we may never have a chance at them again.

This and That.

Men who never forget boys have their reward on earth.

Many a man is better known to fame than his neighbors.

When a man has a smart son, he seldom gives his wife the credit.

Folks with high ambitions would rather be jacked up than cuffed down.

More wash boards and fewer boards of directors might help a little.

The chronic grocer may be without friends but everybody knows him.

Some men work like they were afraid of the evils of over-production.

We hope to be able to tell our children some day about the jazz age.

The hard spots in life are never recognized until you bump into them.

Geese once saved Rome, and if that still holds good, we've got a chance.

Why is it in real life the chests do not go up and down as they do in the movies.

Many a man who gets vamped is always looking for a chance to get re-vamped.

When a man thinks as much of his duties as he does of his rights, he is never out of a job.

People who never count their blessings can never give a very good account of themselves.

And another one of the country's needs is a revolver that will count ten before it goes off.

It's all right to remember the wife's birthday, but never—both about which one it is.

People who ride into eternity via the railroad crossing may find a detour sign facing them.

Preparedness for the future is equally as important for the individual as it is for the nation.

The fact that boys are an improvement on their fathers' ought to make the future look hopeful.

While some of the city people are strong on oily talk, country people put more faith in elbow grease.

People who live modestly, regardless of the amount of money they have are generally the happiest.

Life, if it is to be of service to others, and happy should be a running stream and not a stagnant pool.

Some girls use dumb-bells to get color in their cheeks. Others use color in their cheeks to get dumb-bells.

The weaker a man's argument is, the more likely it is to be punctured with a liberal supply of cuss words.

There are men whose idea of economy is to bring their wives to town and never let them out of the massine.

In naming the baby, it's always well to remember that he may have to carry it through a long span of years.

While the farm boys are holding cattle judging contests, the city fellows are deciding which is the prettiest girl.

The young men are urged to climb the ladder of success, but more of them seem inclined to ride up in the elevator.

Some of these fellows who go off to the cities to get rich, get ready within a very short time to celebrate Old Home Week.

Another thing we need in these times is more girls trying for the baking and sewing clubs and fewer entrants in the beauty contests.

The men, after having put away their spring clothes very carefully last year, are now yelling to their wives to know where they are.

The poets rave over the sweet birdsongs of spring, but they fail to mention the cheerful sound of the Old Man beating the dust out of the purlow carpet.

There is an old proverb that when God closes a door, he always opens a window, and people should always remember this and not have the windows so securely locked.

Our grandparents, who used to try to die in peace, are probably shocked to see the present generation rushing frantically across railroad crossings trying to die in peace.

DOINGS IN KENTUCKY.

Louisville, Ky. — A Democratic state convention and the Golden Jubilee of the Kentucky Derby will fall to Louisville's lot during the week of May 12. This was brought about when the Democratic State Executive Committee at its meeting Thursday selected Louisville as the place for the State Convention and May 14th as the date.

At the same time the state central and executive committees decided that nomination for U. S. Senator would be made in the August primary. The Republicans had selected this method, so both parties will make their senatorial choice on the same day.

The selection of the comparatively early date for the state convention was a victory for the McAdoo force.
It came after a communication had been read from Oscar Underwood's backers in Kentucky protesting against an early date. When the vote was taken the McAdoo influence prevailed 22 to 4.

The county conventions are to be conducted Saturday, May 10. On the basis of one for every 200 votes cast for Cox in 1920 the convention will have about 2,280 delegates.

The meeting of the Democratic committees doubtless was their last as they now are constituted. They will be reorganized for four years at the convention.

Justifying Our Existence

The feeling is growing that higher demands should be made of groups than are made of individuals; that when men and women live together in communities, they should justify their existence by worthy accomplishments.

The principle which makes higher demands of groups than of individuals is recognized in our laws against conspiracy. Frequently individuals can do that which collective bodies may not do.

Any individual may fritter away his time about as he pleases, but it is the popular verdict that when people spend their lives together, their time here on earth is wasted if they do not make an effort to improve conditions and prepare the coming generation for useful citizenship.

There is justice in this verdict, because any community that does not grow and improve will eventually waste away and the people who are at the helm now, the citizens whose opinions are respected and whose leadership will be followed, should feel that they have a very grave responsibility.

A Noted Educator's Counsel

"I never stopped any efforts of mine because I looked forward to opposition. I was regardless of risks and opposition." In these words Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard University, referred to one of the guiding principles of life at his recent 90th birthday celebration.

Dr. Eliot became one of the leading educators of the country, as a result both of his original views and of the principle that he states above.
There is a difference from the majority of people, who quit efforts at advancement as soon as they run up against obstacles.

The best way to become fearless is to master one's work. When a person studies his work with such thoroughness, that he knows it through and through, he feels confidence in the correctness of his ideas, which gives him faith to meet opposition, and ability to show the falsity of criticism.

Elective Systems of Education

One of the great changes of the higher education during the past generation, was the spread to a large extent of the so-called elective system, by which students are permitted to a certain degree to choose the subjects that they want. The birthday celebration of President emeritus Eliot of Harvard has called attention to this principle which he was largely instrumental in introducing.
On the whole this idea has represented marked progress. It permitted students to pick the studies that they need for their own life careers and in which they could do the best work. It modified old systems in which all kinds of students were ground through one uniform mill.
Yet it feels some limitation, or a lot of students will pick out "soft courses," and try to slip through with the least amount of work.

The Foreign Farm Hand

Many farmers in these times are forced to depend on farm hands who can't speak English. It is frequently difficult to make such men understand directions, and the farmer may often get irritated as a result of this difficulty. But these fellows are as a rule willing to work, which is more than can be said for many sons of the natives.

Everything possible ought to be done in country towns to help every non-English speaking worker to learn the language as soon as possible. Many families do real mis-erious work, by helping such men to learn English. There ought to be classes for such people, for the quicker they learn English, the more they can help us to run the farms and the better citizens they will make.

There are worse things than women expanding their ears.

SCARLET FEVER

The following is taken from a radio talk made by the late Dr. Herman M. Biggs, New York State Department of Health.

"We are very glad of this opportunity to tell you something about scarlet fever. Children between two and five years old, 'catch' this disease most readily—which is true of most infectious diseases. The only good thing about scarlet fever is that, if you can avoid taking it until you are grown up, your chances are excellent of never getting it, even though you may be exposed.

"Almost any grandmother can recognize a typical case of scarlet fever when she sees it—the combination of sore throat, sudden fever, a tongue that looks like the outside of a strawberry the scarlet rash, and then later on, the 'peeling' when the skin comes off in large flakes or 'scales.'
But at times the condition is so different that even the doctor will be puzzled—there may be nothing to see except a sore throat. If no doctor is called no one knows that the child has scarlet fever until he has 'given it' to others. The others may be less fortunate, and have it in a severe form. Such unrecognized cases have been responsible for many serious epidemics.

"Years ago we were most concerned about persons who were in the 'peeling' stage of the disease. We know now that it is the discharges from the nose and throat which contain the germs and that the scales do not carry the infection unless the skin has been soiled with these discharges.

"Those of you who are fathers or mothers will do well to carry these points away; if you can protect children until they have passed the period of greater danger, they may never have to have scarlet fever; it is a dangerous disease on account of its complications; sore throat is a symptom in several infectious diseases; it is far better to call a doctor at once than to waste time experimenting with home remedies."

THERE'S NO GLORY IN WAR

Dr. David Starr Jordan, president of Stanford University takes a decided stand against the militarists who would instruct the students of the nation in the art of war. Dr.
Jordan asserts that "Public opinion must become as high and as fine as is most private opinion as to the necessity for perpetual peace. In the schools of today is the hope of the future. Education is the only certain way out of the present dilemma.
The present generation controls the immediate future but little children control the long future. Both must be educated and the best line of education for peace is in the study of history. War should be taught as it is and not glorified."

Meaning of Han

The word han is used in the Near East to designate a stopping place for travelers. It scarcely takes on the dignity of a hotel, since the rooms are furnished with nothing more than a pillow to provide a resting place for the weary sojourner.

Start Chicks Right - Keep Them Growing

Put them on a foundation of healthful, steady growth so they'll keep growing—it's cheaper to raise all your chicks right than it is to replace them—and lose valuable weeks. The easy, sure way is to feed them from their very first meal.

Pratts Buttermilk Baby Chick Food

This original "baby food for baby chicks," contains just what the baby chick needs to build bone, muscle and feather, to aid the digestion and prevent chick trouble and loss. After weaning, keep up vigorous growth, give Pratts Poultry Regular in the usual feed. Try it this season and judge for yourself. Then "Your Money Back If YOU are Not Satisfied." Save Money! Chas. Abdon is breaking a pair of mules for Frank Allen and one kicked him a few days ago, hurting him quite badly.

Mr. and Mrs. James Arrasmith and granddaughter Lilly Mae, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Allen and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard McNeely entertained Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Horton, Mr. and Mrs. John McNeely and daughter Mary Louise.

GUNPOWDER

Mrs. P. J. Allen called on her mother on Thursday of last week.

J. O. Richards of Covington was doing some work on his farm one day last week.

Ed. Slayback and family of Crescent Springs, were guests of Robert Tanner and wife last Sunday.

The prospect for a fruit crop is very good at this time, all except peaches. The peach crop will be rather light.

J. H. Tanner bought some young cattle at the Cincinnati Stock Yards last week. The price was a long one but they are good ones.

Edward Bushy, who had the misfortune to break one of his ribs some time since, has about recovered and is on duty again.

There will be no grain crop except oats, of which there is a considerable acreage. The fall sowing of wheat and rye was all winter killed.

Mrs. Nell Blankenbaker visited Miss Emma Welsh who has been in a hospital for several weeks last Sunday. Mrs. Blankenbaker reports her some better. We wish her a speedy recovery.

In a recent letter from B. N. Tanner of Fayette, Mo. he states that he is enjoying the best of health and is contemplating spending the summer with his children in Oklahoma and Texas.

NORTH BEND

Clifford Henley of Petersburg, spent the past week with his brother Ernest Henley.

The little son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Henley has been on the sick list the past few days.

Messrs. Harry Muntz and Stanley Parson motored to town to see their best girls Sunday night.

Farmers of this neighborhood were glad to see the rain Thursday morning, as it helped their plant beds.

Chris Bowman and family had as guests Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Al McMurray and daughter Alberta and Miss Sadie Bowman.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Barnes and family entertained with an Easter dinner Sunday. Mrs. Jake Fleck and children, Mr. and Mrs. John McMurray and children, Wm. Bowman and Valentine Utzinger.

NATIONAL GARDEN WEEK

The week April 20-26 is called "National Garden Week." If you want to appear in a distinguished and patriotic light on that occasion, you must make a public exhibition of yourself operating a spade. It will lame up the muscles of some of the easy chair folks, but they will acquire considerable renown among their neighbors.

"God made the first garden, while Cain made the first city." The man who wrote that may have had a prejudice against town life, but it remains true that contact with the soil conveys a certain inspiration. Gardeners are commonly hopeful people, who can get enjoyment out of their experience even if they involve some labor.

Millions of people at the present time feel that they can devote all their time when not actually working on their regular jobs, to sports, amusements and diversions. Whether this thing can be done or not indefinitely is a question.

The practical result is that they neglect these arts by which in all former ages people have raised families and maintained homes. It would seem likely that by this narrowing down their sources of income while their expenditures are increased many of them would get into financial difficulties.

The people who cultivate a taste for gardening are in a position to subtract a considerable outlay from their cost of living. Fresh vegetables and fruits induce them to eat more of those articles, substituting them to some extent for more costly foods.

Also they become more healthy, their improved physical condition enables them to enjoy life better, and it does not take so many costly amusements to keep them going. It looks like good business and health policy to run a garden. Hence the Recorder shouts vigorously for National Garden Week.

GRAVES LINES UP FOR TOMATOES

Over 525 acres of tomatoes will be grown in this vicinity this year due to the cooperative effort of farmers through their local leader W. G. Barker, county agent G. C. Rountt and garden specialist John S. Gardner of the Kentucky College of Agriculture. The tobacco acreage is being turned over to tomatoes in line with diversification of cash crops, and it is estimated that from $25,000 to $30,000 new money will come into the country this year.

The tomatoes are being contracted for by the Heitz Canning Company of Henderson which has been obtaining a large part of the acreage from Indians.

"The yield which may be expected from tomatoes will vary from four to ten tons per acre," says Mr. Gardner regarding the prospects in this region. "And at the contract price of $14 a ton is reasonable to anticipate a profit of at least $50 per acre above all expenses. The tomatoes must be red, ripe and sound for making catsup, and good yields may be expected in this vicinity."

Because of the embargo on Eastern shipments of California lambs and the continuation of the very unfavorable conditions during March in Kentucky and Tennessee the market supply of early spring lambs before June 1 will be very much smaller than usual according to a report made by the United States Department of Agriculture. These three states furnish most of the spring lambs marketed before June 1.

While the indications are that the market supply of sheep and lambs during April and May will be the smallest in some years, with fed stock making up an unusual percentage of the total, the market supply in June and July may be somewhat larger than that of last year because of the delayed movement from the earlier areas, the large early crop in the Northwest and the indicated increased production in the Corn Belt.

Circuit Court. FOR SALE ETC

Thursday the cases of The Citizens National Bank of Covington against J. E. C. Co., J. D. Johnson, Jno. C. Bedinger and Jno. L. Reeves was on trial before a jury composed of Hiram Stephens, Edgar Aylor, R. S. Wilson, Allen Goodridge, J. B. Rouse, A. J. Ogden, L. C. Weaver, Russell Wyn N. A. Franka L. P. Williams and Perry Bruce. The plaintiff was represented by Attorneys Chas. A. J. Walker and O. M. Rogers, the defendants by Jno. L. Vest and R. edd. Simmons. The defendants executed their notes to the Frimouth Bros., Tobacco Co., for stock in that company. Payment was refused because the defendants claimed the notes had been obtained by fraud, that at the time of the executing of the notes the Frimouth Bros., Company was insolvent. A receiver was appointed for that company a short time after their execution. The notes were assigned to the bank as collateral security and their contention was that any fraud in the execution of the notes was not known to the Citizens National Bank. The jury returned a verdict that the defendants were liable and should pay their notes.

The case of Helen Hempling v. C. B. Parrott, which was an action for damages arising from an automobile collision on the Dixie Highway, just east of Florence. After the jury had been selected the parties settled the case, the defendant C. B. Parrott paid the plaintiff $1250 and the costs. The defendant resides in Knox county and he was represented by Attorneys Golden, O'Neal and Tolin, and the plaintiff by Williams and Rogers.

The case of Phillips and Childress against M. C. Brock was called for trial Saturday and completed Monday. The plaintiff complained that the defendant did not comply with his rental contract for a farm near Verona. The plaintiffs were represented by Attorney Jno. L. Vest and defendant by Attorney D. E. Castleman. The jury returned a verdict of $267.50 for plaintiff.

The largest array of legal lights that has been in the bar at Circuit Court for several years was present last Thursday in the case of the Citizens National Bank of Covington, against J. C. Gordon, J. C. Bedinger A. R. Johnson and J. L. Reeves.

Mrs. Elizabeth Tunning and Ben. Jones, Jr., were convicted of violating the liquor laws and were not present when the case was called for trial, but Sheriff Hume and Deputy Ux had them in jail shortly after their conviction.

The attendance at court last week was small each day, as the weather was propitious for farm work, and this had been so long delayed that the farmer remained at home to take advantage of the good weather.

B. D. Rice was found guilty of a contempt of court because he violated the conditions of his bond—left the county and state, for which a jury fixed his punishment at a fine of $150.

After being in session four days the grand jury adjourned last Friday evening—they returned 21 indictments, mostly for violation of the prohibition laws.

Each day the jurors lost no time in getting home after they were excused from duty—too busy to be hanging on the job.

Attorneys M. C. Swinford and Chester Jewett, of Cincinnati, were attending to business in court last Thursday.

Only equitable cases were disposed of Wednesday by Judge Gaines.

Asbury-Burton.

A very beautiful home wedding was solemnized at the home of Mrs. Laura Norman Asbury, on the Burlington and Petersburg pike on Saturday afternoon April 19th, when Miss Maud N. Asbury was united in marriage to Mr. John H. Burton, of Cincinnati Ohio. The ceremony was performed in a most impressive manner by the bride's uncle, Rev. Wm. Spears. The yellow and white color schemes was effectively carried out with Daffodils, Jonquils Jasmine and other spring blossoms. The bride was very becomingly attired in tan traveling suit, with the groom wore the conventional black business suit. The immediate relatives and a few intimate friends were the guests at the wedding. An elegant buffet luncheon was served immediately following the ceremony, after which the bride and groom took their departure amid the usual shower of rice and old shoes.

Pink Sunrise and Sunset
The reason that sunrise and sunset are pink is because the light, instead of coming straight down through a belt of air, strikes the air on a slant, traveling through more air, particularly close to the earth. As a result it meets many more specks of dust, smoke and other impurities in the air.

These absorb, deflect and reflect the rays and cause the multi-colored effect.

The shade trees around the court house have been topped, which will be a great protection to the building.

After a lapse of over a year Navy Recruiting has been established in the State of Kentucky. The main office has been established in Louisville with substations in Lexington, Frankfort, Bowling Green, Owensboro and Paducah. There are at present 402 more men in the Navy than the authorized strength of 86,000, but it is not desired to close the doors of opportunity to deserving men. Exceptional offers are being made.

The boys of today are the men of tomorrow—the greatest asset of any community or country. Most of the anniversaries in honor of heroes, mother, forefathers and others are sentimental occasions for looking backward but when it comes to celebrating days or weeks for boys we are looking forward, and Eastward at that. We see grandeur and peace in the setting sun, but vigor and hope in the rising sun.

Boys are boys, always have been and always will be the buds of human nature. Much has been said about the relative influences of heredity and environments in rearing boys to manhood. Both have much to do with their development but the question of environment is the one for which the parents are responsible and in which they are supremely interested.

The U. S. Navy realizes more than any concern the fundamental principles of character. In the State of Kentucky only eight men are accepted each week. Young men who can furnish excellent references and upon whom the NAVY concentrates with its war, the mind and the soul. We, of an inland State only judge by hearsay, so some of us are naturally prejudiced, to see this vast organization of men or to view the finished product, all doubts are removed.

The shade trees around the court house have been topped, which will be a great protection to the building.

The members of Patriarch Camp have organized a base ball club for this season and are in the League with Bellevue, Hebron, and Petersburg. This club will be composed entirely of Woodmen. New uniforms and equipment have been ordered.

Shelby Pettit and Robt. Utz were given the second degree last Tuesday night.

The tramp element would better steer for the locations where business is not good, as the chances of getting set to work are less.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

Sixty-three years ago on the 12th to 15th of last month this country was in the throes of a crisis that was determine whether it would be one country or be broken up into a number of petty states and end in being taken over by some of the Kingdoms of Europe.

Fort Sumter in Charleston harbor South Carolina was fired on by mer at the time determined to destroy our government. The first shot was fired the morning of April 12 1861 and thirty-four hours later the fort surrendered. Three days later President Lincoln called for seventy-five thousand volunteers. Within the next week fully half a million men offered their services and were eagerly wanting to help in perpetuating the government. Men from every walk of life came at the call and it was a struggle who would first have the services accepted.

No man may live for himself alone. He is the short-lived man in the world who thinks he can.

He is little less than no man at all who attempts to attend strictly to his own business and takes no interest in community welfare.

Every man can do something for the advancement of the community. Every man owes it to the community to do something more than merely pay his taxes, for the taxes are spent for the community good and therefore the taxpayer gets his money's worth in return for a fair assessment.

Communities, like individuals are too apt to become self satisfied if they are reasonably well to do. Ease and contentment always follow success. A jolt sometimes brings them to life.

While returning from Petersburg last Sunday night Rev. W. W. Adams and K. E. Berkshire, of Burlington, found E. Y. Randall's machine in a very hazardous predicament. It seems that the driver of the Randall machine, Thomas Randall, Jr., became blinded by the lights from Rev. Adams' machine and as a consequence ditched his own. After a futile effort to get the machine back on the road, which almost resulted in the total capsize of the vehicle, the parties decided to abandon it until morning. Fortunately no one was injured, and the machine was apparently not damaged. Rev. Adams took the Randall family home in his car.

The following members who recently united with the Burlington M. E. church: Misses Mary Louise Renaker, Dorothy Nell Furnish, Messrs. Leo Bonin, Bailey Greenup, William Greenup and James Cason, were taken to Covington, last Sunday evening where the rights of baptism were administered in the Baptistery of the Madison A. C. Christian church of that city, by Rev. Gillespie, pastor of Burlington M. E. church.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Ryle, of near Linaburg, entertained at dinner, last Sunday in honor of Mr. Ryle's 51st birthday and the marriage of Mr. Lloyd Weaver and Miss Mabel Rouse, of Union neighborhood, the following guests: Arch Rouse and family, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Weaver of Union; Henry Wingate and family, and Irvin Rue and family.

A very heavy rain hail and wind storm passed over this part of the county about 5 o'clock last Friday evening. The storm did not last long but the rain was so heavy the downpour of water caused the creeks to overflow and considerable damage was done along their banks. On account of the heavy rain the mail that was due at the Burlington post-office did not arrive until 7 o'clock.

The pulpit at the Baptist church was occupied by Rev. Settle Sunday evening. The pastor, Rev. W. W. Adams delivered the Baccalaureate sermon to the High School graduates at Petersburg. Rev. Settle preached an interesting sermon.

GRADE PAYMENTS ON 1922 TOBACCO CROPS ANNOUNCED.

Final Distribution To Be Made On All Types Sold Out—Fourth Check Coming Later on Those Still on Hand.

Lexington Ky.—Tobacco growers who belong to the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association in the States of Kentucky Ohio Indiana Tennessee West Virginia Missouri and Virginia who delivered their 1922 crops for sale through the co-operative association will receive on May 20th in many cases more in the third payment on their crops than they received in the first advance and in some cases as much as the first advance and the second payment combined according to the statement of payments by grades given out here today by H. Lee Earley secretary and treasurer of the Burley Association.

The cutting of this melon by the tobacco growers puts into circulation in the Burley district eight and a half million of dollars the total paid the growers on the 1922 crop including the May 20th distribution being slightly more than forty two-million dollars.

When the growers delivered their 1922 crops they were paid $3,100,000 and in June of 1923 received an additional payment of $14,900,000. The association has distributed in advances on the 1923 crops to date more than $21,000,000.

The third distribution is in grades that have been sold out and is in full payment on those grades. On the other grades there will be a fourth and final settlement when the tobacco is still in the hands of the association has been sold.

FARMS MUST EARN MORE

There are several reasons why farm earnings are showing a decline partially due to economic discontent and political agitation.

Statistics show that large numbers of tenant farmers have accumulated funds out of farm earnings toward becoming farm owners, but the process is slow and one of considerable difficulty.

Desirability of farm land is not enhanced by too much academic discussion about employing family labor without wages, or underestimating the value of such labor.

All reports show that tenants or farm owners having good sized farms, and largely employing family labor, are more prosperous and successful than farm operators without families.

Where the tenant has no family labor from which to increase his margin of return over necessary expenditures, he carries an additional handicap in this struggle to become a farm owner.

THE MOVING HABIT.

While it is natural that under present economic conditions, many people should feel dissatisfied with their results, the people who shift around from one location to another and from one occupation to another take many chances of jumping from the frying pan into the fire.

When conditions are particularly trying in any industry, rural causes work to relieve those conditions. The man who quits a farm because he has difficulties, is very likely to give up just at the time when the tide is turning in his favor. When people move around from one job to another, it takes them a certain amount of time to adapt themselves to new conditions. If they had put the same effort into their former job or location they would have in a great many cases have come out better.

CLEAN MONEY

People have a habit of calling it "filthy lucre" but really it is not so filthy, because Uncle Sam has a custom of washing his money with the precision and care that the fastidious housewife uses in doing her weekly washing.

Once upon a time the government destroyed all of the soiled and worn currency returned to the treasury for redemption, but those days are gone forever.

Now our bills get their regular baths and our money is much cleaner than it once was.

The $1 bill, the passport of the great common people most frequently get into the bath tub, but those of larger denomination also have to be cleansed.

The average life of a bill is fourteen months but there are cases on record where currency issued one day has been turned back, soiled and greasy the following day for redemption.

Soiled or clean, we'll all take all we can earn and some take more than they earn; others take some they never earn.

WHERE OUR THOUGHTS TURN.

In the spring a young man's fancy turns to thoughts of love in a cottage—or words to that effect—and others who have passed that stage also think of a cottage as typifying a home.

It's the great goal of every man regardless of his past condition—servitude, to be listed on the tax duplicate as a home owner. It brings to mind that man who acquired in no other way—the satisfaction of being looked upon as a home owner, a substantial citizen of the community.

The robins are building their nests. Hundreds of other birds have migrated north to prepare for the rearing of a family. They take pride in their tree-top dwelling, just as the human family displays the nesting instinct in a desire for a place that can be called home.

Men who own homes make it a purpose in life to have one in which they can take pride. They obtain it by saving, by self-denial by thrift and industry.

The more home owners we have just that many more good citizens can we claim. It's not too late to begin planning for a home this spring.

The scientists say that man's features are changing. Nothing new that, as the women's often change while they repair their make-up.

APPOINTED POSTMASTER.

Although he had not received formal notice of his appointment, Washington press dispatches last week carried the announcement that Thos F. Johnson has been appointed postmaster here to succeed T. A. Reavis. Mr. Johnson will resign the office of sheriff which he has held continuously since 1911. Wm. Edick, senior partner of the office, according to announcement of County Judge Hasbrouck will be appointed to fill Mr. Johnson's unexpired term. Mr. Edick has already announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for sheriff.

Mr. Johnson is a native of Kentucky. He came to the valley in 1902 and purchased a West Side orchard place. For a number of years before becoming sheriff he was on the staff of the Hood River Apple Growers Union.

Sheriff and Mrs. Johnson are the parents of five sons. Charles is a graduate of the Oregon Agricultural College, James is a student of law at the University of Oregon. He was recently announced as an honor student. Julius, after attending O. A. C. for a year is a member of the local staff of the Standard Oil Co. All are graduates of the local high school.

Another son is a student in the high school at present.

Mr. Johnson is the son of a Civil War veteran, the late J. L. Johnson who is a member of Canby Post G. A. R. He is a past master of the local Masonic Lodge and a Shriner. He is past chancellor commander of Vanuoma Lodge Knights of Pythias. For 18 years he has been master of the lodge of the lodge. He is a member of the O. O. K. K.—Hood River Oregon, Clatsop.

JOHN W. PENN, DEAD.

Mr. John Will Penn aged eighty-five years died of the infirmities of age Monday, April 21st at the home of his son Geo. M. Penn in Covington after a lingering illness of several weeks.

Deceased was a native of Scott county where he spent the most of his life until about five years ago when he came to Burlington with his son George, and where he lived until about two months ago when they moved to Covington and his many friends here were sorry to hear of his passing away.

He is survived by his widow and five children, a son and daughter by a former marriage Geo. M. Penn of Covington and Miss Shadie Penn of Springfield; John Penn of Georgetown; Joe Penn of Chicago and Edgar Penn of Detroit. His remains were taken to Cynthia Thursday April 24th and buried in the cemetery at that place.

SHIFTING LAND OWNERS

One of the most astonishing facts in existing rural conditions, is that about one-fifth of the country's farms had new owners during 1922. While the country folks are a little better in 1923, there were a great many changes in that year. Figures like those show how real the difficulties are against which the farmers have had to contend, and the need that the rest of the country give them all the help they can to put agriculture on a more prosperous basis.

The root cause for this great changeability, is the fact that farm prices are low relative to the prices of manufactured goods. This puts many farm people in a discouraged mood, in which they are often led to change their location for insufficient reasons.

The next question is as to how long the girls can keep bubbling their hair without glutting the wool market.

Principal reason why many people's dreams don't come true is that they never wake up.

HELPING AT HOME

Teaching girls household arts in schools is a waste of time and money if parents refuse to "back up" the teachers, Mrs. A. H. Reece Philadelphia president of the National Congress of Parent-Teachers' Associations, said in a recent statement.

This sentiment surely will have the support of every parent and school patron, not to mention taxpayers.

What sense is there in teaching a girl household arts—cooking on a dainty gas range, washing clothes a few minutes every week and learning to sew properly—if it ends when she leaves the school room.

The same applies to the teaching of vocational subjects to boys. Why waste the boy's time and the taxpayers money grounding them in social advocacy and then never see that they apply it out of the school room.

No educational system is going to be a success if the school is only a part of it.

Give the school girls a part of the regular housework and the boys a chance to use their training they receive in vocational classes.

Education, like Gaul is divided into three parts—the home community and school—and the last named can't function 100 per cent efficiently unless it has the active and effective support of the first two.

Too many mothers say: "I'd rather do the work than have my daughter messing around with it." Too many fathers say: "I can do the work in half the time my boy can, so why fool with him."

Parents with this attitude leave the children's future to chance. We can't depend entirely upon the public schools, even though the usefulness in the training of children is growing.

A little time given to our children will bring rich rewards in the future.

COUNTRY TOWN PLEASURES

The congestion of people in large cities breaks up many of those simple pastimes in which people enjoy themselves naturally. Crowded sidewalks and crowded streets cut the spirit of enjoyment out of life. People are forced to resort to more costly pleasures. This makes life so expensive that many city families scarcely have any recreations at all, except for incessant going to movie shows a pleasure which people can get just as well now in most country towns.

The facilities for enjoyment in a country town are always close at hand. If the country folks have a few minutes to spare, they can go out in the yard and pitch horse shoes or choose up for a game of ball. They do not have to get on a trolley car and travel a mile or two to some ball park or playground, and then probably have to be merely spectators while they watch some one else do things. They can take hold and get the fun and excitement and stimulus of doing something themselves.

If country people lack such diversions, it is due simply to their own lack of ingenuity. Young people who complain that there is nothing doing in their own home towns, should wake up and get up their own pastimes.

There is a round of pleasures and pastimes for all seasons in the country towns. In the winter, the people can have their jolly dances and card parties. In the summer they have their picnics. In the fall they have their country fairs and husking parties. Some pessimists may declare that the country folks are too busy and have to work so hard that they get little time for pastimes. Yet the younger crowd who are working in the modern ways do not commonly work the long hours that the old timers used to. They know that life must have its moments of relaxation and they get them by superior efficiency in their working hours.

OUTDOOR SPORTS FOR ALL

President Coolidge has created a committee in his cabinet to take up the question of outdoor recreational opportunities can be placed within the reach of all. The well to do people have their country clubs, golf links, tennis courts and other facilities but to a large extent the people of small means are denied these chances.

Base ball parks to be sure are open to all for a small admission wherever regular games are held. Many grounds are becoming common. But still better facilities are needed with which the people of small means can play healthful games themselves. Every city and town ought to have its public tennis courts, public ball grounds and golf links. Such recreations make people better workers and better citizens.

A great migratory movement is to be anticipated from Europe, but the householders are also worried about one from their neighbors.

Most of the presidential candidates will find that the only way they will ever enter the White House is to paint their own hair color.

ANOTHER HAT IN THE RING

JOHN J. HOWE OF CARROLLTON ANNOUNCES AS A CANDIDATE FOR THE SENATORIAL TOGA.

Elsewhere in this paper will be found high points in the announcement of Commonwealth's Attorney John J. Howe. He has formally announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator from Kentucky before the primary August 26, 1924.

Eleven years ago, John J. Howe's announcement for the Democratic nomination for Commonwealth's Attorney provoked the descriptive headline, "Clean and Competent," and the record made by him as an officer proves that those words were used advisedly.

AN ACTIVE CAMPAIGNER.

Since the 1915 primary, in which Mr. Howe contending against an opponent in the then Governor, carried 61 out of 64 precincts, sweeping Boone, Carroll, Gilliam Grant and Owen—every county in the district—his reputation as a runner has been established, and no one has attempted to oppose him for re-election. He was president of the Commonwealth's Attorneys' Association of Kentucky for two years and is now its secretary. His activities on behalf of the prosecutors have been extensive in annual session and before legislative committees. He is said to have assisted in the drafting of the Rash-Gullion Prohibition Law (1922) and spent considerable time at Frankfort in 1922 in urging its passage.

In 1919 Mr. Howe was elected as campaign chairman for Carroll county for Gov. Black, although he had supported Judge John D. Carroll in the primary. Gov. Black led the ticket in Carroll county by 65 votes, his majority being 32 larger than the Democratic nominee had received four years before.

WELL KNOWN IN HIS HOME STATE

John J. Howe is well known throughout the State, being a member of the Methodist church, a district speaker in its Educational Fund Campaign, an educational trustee of the Masonic Grand Lodge, Past Grand Chancellor of the Grand Lodge and a supreme representative in the Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias, and formerly district and grand master of the Kappa Sigma fraternity.

WELL-QUALIFIED FOR THE PLACE

Receiving his early education in the Carrollton High School, through his own effort, John J. Howe became a classical graduate of the Kentucky Wesleyan College as well as a law graduate from the well known school at Ann Arbor, Michigan, since which time he has had wide experience as a practitioner and prosecutor. He is, therefore, mentally equipped to study and understand the problems of the State, and has the moral courage to render efficient and satisfactory service in the great deliberative body to which he aspires.

TOBACCO THIS YEAR.

The situation as to the 1924 tobacco crop in Kentucky is a serious one. The United States Government's figures combine with the arguments of the Agricultural Experiment Station and tobacco pool officials as a warning to the farmer to cut his acreage. It is not too late to reduce intended plantings, as the tobacco plants are just coming up in the seed beds. If the acreage of tobacco is set out as indicated, the Kentucky farmers face certain loss.

The Kentucky tobacco farmer may well heed the common-sense advice of Ralph Barker, Carrollton tobacco man, lately with the pool. Pointing out that there is too much tobacco, he says:

Let's get out of this crop nonsense and suit putting all our eggs in one basket. Let every tobacco grower raise just what acreage he can care for by himself, more or less, keep his own cows and hogs and raise his own meat, and we shall not be at the mercy of a one-crop system that keeps us in bondage when the price of that one crop is down, and which induces us foolishly to increase acreage when it is high for any one season.

Railroads are vehemently asserting that the "farmer pays the freight, only one way." He certainly has to pay the freight on his wheat to Liverpool because he has to sell it there for what the foreign farmers will take for theirs after paying the freight. Then he has to pay freight on the goods which he buys, and which must be carried to him. The farmer pays allright for nobody is handin' it to the railroads and they are not in business for the glory.

Some of the time the boys put in holding hands should be put in to holding the handles of hoes.

A Hot Come-back

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

Dr. G. J. Ellis.

Dr. G. J. Ellis, 48 years old, 618 West Eleventh street, Covington, died at St. Elizabeth Hospital after having suffered for more than a week with blood poisoning.

Dr. Ellis on April 20, said he noticed a slight infection on the thumb of his left hand. He paid no attention to it until his arm began to swell. Last Thursday he was removed to the hospital, when his condition became alarming. He was treated by Drs. J. R. Murnan and J. G. Furnish, who used heroic methods in an effort to save his life.

Dr. Ellis had practiced medicine in Covington for 28 years. He was a son of the late Thomas Ellis, former Kenton county civil engineer. He was a bachelor. He is survived by two aunts, Mrs. J. C. Revell, Erlanger, Ky., and Mrs. Addie Ellis, Covington, and a cousin Mrs. Dr. Joseph G. Furnish, Covington.

Funeral services were conducted at the home Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Burial in Highland cemetery.

Attorney O. M. Rogers represented the plaintiff in a damage suit against the L. & N. Railway in the Kenton Circuit Court, and at the trial last week the jury awarded the plaintiff $26,000. This is the largest verdict that has been returned by a jury in that court. Mr. Rogers is being congratulated by his friends for the successful way in which he handled the case and obtained for his clients such a large verdict. Mr. Rogers stands at the head of his profession, and his home folks are proud of that fact.

Gov. Warren T. McCray, of Indiana, was found guilty of having used the mails in furtherance of a scheme to defraud by a jury in the Federal Court at Indianapolis Monday. The penalty provided by the statutes is a fine not to exceed $1,000 or imprisonment for not more than five years, or both, within the discretion of the court. The Governor was sent to jail to await sentence.

Rev. W. W. Adams, pastor of the Burlington Baptist church has refused a call to a church in Western Kentucky which carries with it a salary and perquisites nearly double the salary paid here.

In our last issue we carried a new item that there had been born to Mr. and Mrs. Edgar C. Piley, a girl. This was a mistake and the RECORDER regrets that the item appeared in its columns.

The Democratic state convention will be conducted in Lexington on May 14th, the State Executive and Central Committees, called in extraordinary session, decided Monday.

Relatives of Joseph Birkle received a message Monday, from the State Hospital at Lakeland that he had suffered a stroke of apoplexy and that his condition was very serious.

Revival services will begin at the Florence M. E. church Monday evening, May 5th. Rev. J. F. Savage will conduct the services.

Only a few years ago the bread made from a barrel of flour sold for $10. Now with wheat lower in cost the bread sells for $18.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Hodges and wife and Mrs. Conner, of Rabbit Hash, were transacting business in Burlington, Monday.

Day-light saving went into effect last Saturday night at midnight and the hands on the clocks were turned up an hour.

Messrs. Ed. and Fred Gross of the Pt. Pleasant neighborhood, were business visitors to Burlington, last Monday.

Eggs are very plentiful and very cheap but hotel and restaurant men evidently refuse to read the newspapers.

Education Worth the Cost
A cultured man is better satisfied with his culture than without it. Cultural educations are worth the cost.

FEED AND WEAN PIGS WHEN EIGHT WEEKS OLD

Pigs should be weaned at 8 weeks of age if the sow is to be bred for a fall litter; a satisfactory method is to remove the pigs, since she can more readily adapt herself to new surroundings. If the pigs are removed to a new location, they become more restless than if allowed to remain in their customary quarters; hence it is only reasonable to expect that the "setback" from weaning would be less severe than if the pigs are allowed to remain in their old quarters.

Three or four days before removing the sow, put her on a corn-alone allowance, and also, reduce the amount fed. This will rapidly reduce the milk flow since corn alone does not supply the elements necessary to produce a large flow of milk. If the pigs have been allowed free access to a creep and good pasture previous to weaning time, they will now be getting practically a full feed and will not be "setback" by the absence of the sow's milk.

Corn is the greatest and most widely used hog feed we have, but it does not supply everything necessary for the growing pig. It is rich in the substances that form heat and energy and fat, but contains only small amounts of muscle and bone forming materials. Muscle and bone forming materials are supplied in such concentrates as skim milk and tankage, and pasture.

Aside from the feeding value of pasture it is valuable because it supplies the pig with bulk and succulence in his ration; encourages exercise; and by distributing the manure evenly over the land, assists in saving considerable manure which is ordinarily wasted. It thus decreases the cost of pork production.

If pigs are being grown rapidly, as they should be, they should receive practically all the grain they will eat. Pasture is a great help in balancing the ration, but should be supplemented with skim milk or tankage for the best results. A ration of two parts of corn and five parts of tankage by weight will give good results. This is about half the amount of tankage used in the dry lot.

Pigs should be supplied with tender pasture. This becomes difficult, however, as the summer advances, since most pastures become coarse and dry at this time. To avoid this occurrence, it is well to have at least a small amount of some temporary pasture such as Sudan. Sudan is a vigorous grass, and grows well through the summer months. It should be seeded at the rate of 15 to 25 pounds of seed to the acre. In seeding Sudan, it should be borne in mind that the heavier the seeding the more paid the grass and consequently the more profitable is the pasture it makes. It may be sown any time from May 1 to July 1 and should be grazed heavily in order to keep it from becoming too coarse for pigs.

One of the mysteries of the day is why intelligent men will take the risk of making or selling moonshine liquor.

Right now there are a number of citizens in this county who can not resist the taste for liquor or for easy money who have thus far escaped detection. But it is almost a certainty that they will get into trouble sooner or later. The best time to cut out the illicit moonshine business is before the officers make their raid. We confess we have more or less sympathy for the folks with a taste for liquor and who do not happen to stand in with some one in position to bootleg prescriptions for alleged "coughs" and therefore resort to the home-made still or bootleg liquor of unknown origin. The stuff and the still are dangerous, both to health and to peace of mind, and there is always the danger of fire and imprisonment. No matter whether one likes the prohibition laws or not, there are millions of law abiding citizens who do not like the laws have teeth in them and safety first is the best policy. Better be safe than sorry.

Rube Riley and wife two of the county's industrious colored citizens of the Big Bone precinct were transacting business at the hub Thursday last week. They called at the Recorder office and paid for past and future subscription.

Some of the coal bins in Burlington were filled last week with next winter's supply of fuel. It's the early bird that catches the worm.

BASE BALL.

Owing to the interference of Old Jupiter Pluvius there was only one game played on the opening date of the Boone County League, last Saturday. The Petersburg-Burlington game at Burlington was called off by agreement of Managers White and Weaver at 1 o'clock. The game between Bellevue and Hebron was played however, although under very adverse conditions. As some of the experts predicted, Bellevue won the opener by the somewhat one-sided score of 10-4, but with proper support Joe Bullock, on the mound for Hebron, would have made a very interesting struggle of it. Bullock retired at the end of the sixth inning with the score standing at 6-4 in favor of Bellevue, and Brown took the hill for Hebron; he was soon replaced by Gledridge, who finished the game in creditable style.

Joe Brady pitched the entire game for Bellevue and had that low drop working to perfection and as a result had things pretty much his own way in the pinches. His support was not gilt edged, but as good as could be expected under the conditions.

The RECORDER had no score sheet at hand and therefore cannot give the final summary of the game. It would be acceptable to the Editor if the final summary of each game would be sent in to this office immediately after each game so that full justice can be given to all teams alike in the reporting of these games.

On next Saturday, May 3rd, the schedule will be continued with Hebron playing at Petersburg and Burlington and Bellevue. The cancelled game between Burlington and Petersburg will be played off on some future date by agreement between the two managers concerned.

IT PAYS—Farmers!

"Do not neglect Docking and Castrating your Lambs this year" is the advice given by Richard C. Miller, sheep specialist of the College of Agriculture, Lexington.

Farmers who castrated their lambs last year received an average of nearly $1.50 per hundred pounds more than did the buck lambs. These men who did not castrate. These wether lambs averaged two pounds more than did the buck lambs. These farmers had very few seconds among their lambs and they sold at a premium.

Lambs under seven weeks old should be castrated by all means. The lamb crop is unusually poor this year and we should try and produce as many top lambs as is possible.

According to Jonas Weil a farmer stockman and trader "a top lamb is a well bred fat ripe ewe wether lamb weighing 75 to 85 pounds alive. It must be compact low on the ground thick fleshed with broad back and loin short necked and symmetrically built. It has a velvet-like touch and should have a liberal quantity of meat and fat between skin and ribs and over the loin."

To produce this kind of lamb we must dock castrate and feed the lambs grain in creeps according to R. J. Matson County Agt.

Mr. Miller, here, was cooperating with Mr. Matson in putting on demonstrations over the county and they hope that practically all lambs will be docked and castrated this year. Any farmer who needs help in carrying on this work should get in touch with Mr. Matson.

Slow Change in Climate
The idea often advanced that winters and summers are changing is a fallacy apparently, as the changes noted scientifically are purely "local," due to man's own work, such as deforestation, the building of canals, the filling of vast areas and even the building of railroads.

WASHINGTON

Inside Out

(By Peter Keegan)
Special Correspondent of the RECORDER

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE has a real problem on his hands in deciding what the Administration's attitude should be toward the Japanese. If he signs the exclusion bill passed by Congress he may lose his Secretary of State and if he vetoes the bill he may lose the electoral vote of California and a number of other western states. Even if the President should veto the bill Congress is all probability would write it on the statute books for the legislators, for now at least in half a century of talking about it, are all riled up on the question of oriental immigration. As far as any serious consequences are concerned as the result of barring the Japanese, no one familiar with the situation expects anything more alarming than the loss of one or two diplomatic heads.

RIEAM JOHNSON is close of the reservation. Although he has abandoned all hope of getting the Republican nomination, he is still driving away at Coolidge and there is no limit to his assaults. The California Senator still calls himself a Republican, but it will be hard for him to take a place in the party again after the storm and stress of the presidential campaign has passed into history.

TALK HARDLY rising above the level of murmurs is heard now and then concerning a possible formal third-party movement. Having its inception in the agricultural states of the middle west but the long and serious illness of Senator LaFollette makes it difficult for the movement to gain much headway. And if LaFollette should regain his health before the middle of the summer not even he would attempt a third party into action unless he was more than reasonably sure of success.

THE NEW YORK musicians who are fighting the Dill bill which would permit musical compositions to be broadcast by radio regardless of the copyright laws have a good press agent from all indications. When they arrived in Washington on mass to appear before a Congressional committee they lost no time in assembling at the Press Club and giving the correspondents their fill of music. Among the visitors were some of the best known composers in America. Needless to say their Congressional appeal resulted in ample publicity.

SPEAKING OF Press agents one of the best of these in the capital is Sam Marsh connected with the Farmers' National Council. His greatest feat is the pending investigation of that is the Secretary of Agriculture Wallace by alleged maladministration of the packers control act helped to wipe out competition in the packing industry. Real scandal is promised before the inquiry is completed. In Blaise Penrose's day as Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee Marsh once appeared as a witness. After telling Penrose who he represented that is the Farmers' Council the Senator asked: "How many members has it?" "One Million," replied Marsh. "Name them," commanded Penrose and that ended the hearing.

FOR THE TIME being Harry Daugherty has transferred his headquarters from Washington to Asheville, N. C. where his invalid wife is living. The most interesting news that has come through from there is that the former Attorney General has consented to help the owners of the Marion Ohio State prosecute their damage suit against Frank A. Vanderlip former New York Banker who they charged cast aspersions upon them and the late President Harding in his appearance in court against Vanderlip will give Daugherty one of the chances he has been waiting for.

THE REPUBLICAN platform for 1924 has been written. Approved by President Coolidge it was carried to New York by Secretary of State Hughes and delivered as an address before the Republican State Convention. From the Hughes speech the platform writers at Cleveland will turn out the finished product. For one thing it was revealed that the record of the Harding administration will be gone back to again and again in helping Calvin Coolidge to get elected in November.

A calendar of 13 months is favored. Some people will think it means more set of monthly bills but no more pay days.

Congress is reminded that it was not established to promote oratory contests, but to get work done.

The difference between the old and the new idea of educational discipline is large and marked, but many not as familiar with the modern public school system as they should be, still visualize a school as a place where silence and timidity, iron discipline and punishment are paramount. The old idea of school was a place of confinement of youth where study was compelled by the threat of a switch. It has long since given way to the idea of a place where the young are taught because what they are taught is more interesting than idle play. There are always the wayward and the undisciplined, but the modern idea is to let the school take care of such by public opinion, rather than by making of the teacher a martinet.

As an instance of how the modern system works, consider the code adopted by the pupils of Washington Irving High School in New York, as their "Standards of Rights." This code was written, and is lived up to by the pupils of their own motion, not covered by teachers. They consider that their best interests are served when all obey this code:

To serve faithfully our God, our country and our schools;

To obey the law;

To be honest in thought, word and deed;

To keep clean in body and mind;

To do our work earnestly as a part of our loyalty to parents, to teachers and to student officers;

To practice thrift by caring for the property of others and by making the best use of our own time and possessions;

To be courteous by doing unto others as we would have others do unto us;

To live up to our school motto: Intelligence, Industry, Integrity.

This school has more than 6,000 pupils. When so large an institution can formulate and live up to such rules, it is visible evidence of how long distance forward which education has come since the days of the rod, the flogging and the public whipping as "aids" to education.

CIVIC LOYALTY

Few of us ever pause to consider how our town came into being. We have taken its existence for granted and have been willing to let the other fellow assume all the responsibilities of management. But our town did not just happen. A definite force called it into being at the very point at which it grew, and that same force continues to exist. The life of a town depends partially upon economic conditions and partly upon the character, energy and enterprise of its citizens.

The progressive community center must be a social structure for the promotion of friendliness, which, after all, is the most important thing in the world. The community center does not exist to improve people, though it undoubtedly does this. It does not exist to make them healthy though it may accomplish this also. It exists that life may flower more fully—the social life of the whole community.

Business exists to furnish a living; social life exists to develop friendliness. Therefore that community that brings people together in such a way that social life, friendship, comradeship brotherly and neighborly love is most fully developed, is the most successful and most prosperous community.

Manufacturers undoubtedly contribute largely to the growth, development and wealth of community, but today manufacturers are giving more attention to the social life and home advantages of a prospective location than they give to any single phase of the question.

Civic spirit implies loyalty to the community in which we make our homes and of whose good name we are justly jealous. Civic loyalty is but a part of that larger loyalty to country for which lives are willingly offered in time of need.

For a town all things are possible. The single need is some group of persons who have faith in the outcome. Improvement cannot be wished on a town—it must come from within.

Investigators assert that if the U. S. were to lower its immigration restrictions two-thirds of the population of Europe would be looking for America in six months. It is stated that five hundred thousand Greeks desire to emigrate to America and the consular offices are besieged day after day by men, women and children waiting their turn to sail for this country when the quotas were opened.

There are approximately one million drug addicts in the United States. That is practically 1 per cent of the entire population or 2.5 per cent of the adult population. But despite this fact the drug evil is showing untoward growth. The survey just completed by the University of Southern California knocks into a cocked hat most of the extravagant claims regarding the use of drugs in this country.

Many a narrow-minded employer regards himself as the engine of a train and tries to pull the whole load. The wise employer regards himself rather as the engineer.

While "Be Kind to Animals Week" has been thoroughly observed, many men claim their wives aren't any kinder to them than before.

SMELLING COMMITTEES

An investigation of records of the House of Representatives revealed 35 investigation resolutions pending before the house committee on rules, and almost an equal number "proclaimed" or pending in the senate.

In the words of one of the senators "Congress has smelled." In the words of members of the press gallery, "Congress has become an investigation instead of a legislative body."

If the courts decide, as they did in the case of the Federal Trade Commission vs. the American Tobacco Company, and P. Lorillard that the commission has no authority to go on "fishing expeditions" by rifling the files of various concerns under suspicion applying this ruling to the congressional "smelling committees" and if the courts decide further that a witness who is already party to a court proceeding shall not be compelled to give testimony to a congressional committee, it will have a very salutary effect on congress in that it may have a tendency to restore sanity and induce that body to resume the duties for which it was constituted.

Of the 33 house investigations called for, about seven appear to be legitimate in that they are calculated to inform the house as to the proper legislation concerning the respective investigations but hearings against which there is no disposition to cavil.

Representative Tinkham, Republican from Massachusetts wants the activities of the Anti-Slavery League looked into to determine their effect on Congressional elections. He also desires information on the extent to which the right to vote is denied American citizens.

Representative Allgood, Democrat of Alabama wants a hearing on improving the hall of the house of representatives.

Representative Stengle, Democrat of New York asks for a hearing on middlemen's profits on farm products which should give some interesting information. Michaelson, Republican of Illinois wants the Lakes to the Gulf waterway considered by a committee for the purpose of informing congress on required legislation.

La Guardia, Republican of New York desires a study of federal bankruptcy law.

And Morehead, Democrat of Nebraska asks a hearing on federal aid in road construction.

THE VIRTUES OF PAINT

One of the biggest factors in giving a town a fine appearance is the frequent application of house paint. A building may be attractive in its lines, it may be ancient and pain and bare. But if it is painted regularly with some attractive color, it has a touch of modernity and it pleases.

There are many towns that have few costly buildings in their business center. But if its buildings are kept painted regularly, the town looks up to date and enterprising.

A town with many poorly painted dwellings gives an impression of seediness and dullness. Many people say they can't afford to paint, but the present high cost of labor and materials. Yet they should ask themselves if they can afford to let their buildings deteriorate by exposure to the weather.

The homeseeker comes into the town with the buildings kept well painted, and he says that this is a place that is built on a substantial foundation, and it is a place with initiative and standards of achievement, and he is likely to locate in such a community.

I mind the first time I made cream biscuits how the folks raved over 'em. Why I felt as if I had puffed up as the biscuits offered the praise they gave me. But my cream biscuits did "rise" beautifully and they had such tender crusts and such delicious "insides." Well, cream biscuits are easy to make if you have the right ingredients. The way I do is to sift two cups of a good, reliable self-rising flour into a mixing bowl with enough sweet cream to mix. I mix this firm enough to handle and roll the dough pretty thin. Then I beat one biscuit with melted butter and place another on top of that and brush the top with soft butter or milk. I have my oven real hot, too, 'cause that's the secret of successful biscuits. You all will love cream biscuits they're so tender and delicious.

It's Easy to Make.
The little bride on the farm next to ours was asking me the other day for a good recipe for plain sponge cake so I told her as how I thought this one was about as good as any I know. Maybe you'd like to try it: Just beat the yolks of six eggs then slowly add a cup of sugar, 2 tablespoons of hot water and some vanilla extract. Add to this a cup and a half of sifted self-rising flour and the whites of the eggs beaten stiffly. Bake in loaf tins in a slow oven.

JAPANESE EXCLUSION

The action of the Senate in all but unanimously banning Japanese immigration to the United States has created a situation which requiring the most delicate handling to preserve the friendly relations between the United States and Japan which have been built up so carefully within the last few years.

The President would veto any legislation likely to offend the Japanese and disturb those relations which considered probable until the vote in Senate 76 to 2 seemed to make Japanese exclusion certain. It is apparent now that the President's veto could and probably would be overridden and the opinion is that he will not exercise his rights in that particular although not to do so will leave the Secretary of State in an embarrassing position his recommendation on an international matter having been ignored.

A GOOD FRONT PAGE

By THOMAS A. CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

THE theory of the newspaper man that it is the front page that sells the paper is something more than theory, and it applies to many things besides newspapers.

I heard a distinguished engineer say once that a badly fitting suit of clothes had ruined the prospects of many an otherwise excellent engineer. Of course it is unwise for any tradesman to exhibit too large a percentage of his wares in the show window, but a good appearance makes an effective first impression, and a good first impression, when backed up by something substantial, goes a long way toward success.

If I were in business, I'd see that the walk or the stairway leading to my office were swept clean every day if I had to do the work myself, for I know that it is the first impression that often gets the trade.

I dropped into a business office last week to have an interview and perhaps to do business with a man who is really a genius in his way. The waiting room was a grimy, disheveled place that gave one a repugnant feeling as he entered. The table in the center of the room was crowded with debris and thick with the dust of weeks. Cobwebs festooned the ceiling, and the floor was littered with toothpicks and cigarette stubs and long, thin rolls of "pussy willows"; yet well-dressed women as well as men came there to wait for the services of a man who was one of the best of his profession in the state. It was hard for me to believe that the work which he would turn out would receive more careful attention than did his office.

An undergraduate handed me a paper one day this week to look over and to pass upon. It was rather thoughtfully done, I found when I got into it, but I had been prejudiced against it at the outset. It was carelessly arranged and badly written and wrongly indorsed, and sloppy and untidy in its general appearance. He had given little attention to the make-up of his front page.

The principle may be applied to twice—the routine put on too thick or the shoe polish too thin; to slangy speech and careless manners or to the delayed dinner call; to soiled collars and finger nails in mourning or to carelessly written lecture notes and halting recitations—like the combination tool, it works equally well under all conditions. It is true, no doubt, that the clothes do not make the man, but they give one a very definite impression of him; the front page is, of course, not all the paper, but it is an excellent index of what one may expect as he reads farther on.

JOHN J. HOWE for United States Senator

Commonwealth's Attorney of Fifteenth District

Offers for Democratic Nomination in Aug. Primary

"In to Stay and In to Win"

JOHN J. HOWE

"What we need is to 'come in' to 'stay in' to 'win' the plaudits of liberalism. All know 'the present Democratic Senator from Kentucky is wet. I am dry and will vote absolutely dry.'"

About the Missouri Senatorial situation Howe says:—

"Notwithstanding the debt of gratitude he owed former President Wilson, Senator Stanley seemed to consider that he owed more to 'treacherous' Reed than he did to the immortal Wilson."

"As to whether or not Kentucky's Democracy approves this stand of our Kentucky Senator, I offer my candidacy to join issue and 'go to the country' confident that my fellow Democrats will by their votes rebuke such ingratitude."

Howe favors tax reduction, is against "the interests", and gambling.

If the present Congress and Democratic platform disregard it, he will clearly state his position regarding the Soldiers' claim. He pledges to assist in bettering conditions of American farmers and labor.

He welcomes the ladies to full and equal participation in government.

He says: "It is not so much my personal desire to serve as to serve at a time when the need for more consecrated service seems apparent."

"Calling upon God to witness the sincerity of my purpose and calling upon my fellow-Democrats to re-unite the party, I solicit and to the country, confident that the hosts of Democracy, and express my thanks for your support, and my willingness to abide by your action."

DOINGS IN KENTUCKY.

The first test of strength in the state convention may determine whether or not Judge I. H. Thurman of Springfield is to be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator.

There has been talk of Judge Thurman making the race against Senator Stanley with the backing of Barkley and the anti-administration forces. In fact there has been a definite movement to induce Judge Thurman to enter the race but it has been so far without result. Now it is said that a fight may be made in the convention against making Governor Fields the temporary Chairman of the honor that is customarily bestowed on the Governor.

If the opposition feels strong enough Judge Thurman will be put forward against Gov. Fields and if he makes enough showing he will be in the race for the Senate. If the strength fails to develop the race will be left to Senator Stanley and John Junior Howe of Carrollton who announced some time ago.

The reorganization of the State Central Committee will take place at the state convention. The election of precinct committeemen does not come until the first Saturday in May 1925.

The total number of delegates in the Democratic State Convention will be 2,282.

Sixth District—Boone 17; Campbell 53; Carroll 16; Gallatin 9; Grant 23; Kenton 81; Pendleton 13; Trimble 10.

THE INFANT'S BED

Newborn babies have their rights as individuals and one of the rights of a baby is to have a bed all to himself. There is nothing so bad for a baby as to have him sleep in bed with grown people. There are several reasons why this is bad for him: the first is that the mother may smother him in her sleep another is that the baby may be so covered with the bed clothing that he does not have sufficient fresh air. It is bad for the mother as well as the child because if the child is restless or cries in the night the mother will permit him to nurse thus disturbing her sleep and training the child in regular nursing and sleeping habits.

The best thing to use for the baby's bed is a clothes basket which may be lined with either pink or blue cambric and covered with muslin. A pillow or a folded comfort in a pillow slip may be used as a mattress. This should be covered with oil cloth or rubber sheeting. If the weather is very cold the baby may be wrapped loosely in a blanket and other blankets tucked or pinned around him. As an excuse for not giving the baby his own bed mothers often say that they are afraid the baby will become cold in the night or kick the covers off. Large blanket pins may be used to fasten the covers around the baby so that the mother need have no fear of the baby becoming uncovered.

The sides of the bed should not extend more than four inches above the baby. When the baby grows too large for his basket bed it may be used as a clothes basket. If a large clothes basket is not available a wooden box such as a soap box may be used. In the summer time the bed should be covered with netting and placed on a shady porch during the baby's day time nap hours.

Thaw may be sane but if the case hangs on much longer most of us will be insane.

What would you say if some man proposed to you?

LOWER RENTS SEEM CERTAIN.

A nation-wide survey indicates a time not far ahead when present building activity will overtake housing deficits left by the war with an inevitable drop from peak rentals and a decrease of inflated property values as a result. This is the sum of testimony found in reports from 46 American cities selected from all over the United States.

A survey conducted by the Christian Science Monitor shows that agents and speculators are holding premises rather than accept the inevitable decline. Quarterly building totals recently prepared in a national survey show an increase of building in New York State and northern New Jersey of 77 per cent over last year; southeastern states 12 per cent increase; Pittsburgh district 16 per cent decrease; Middle Atlantic states 13 per cent decrease; Northwest 30 per cent decrease.

Rents have fallen recently in 10 cities have increased in three and are stable but at high levels throughout the industrial east. In the south more than anywhere else building seems to have overtaken the shortage. Outside of New York in 36 eastern states representing seven-eighths of the country's total construction recent business surveys show a slight decrease in building over the high mark of last year indicating that the balancing point between supply and demand is being reached. In nearly all cities real estate men are looking ahead to the time when the "To Let" sign will again be hung out.

POLITICS AND TAX

Long before the present Congress ascribed every member of both houses agreed that taxes should be reduced. Every candidate for office last fall declared that he only desired to advance the people's interests. Ever since Congress assembled the two major parties have wrangled and jangled over the question of which party should have the credit of passing the bill—and the result is nothing done to relieve the burden of heavy taxes. The people are told that Democrats stand in the way. The people are told that the Republicans want to reduce principally on big business interests. The people are told that the Republicans want to reduce principally on big business interests.

After a protracted wrangle in the House a compromise measure was agreed upon and sent to the Senate. Now the Senate finance committee rejects the compromise measure and introduces another bill that will have to be wrangled over in both houses with possibilities that there will be but little left of it when it goes to the President—and then it may be vetoed.

One thing is sure and that is that the great mass of people farmers as well as business men are not only weary of excessive and burdensome taxes but they are weary of childish partisanship that gets the parties nowhere. Government by party rule may have been and still may be desirable but the specimens recently passed out have a decided tendency to discourage that idea with the great mass of voters and is directly responsible for the third party movement.

Officials must not forget that this is yet a government of the people by the people—for the people—particularly on the question of taxes. With the campaign to remove unrightly advertising signs from America's roads well under way attention may well be turned to the character of signs and sign posts marking the way to show their destination and distance.

The historic "sign post" is of wood with a board nailed to the side ending in a rude representation of a pointing hand. The board bears upon its face usually in weather-obliterated letters the name of the next town.

Such a marker was all right for a trail or a wagon road but is as much out of place on a fine hard road as an ox cart among automobiles. Modern practice dictates that road signs and posts should be permanent signposts plain as to information conveyed sturdy and artistic.

For national highways a beautiful bronze sign post has already been designed by a famous sculptor. Road associations interested in some particular road have adopted distinctive markers in many cases of a high degree of art and beauty as well as utility. The Old Oregon Trail, for instance which it is proposed to improve from the Missouri to the Columbia is now in process of being marked with signs of real beauty and significance. Professor Fairbanks of the University of Oregon designed the marker showing a typical covered wagon and pioneer family of early western days. Such a sign is particularly appropriate for this trail which is the route followed by early day pioneers in their ox-team emigration from the Eastern States to Oregon and Washington in the late forties and early fifties.

It is not necessary to wait for some large association to design or place markers. Every town can help by seeing to it that the sign posts along its entering and leaving roads are plain as to intent yet handsome and distinctive. Placing such markers embodies the spirit of welcome to the tourist which is "good business" for any town and is most excellent work for local civic organizations to take up and follow through.

Democrats Urged to Fight Machine Politics

The Committees violating precedents and over our protests, have called County Mass Conventions on May 10th and State Convention at Louisville May 14th. This affords no opportunity to effect an organization throughout the state or to properly present to the people the qualifications and availability of Senator Underwood as Democratic Nominee for President.

We have made an earnest plea in vain to the Committees to reconsider their action and set a later date for the conventions. Those now in control of the party machinery and the state organization believing in the power of the organization, to control the conventions in favor of Mr. McAdoo, have succeeded in calling them for these early dates.

We are proceeding with the campaign in behalf of Senator Underwood vigorously but under the circumstances must rely upon the democrats in their respective counties to champion the cause of Senator Underwood, attend the County Conventions, secure the delegates and instructions favorable to this great Kentuckian, Statesman and Democrat.

More delegates have been chosen up to the present time throughout the United States favoring Senator Underwood than those favoring any other candidate. His chances for receiving the Democratic nomination for President are splendid, and if nominated he will be elected and make a great President.

HOW'S YOUR STOCK OF CON-
CEIT

There are two kinds of fellows who prefer favoring you, or the one who defers doing so until he has had his fill.

There are quite a difference between preference and deference. One is positive, therefore grateful, while the other is negative therefore distasteful. To show preference is to show forth respect and high regard while to show deference is to be slavish, or make a show of respect in order to gain favor.

To honestly prefer the comfort and welfare of another is to make a friend of him, and being a friend thus bound he will not show you deference when opportunity offers.

The fellow with more money than brains is usually of the deferential sort, really feeling that he is doing a lot by condescending to notice you. This, you know gives him a chance to show his money.

You may know some good fellows who are so burdened with self conceit that they are positively bore-some, being forever trying to crowd themselves into the spot light.

Has it ever occurred to you that they are annoying chiefly because they crowd you out.

How are you off for conceit.

It is well for you to take stock once in a while in order to see if you balance all right. If you don't believe in yourself you can hardly expect others to believe in you, even when you are right.

GERMAN REPARATIONS

If the report of the Dawes committee on reparations is accepted by all parties, and warm hopes are expressed of this result it will be almost a miracle of conciliation. The bitterness between France and Germany has grown so intense as to seem beyond healing. Yet Germany's sufferings from hunger and dislocation of business and France's troubles with finances counsel both nations to take the counsel offered them by their neighbors.

The report fails to satisfy the Germans on one point they maintained strenuously that such a settlement ought to fix the total amount they have to pay. They had said that a debtor can not be expected to do his best to pay an obligation unless he knows what that obligation is.

If the harder he works the more his debt increases his natural tendency is to lie down and do as little as he can. That they say, is the reason why France has not been able to collect more in the past.

Yet the Germans will get a good deal if the French will consent to have their course governed by these suggestions of an international body. Heretofore France was determined to force the Germans to do whatever the French thought right and possible. But the French have found it hard going along that line and it has not produced much cash.

Hard experience should teach both these antagonistic powers, that matters like these should be settled by some impartial tribunal. If the world is ever going to have peace and prosperity, the nations must give up the idea of enforcing their will on each other at the time when men stopped fighting and referred their disputes to courts. The same principle must be adopted for peace between nations.

ACTION IS NEEDED

It is reported Germany will accept the report on the reparations committee presented to the reparations commission by the commission of experts headed by Gen. Charles Dawes.

The reparations commission also has recommended that the allies accept the report, providing the German government will agree to abide by its terms.

We of America, however after observing Europe's actions for the past five years will be inclined to take with a grain of salt anything that any of the European politicians may promise.

What we want is action. Germany and the allies can show their good faith forthwith by making an honest effort to live up to the terms of the report drawn up by eye-headed business men with no axes to grind and with no view in mind except to solve the European mess.

Five years ago, what is being attempted now would have been much easier of accomplishment.

But it wasn't done that way, and a good American should be the last person on earth to cry over spilled milk.

What we are particularly interested in is seeing order brought out of chaos in Europe, and we have an abiding faith in the genius of two fisted Americans like Charles Dawes to do it, if the European politicians and diplomats will forget their age-old hatreds and lay all of their cards on the table.

It's a very good beginning to have Germany and the reparations commission look favorably upon the report of the experts but far more favorable would be immediate steps on the part of all concerned to show by their deeds that they mean what they say.

Judging from the speeches of the congressmen, most of them are aware that an election is coming off this fall.

The super power schemes are all right, but this country can't get along without muscle power also.

SOMETHING NEW IN MOTOR CHASSIS

An originally-designed motor-car chassis just constructed. It is built for a four-wheel drive, four-wheel braking and four-wheel steering. Many advantages are claimed for it. The photograph shows Mr. A. Holle, the inventor, pointing out different parts to Col. Wilfred Ashley, English undersecretary of state for war.

TAKE GOOD CARE OF CAR BATTERYIt Must Be Serviced Properly and Given Attention to Work.

(By ERWIN GREER, President Greer College of Automotive Engineering, Chicago.)

If you want to obtain low cost of battery service on your car you must do three things: You must have a standard battery, you must see that it is serviced properly, and you must give it a certain amount of attention.

If you consider the cost of a battery and the work it has to do, you will readily realize that it needs exactly the care that you give the engine.

There are now on the market more than 100 different makes of storage batteries. (Out of this number a good percentage are virtually worthless when compared with top-notch batteries made by responsible concerns. The worthless ones are sometimes called "back alley" batteries, because they are made in barns, garages and shops that have no recognition. It does not take any particular skill or experience to make such batteries. The plates are purchased from one source, boxes, jars and electrolyte from others, and so the parts are put together and the resultant called a storage battery.

Get "Stuck" Either Way. If the parts were properly made and correlated a good battery could be produced, but such a battery would then have to sell at such a stiff price as compared with the reputable makes that the alley builders could not compete. So the motorist is asked to buy these put together batteries at a low price, sometimes at a high price. It does not matter much about the price, for the motorist gets "stuck" either way.

If you need a battery, buy one made by a reputable firm. That does not necessarily mean a large manufacturer who advertises his wares all over the country, because there are many smaller battery makers who haven't the distribution nor the advertising volume. The battery business is one that must be studied in order to produce a good unit at low cost. This study calls for constant experimental work in every branch of manufacture, and this is something the "back alley" builders do not care to do.

Once you possess a good battery the next thing to do is to give it the care it deserves. All you have to do is to add distilled water once each week in summer and once every two weeks in winter or at such intervals as found necessary to keep the cells filled to level. Aside from this simple procedure see to it that the terminals are clean and tight and the battery as a unit is mounted solidly in place.

Distilled Water Only. Never add anything but distilled water. There are some garages and even battery service stations that will try to sell you some special electrolyte to "revive" the battery. These special solutions should not be used, for while it is perfectly possible to add chemicals temporarily to revive any battery it harms the battery in the end. If the battery is so far gone that it will not take a charge or hold a charge, special electrolyte will give only temporary relief at great cost.

See to it that the generator charging rate is low or high enough to keep the battery up to charge. Some drivers do little continuous driving with the result the battery is undercharged. Others do constant driving and little starting and stopping with the result the battery is usually overcharged. It is difficult to maintain driving conditions, therefore the wise owner occasionally has the battery charged at a service station. If possible go to a reputable station where the shop equipment is adequate and where an honest opinion will be given. The station can make certain tests to determine the condition of the battery and if the station is not honest the owner is told anything at all in order that a new battery sale may be made.

Don'ts for Doers

Don't be sparing with oil anywhere.

Don't use cheap oil—it is costly in the end.

Don't run on a flat tire; it will destroy casing, tire and rim.

Don't keep running when you know your engine is exceedingly hot.

Don't fail to water the battery once a week; the battery is not a full-fledged camel.

Don't be unprepared in the way of tires or tire repair equipment. Don't try to economize by going without a spare tire or tube—it will save time and money in the end to be prepared.

Don't let the brakes drag.

Don't fasten chains too tight or to a spoke.

Automobile Lock Made Simply and Inexpensively

The Scientific American in illustrating and describing an automobile lock, the invention of J. H. Frost of New York, says:

"This invention relates to a simple and inexpensive anti-shift device for motor vehicles, and refers more particularly to a lock which covers the slot of the emergency brake, and which when in operative position contacts with the lever of the brake to retain the same in braking position. The device prevents unauthorized shifting of the brake when locked, but does not prevent the car being pushed, in case of fire."

Open Radiator Outlets
Absolutely Essential

All radiators, says the American Motorist, have an overflow arrangement to accommodate the natural expansion of the water upon being heated during the operation of the motor; frequently they are also equipped with blowholes to allow the escape of steam.

If, through the accumulation of sediment or dirt, these outlets become clogged and don't fulfill their functions, the result is that the internal pressure generated will follow the line of least resistance and force a leak at a point where the radiator is weakest. Therefore, it is absolutely essential that these outlets be open at all times.

AUTOMOBILE PAINTS

The correct mixture in the carburetor is noted when the engine runs without choking, popping or missing in the lowest possible speed or the highest possible speed, or at any speed between these two extremes.

It is possible to make a socket wrench by placing a bolt head of the proper size in one end of a pipe and then forging the pipe to fit it. After the wrench has been made it can be annealed, if desired.

A slow leak in the tire valve plunger can be sometimes checked by applying a drop of oil in the valve system. The oil partly dissolves the rubber, and causes it to annual itself to an airtight joint.

Hats and Scarfs
Go Hand in Hand

Coats, frocks, suits—all have their scarfs this season, sometimes attached, but more often separate and made of sheer materials and contrasting colors. But hats go farther than any of them and not only have scarfs, but scarfs to match them. Plain and printed silks and crepes are used for these scarfs and for trimming the hats that bear them company.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

NOTICE

The Democrats of Boone county will meet in convention at the court house in Burlington next Saturday, May 10th, 1924, at 2 p. m., for the purpose of selecting delegates to the State Convention to be held at Lexington, Ky., May 14th, 1924.

G. W. TOLIN,
Chairman.

The weather last week: The next day it rained, and the next day it rained some more.

Mrs. Ida Baily spent Sunday with Mrs. Fannie Rice and family at their home just south of town.

B. H. Berkshire and Robt. Nixon, of Petersburg, were business visitors to the Hub, last Thursday.

The Governor of Indiana resigned that he might go to the penitentiary. Strange things do happen.

Mrs. F. A. Hall after a week's visit with her children in Newport, returned home last Saturday evening.

Born—To Willis Smith and wife, of near Petersburg, on April 30th, a 8-pound boy. Dr. Yelton was in attendance.

Mercer county expects to send 6,000 trimmed lambs to market this year according to county agent Jno. P. Spencer.

If the old saying, "April showers make May flowers" holds true, there should be an abundance of May flowers this month.

Harvey Senour, one of the hustling young farmers of Grange Hall neighborhood, was a business visitor to Burlington, last Friday.

No business of importance was transacted in the county court Monday. The attendance was small, farmers too busy with their farm work.

The prospect for tobacco plants in Boone county never looked better, and with favorable weather the tobacco growers will soon be transplanting.

Misses Isabelle Duncan and Mary Beas Cropper, who have been teaching in the Rose Hill, Va., Hi School, returned home last week for their summer vacation.

Miss Graham Roberts, after a week's visit with her relatives, W. R. Rogers and sisters, Misses Sallie and Elizabeth, returned to her home at Walton, last Friday.

Attend the County Convention on May 10 and vote for Underwood a Kentuckian. Kentucky produced him, the nation needs him, Underwood for president—Advertisement.

Sixty demonstrations of root-rot to bacco have been arranged by county agent W. R. Gabbert, Fayette-co. These demonstrations will compare root-rot resistant tobacco with local strains.

W. C. Hughes was called to Glendale, Arizona, last Saturday, on account of the serious illness of his father, G. G. Hughes, who went to that place with his nephew, G. W. Sanford and wife, last fall.

At this time of year Mother Earth is beautiful in her robe of spring. The woodlands are dotted with trees in bloom, while the foliage of the forest supplies an ample shade. The wild flowers are blooming sweetly and the voice of the trickling water of the babbling brook, the banks of which are lined with fishermen trying their luck with the finny tribe.

In his first Home Coming proclamation just issued, Governor W. F. Fields calls on the people of the state to devote the entire month of May to cleaning up, painting up, and beautifying their homes and surroundings in every way possible in order to have Kentucky looking its best by the time thousands of visitors arrive for the 1924 Home Coming celebration.

Recovery of the body of Benjamin H. Dierckes, 53 years old, former business man of Covington, Ky., from the Ohio River at Petersburg, Ky., Sunday solved the mystery of Dierckes' disappearance from the home of his son, Edward B. Dierckes, grocer, Ninth street and Central avenue, Newport, Ky., three weeks ago.

The body was identified by means of an identification card, which directed that in case of accident Daniel L. Beegel, son-in-law of Dierckes who conducts a grocery at 1119 Russell street, Covington, be notified.

Dierckes, who was in business for approximately 30 years at Ninth and Philadelphia streets, Covington, disappeared on April 11, and every effort was made by his children to find him. Police of various cities were notified and a description of Dierckes was broadcast by radio in an effort to locate him.

MOTHER'S DAY

We are coming again to the observance of Mother's Day when our thoughts turn more especially to the one whom, of all living human beings, we owe the most—the one whose love is never failing and who never knew too great a sacrifice, when the happiness and welfare of her children are concerned.

Mother's Day is observed on the second Sunday in May, this year falling on the 11th, when everyone who wants to do homage to motherhood will wear a white flower for the mother dear. The carnation is favored over all flowers.

Mother's Day was originated by Miss Anna Jarvis of Philadelphia, who founded the Mother's Day International Association, and the 63d congress passed a resolution fixing the second Sunday in May Mother's Day and making it the duty of the president to proclaim it.

The late President Wilson issued the first Mother's Day proclamation in 1914. States also have given recognition to the day. In 1913 Nebraska designated Mother's Day as a state holiday, in the same year Pennsylvania made Mother's Day a state holiday and since 1912 governors of Texas have pardoned deserving inmates of prisons on Mother's Day.

The original idea of Mother's Day embraced the simultaneous observance in every part of the world of the day as an acknowledgment of the love and reverence all men and women owe to their mothers.

In addition to the wearing of flowers as tribute to their mothers, those whose mother are living, but from whom they are separated, are urged by the promoters of the observance to visit or write them upon Mother's Day.

Though we stress the second Sunday in May as Mother's Day, it really should be every day in the year, for it is a background in every heart. The love felt by a mother for her children and by her children for their service apart. They are proved by service and sacrifice, not by words. They need no special emphasis.

THE FACE OF NATURE

The works of man are not a good substitute for those of God. A man may live in a beautiful house, where handsome and substantial buildings greet him at every turn. Yet nothing in all that dignity and costliness can fully take the place of some simple rural scene in which he was brought up in early youth.

There is a great feeling of unrest in cities, a feeling of struggle and striving, or of difficulties that must be overcome. City life breaks down a multitude of people before their time. One reason for that is that there is a lack of the quiet restfulness that comes in a country scene.

The dweller in a country town may have his full share of perplexities and difficulties. But the beauty of nature is or can be a continual solace and pleasure to him. When his business dealings or his job bother him, there is a sense of relief in rural scenes, in the beauty of fields and streams and growing crops and open skies.

The city people pay heavy traveling expenses just to get brief week-ends and vacations in the beautiful locations that the country man enjoys every day in the year. Any rural scene is a constant panorama of beauty. The succession of flowers, making magic carpets of bloom over slopes and plains, the graceful symmetry of trees standing like God's sentinels over the homes of men, the fascination of color in clouds and sunsets, these are an influence in the lives of most country folks. They may think they do not influence their lives much. Yet the majority of country people would feel homesick without them.

The people who have never learned to love these country scenes have some been putting their hearts to work on wrong aims, and they have not got all of country life that it is capable of giving.

THE WOMEN VOTERS

Addressing the Daughters of the American Revolution a few days ago, President Coolidge urged them to use their influence to preserve and improve the institutions of the country.

The woman who is burdened with her household and care of children, may say she has no time to attend political meetings and study politics. Also the lady who goes in for society and dancing may think that a political speech is mighty dull business compared with dancing or card playing.

But the women who do study politics will find a new world of interest, and learn that the conflicts in the political arena are as thrilling as any novel.

Migration north of negroes from 13 southern states reached a total of 478,700 or nearly 6 per cent of the negro population, during the year ended Sept. 1, 1923 according to returns to the Department of Labor from state, municipal and civic sources.

Forest Protection Week Coming

Senators from states where forest lands abound endorse the proclamation of Forest Protection week April 21-27 by President Coolidge. Photograph shows (left to right) Senators Frank R. Gooling of Idaho, Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas, Senator C. L. McNary of Oregon and Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire exhibiting forest protection posters put out by the United States forest service. Senators Capper and McNary are members of the senate reforestation committee.

HONESTY IN TAXES

Everybody pays taxes.

We may not own a bit of land or a house. We may not have a penny in the bank, or even a War Savings Stamp left over from the war.

But we pay taxes just as surely as if we owned town houses, country homes and broad acres of farm land, stocks and bonds, bank accounts, mills, factories or railroads.

We all have to eat or starve to death. If the owner of the property in which the grocer has his store has to pay higher taxes, the grocer has to pay the grocer higher prices for our food.

We all have to sleep if we want to live. If the person who owns the house where he lives has to pay higher taxes, then we have to pay higher rent, of course.

If the railroads have to pay higher taxes, they have to charge higher rates to haul everything we consume, and naturally, the increase is tacked on to the paying end—that's where the ultimate consumer hooks on.

Out of every eight dollars of our national income, one dollar goes for taxes—federal, state and local. This means that they who whose expenses are eight dollars a week pay one dollar in taxes in the form of prices made higher by taxation.

The same ratio prevails, regardless of the cost of living, though you may not own a dollar's worth of taxable property.

When it comes to dealing with the question of taxes, we need to be more honest with ourselves. We need to understand that we can not continue to load on overhead and not have our pocketbooks feel it.

Governments are like individuals. The only way they can economize is to spend less money. As long as people clamor for legislation to cure this or that fancied evil, just so long will taxes continue to be high and in some cases oppressive.

WAITING FOR THE CONVENTIONS

It is said that many business men now taking a somewhat waiting attitude, postponing their commitments to some extent until the political conventions are out of the way. Then they feel they can make a clear forecast of the financial weather.

People are hesitating from such motives, however, might well consider that nothing the United States will do in a political way is ever likely to produce any prolonged difficulties. There is an undertone of sound sense in our people that holds them back from extremes. Certain advanced philosophers may announce very radical projects, but the mass of the people hold back from such enterprises because they are so vague.

The average man wants something clearly defined before he goes into it. Before leaving, he wants to know what the ground is on which he is going to land. Even when radical people get into office, the necessity of securing the co-operation of the business community holds them back from anything very extreme.

House cleaning is here. Did you know it. Have you moved the furniture, whipped rugs and carpets, re-hung pictures, absorbed a bushel or two of dust, cat on the pantry shelf and go to bed with every bug singing a different tune. This is the day when the mere male is crushed by the hard task of woman tramping.

Big contributions to political parties are looked at with disfavor, but probably anybody could contribute a Lincoln cent without coming under suspicion.

Modern Woodmen.

On account of the repairing of the K. of P. Hall in Burlington, Patriarch Camp held their regular meeting in the Grand Jury room at the Court House last Tuesday night. It may be a couple of weeks before the meetings can be held in the K. of P. Hall on account of the repairs being made.

We are glad to know that Brother Manley Ryle is about well and will soon move to Burlington from Union.

The committee in charge of the funds raised to assist Mr. Wesley Underhill and wife, made his report to Patriarch Camp Tuesday night and the committee was discharged. The sum of $60.00 was given to Mr. and Mrs. Underhill by the members of Patriarch Camp.

Two new members will be adopted as soon as the Hall can be occupied.

There is always a good attendance at every meeting on Tuesday nights of each week, which shows that the members are interested in the Camp and its activities.

We hear that there is prospect of two new camps being formed in the county, at Hebron and Florence.

COUNTRY ROADS MUST BE IMPROVED.

Country roads, leading to State highways, are vital to a complete transportation system. They are quite similar to the blood vessels of a great artery which feed and drain the entire system.

We want cheaper products. We can get them only by developing local as well as long-haul transportation. We want our children to get the best schooling. Why not make communication reasonably easy. We want contact with neighbors and the next town. Why not get it by building instead of sighing for it.

An economically motorized community is a live trading territory with good bank balances, good freight business and good stores. The small town becomes a trading center for a radius of 20 to 50 miles.

The money and time expended on any dirt road in the nation will pay for an improved road in a very few years—and more than pay for itself in time and wear and tear to transportation vehicles.

It is poor economy to pinch pennies and squander dollars. The nation should be compelled to go ahead promptly with the national highway system and states and counties should go ahead with the veins leading to these main arteries.

It is a simple matter of business, and the community that first perfects its local roads is the community that will win in enhanced property valuations.

KEEPING UP WITH MODERN LIFE.

The average country man does not work any harder than his father did, but his wife has more demands made on her. The rather rough looking clothes that would have been considered good enough for herself and children some years ago, are not considered so now. Community spirit calls for church and society work to be done. Also people are expected to fix up their homes and make them look neat and pretty.

How on earth can the woman folks get around all these lines of work, which keep increasing from year to year. The answer is that it is almost impossible to do so, unless they have a fair share of the modern labor saving improvements.

GRIM REAPERS WORK.

BIRKLE.

Joseph M. Birkle, who was sent to the State Hospital at Lakeland from Bullittsville, last December, died at that institution, Thursday, May 1st. His death was caused from a stroke of apoplexy—a few days before.

He was born in Covington on March 2nd, 1856, came to Burlington with his parents when a small boy, where he lived until reaching manhood. After learning the blacksmith trade he worked in different parts of the county. For the last fifteen years operated a shop at Bullittsville.

He is survived by his wife, who was Mrs. Martha Malory, three sons, namely, Charles Birkle, of Burlington, Fred Birkle of Rabbit Hash, and Theodore Birkle, of Bullittsville, and a host of other friends and relatives who sympathize with the widow and children in the loss of a kind and loving husband and father.

The village blacksmith has turned his last shoe, laid down his hammer, hung up his apron, closed the shop door and bid adieu to his loved ones and friends.

After a short funeral service at the home conducted by Rev. J. W. Campbell at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon, the remains were brought to Burlington where members of Bellevue and Hebron I. O. O. F. Lodges conducted their services before a large crowd of sorrowing relatives and friends, after a short prayer by Rev. W. W. Adams, the casket containing the remains were lowered to their last earthly resting place in Odd-Fellows cemetery.

BRADY.

Mrs. Susie Brady, wife of the late R. A. Brady, died April 28th, 1924, at the home of her son, Hubert D. Brady, after an illness of several weeks. She was 73 years and 11 months old.

Mrs. Brady was born and reared in Boone county. Before her marriage she was Miss Susie Duncan, daughter of J. W. and Melvina Gaines Duncan and was born June 1850.

She was united in marriage to R. A. Brady, Jan. 8, 1863, and to this union were born three children, Mrs. Emma Brown, of Covington, H. D. Brady, of near Petersburg, and Mrs. J. M. Lassing, of Burlington.

She united with the Baptist church when young and lived a purely christian life. She had a lovable disposition and a sincere devotion to her children.

After a short service at the residence at 2 o'clock Friday morning, May 2, 1924, conducted by Rev. Bush, the remains were taken to Bellevue and placed in a vault in the cemetery at that place.

Besides her children she is survived by two half brothers, John P. Duncan, of Cincinnati, and Dr. E. W. Duncan, of Walton, besides many other relatives and friends who sympathize with the children in the loss of a loving mother.

RICE.

Benjamin Perry Rice, a former well known citizen of Burlington, died at his home in Covington, on Thursday May 1, 1924, after an illness of several weeks with heart trouble.

Perry Rice was a son of Benj. and Ann Utz Rice. He was born on the farm now owned by Ransom Ryle in Locust Grove neighborhood, sixty-nine years ago.

He was twice married, his first wife was a Miss Rouse, daughter of Granville Rouse and wife, of Union neighborhood. His second wife was a Miss Talbot, of Covington, with a son Grover, by his first wife survive him. Besides his wife and son he is survived by two brothers, M. S. Rice, of Covington, "Dink" Rice, and Mrs. R. S. Cowen, of Burlington.

Burial took place in Highland cemetery at 2 o'clock p. m., Sunday May 3, 1924, in the presence of a large crowd of sorrowing relatives and friends.

FOR BETTER HOMES

Over 1,000 communities have already renewed their intention to observe Better Home Week, commencing May 11. President Coolidge is a member of the national advisory committee and Secretary Hoover is chairman of the board of directors. James Ford, 1653 Penn. Ave., Washington, D. C., is the executive director.

The profoundest influences of early childhood are those of the family circle. The warmest memories of later years center in the home. It is the environment of most of the deepest experiences of human life. The home should always be a fitting symbol of the ideals and aspirations of the family which it shelters.

The home comes in America movement provides a channel through which men and women in each community can encourage building, ornamenting and owning of private homes by the people at large. We need attractive, worthy, permanent homes that lighten the burden of housekeeping. We need homes in which the home life can reach its finest levels, and in which can be reared happy children and sprightly citizens.

JUNE IS SUICIDE MONTH

Sew branches of sociological investigation present a greater number of speculative questions than that dealing with the inexplicable phenomena of suicide. Considering the constantly increasing suicide rate throughout the civilized world, from the viewpoint of vital economy at least, the subject is one of utmost gravity.

Investigations covering 20 years and involving more than 100,000 suicides in Europe and the United States discloses the fact that the tendency to suicide is not during the gloomy depressing months of November and December, but in the bright cheerful month of June. Suicides in almost every nation reach their maximum in June and minimum in December. From the viewpoint of science, therefore, it is absolutely suicide weather.

Suicides in the United States last year numbered 12,949, not including the many suicides concealed.

The latest suicide was ninety-seven, the youngest, six years old. There were twice as many males as females among the suicides. Women are more courageous than men. Their lives are duller than men's lives, and their suffering is greater. But they hang on, many, for the sake of children, enduring what would drive a man out of the world.

THE BACK YARD BACKACHE.

Many people excuse themselves for not planting gardens and beautifying their places with flowers, on the ground that it makes their backache terribly to do these hard manual tasks.

The backache is a very trying ailment, yet the majority of people get it merely because they are unused to those muscular tasks that the human body should be perfectly competent to perform. The farmer who every year has plowed and hoed and reaped, rarely complains of backache.

Man in a primitive state had to exercise his back to till the soil and perform the tasks of a society that had no machinery. Probably not many people complained of backache in those days. But now when three quarters of the people attempt only the lighter forms of physical work, the muscles that are capable of powerful action become weak and flabby. An hour's work on the lawn or garden will make them cry out with fatigue. The only trouble is that the owner of the back does not understand that muscles have to be used to be good for anything.

THE FARMER WHO WORKS

A farmer who works one day and finds away two and is always complaining what hard times the farmers have to make both ends meet, solved the problem how to pay a five hundred dollar note in one of the banks. He drove his flivver up in front of the bank and went in and told the cashier he came in to pay off his five hundred dollar note. He called for a blank note and after figuring a few minutes he called for his note and handed the cashier the note he had filled out including interest and tre up the old note and remarked, "Thank God, that five hundred dollars is paid, and I won't have to be losing sleep over it any longer. If we all could pay our debts that way they would be wiped out in twenty-four hours."

THEY HAVE THE "PICK"

In traveling through the country we notice quite a number of people gathering dandelion bloom. It is claimed that wine made from these blooms make a wine that has a kick like a mule. There is surely a fine crop of these bloom in and around Burlington.

QUITE A NUMBER OF FRIENDS AND RELATIVES GATHER AT HOME OF REV. J. W. CAMPBELL AND WIFE.

Members of Bullittsburg Baptist church and friends to the number of about fifty, with baskets filled with good things to eat gathered at the home of Rev. J. W. Campbell and wife, near Lilewell, last Saturday, to celebrate the anniversary of their marriage. At the noon hour a sumptuous dinner was served, which was greatly enjoyed by all. Bro. Campbell and wife were also presented with $26 in cash. At this meeting a cooking club was organized by the ladies present.

Some people's idea of ambition is to entertain a prejudice against working with their hands.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Cummins visited their son Ira and wife in Covington, last Saturday.

The many friends of Miss Lizzie Aylor are glad to know that she is at home from the hospital.

J. O. Richards and family of Covington, were guests of John Beall and wife, last Sunday afternoon.

A Mr. Shoebottom, of Cincinnati, was in our burg on Friday of last week in the interest of the Baldwin Piano Co.

After spending several months in Covington Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Williams spent the week with Harmon Jones and family.

Nash Zimmerman and Robt. Tanner are dividing the farm they purchased recently by building a long string of wire fence.

Ell Ford, our new neighbor, who is nicely located now on the Herman Jones farm, received word one day last week that his father had died suddenly.

The wet weather of last week was unfavorable for farm work. Some of the farmers will be late getting their crops in as there is considerable land to be plowed yet.

R. E. Tanner is numbered among the sick, and has been confined to his bed about a week, but we are glad to say he is improving and will probably be able to be out in a few days.

OLD KENTUCKY

Boston, Mass., May 4.—Bostonians in every walk of life heard with no little wonder the stirring remarks of Miss Lorna Townsend, former Dorchester girl and now licensed minister in Harlan County, Ky., who said today in emphatic terms that Kentucky is the greatest of all states, not excepting her native state of Massachusetts.

Despite the hardships of tiring horseback rides over the Kentucky mountains, plain fool, long hours of hard, tedious labor with only a few "thrills," Miss Townsend looks forward with eagerness to returning to her beloved people in June.

"I was reared in this city, held a splendid executive position in the big business whirl," said Miss Townsend, "but I learned more of life and the love of living in Kentucky than I ever dreamed of here."

"These Kentuckians are wonderful people. There are none to equal them and the dearest friends I have in the world to-day are among those plain spoken mountaineers."

This is not the season of the year when some men, who never display any energy, have enough to walk several miles to catch a few fish.

If you ask the students what studies they prefer, many of them will say base ball and foot ball.

COMBING UP THE HOME PLACE.

If a man is going to succeed in business or make friends, he usually expects to put in some work on his personal appearance. He could perhaps jump into his clothes and be ready to go down town in about 10 minutes. But he is not satisfied to do that, but feels it necessary to spend time on bathing and shaving and combing, and other incidentals of neatness.

But this same man, who may spend an hour a day on attending to personal neatness, might feel aggrieved if anyone told him he had an hour a day cleaning and combing his home place to make that worthy of association with its neighbors.

Yet it would seem as if a man's home needed some degree of regular attention. Like one's person, if the same is to make a reasonably good appearance and reflect credit on its owner. A house hardly is a real home unless it shows the touch of interest and affection in its exterior finish.

SCRUBS ON THE RUN

IN CAMPBELL COUNTY

The Pure Bred Bull Campaign in Campbell county is obtaining unprecedented cooperation among farmers and business men according to reports received here from county agent H. F. Link. Over 400 persons attended six meetings held during last month where slides, posters, talks and the advantages of purebred and high grade livestock was shown. Business men of Campbell and neighboring counties are backing the campaign, because they believe in the promotion of agriculture as the biggest and basic home industry. A fund of over $500 has been subscribed to support the campaign and to award premiums to the communities replacing the most scrub and grade bulls with purebreds.

When the politicians are called on to take sides, they can't repair their fences simply by sitting on them.

Your House Painted Faster Easier and Better at Less Cost

ECONOMY and satisfaction in painting a house are reckoned, not by the cost of the paint per can, but by the beauty and durability of the finished job, and by the spread. . . the number of square feet a given quantity of paint will cover properly.

Devoe Lead and Zinc House Paint goes farthest, looks best and lasts longest, because it is made from pure white lead, pure white zinc, pure linseed oil, pure turpentine dryer and nothing else.

It will give better results and cost less per job than any other paint you can buy.

Assert your pride of Ownership. A well painted house is the best evidence of a man's prosperity. A comparatively trifling investment in Devoe House Paint will strengthen your standing in the community and add materially to the value of your property.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

On Saturday May 3, 1924, quite a number of the members of Bullittsburg Baptist church with many other neighbors and friends gathered at "The Pines" the home of Rev. and Mrs. John W. Campbell to celebrate the anniversary of their wedding day.

At the noon hour a delightful buffet luncheon was served by the ladies of the menu committee. Just previous to the serving of the lunch there was presented to Rev. and Mrs. Campbell a pyrex baking dish, given by Mrs. Ben Grant, a handsome, hand-made beaded bag, given by Mrs. James T. Gaines and a liberal purse given by the members of the church and friends. These gifts were presented by Mrs. Geo. Kreylich, who made a very unique address, extending congratulations and best wishes and expressing our appreciation of Rev. Campbell and his kind wife, who have lived in our midst for more than eleven years, during which time Rev. Campbell has been the faithful pastor of Bullittsburg church.

After a pleasant afternoon of readings and music, Rev. and Mrs. Campbell each made a short address of appreciation to the friends for their remembrance. Mrs. Campbell read two poems which she had composed in honor of the occasion, after which the guests departed with best wishes for many happy returns of the day. Among those present were:

RED CROSS NEWS.

National Headquarters has already assigned the quota of Christmas bags for soldiers, sailors and Marines on foreign duty. The Washington Division is to make 12,000 bags for men stationed in the Canal Zone. Boone county, which is in the Washington Division, has been given a quota of twenty-five. Last year's quota was ten.

The following is an extract from a first segment in the Canal Zone who received a Christmas bag last year: "I want to express my thanks to the lady who sent the little crumpled bag that I received. It contained just the things that are very hard to get down here in Panama."

DISAGREEMENTS among officials of different Government Departments as to the method of procedure as much to blame for difficulties in prohibition enforcement as anything else. Evidence in most cases is gathered by federal prohibition agents, under the Treasury Department, and the prosecutions are carried on by the Department of Justice. Wherever the assistants to the Attorney General fail to make a case against a bootlegger they blame the Treasury Department for not furnishing the proper evidence. The bootlegging back and forth has come to the attention of Department of Justice officials protesting even against seizures of liquor because they are afraid they would not be able to compare the case charged with violation of the law.

EXPOSURES and scandals in connection with the various investigations of the members of her husband's Cabinet have NOT caused any change in the personal feelings of Mrs. Florence Kling Harding for the men involved. This was indicated when she telegraphed to Columbus, Ohio, on the occasion of Harry Daugherty's home-coming, expressing her friendship and affection for the former Attorney General, who was virtually driven out of the Cabinet because of the attacks upon him.

GOVERNOR'S PINCHOT'S defeat in Pennsylvania for election as a delegate to the Republican National Convention is apparently pleasing to Republicans and Democrats alike. The Republicans who are supporting Coolidge interpret it as an indication of the President's strength and a disposition upon the part of the voters to steer away from those who assault the Administration. The Democrats, however, say that the elimination of men of Pinchot's type from the Republican leadership will make it easier for a Progressive Democratic candidate to win in November. Pinchot himself says that the liquor interests beat him.

GOVERNMENT CLERKS leaving their offices on these warm spring afternoons are likely most any time to come upon a small thin man walking briskly down the street accompanied by two keen-eyed young men, one on either side. It is the President of the United States taking his daily walk. Every afternoon that the press of official business permits, Mr. Coolidge can be found walking down the streets and parks in the vicinity of the White House. He has found horse-back riding too strenuous and has gone back to walking for his exercise.

THREATS OF A continuation of the 68th Congress after the national conventions in June are heard now and then from Administration leaders, but it begins to look like the legislative slate will be swept clean of important matters by June 1, in accordance with the wish of the President. The House, of course, is far ahead of the Senate, but leaders on the upper chamber are cracking the whip and pushing things along at a greater speed. The tax reduction bill is the Senate's chief business, but it will be laid aside occasionally so that other measures may be acted upon.

SECRETARY OF STATE Hughes is being urged on every side for the temporary chairmanship of the Republican National Convention. His New York speech outlining the Republican platform has been so well received that Republican leaders think it would be impossible to find anyone better qualified to make the "keynote speech" at Cleveland. The final decision in the matter will be up to the President, however, and he may conclude that it would be more suitable to pick a keynoter from the middle west. Among the Democrats, Senator Thos. J. Walsh of Montana appears to be the likely selection for temporary chairman of their New York convention.

GENERAL JOHN J. PERSHING plans to retire from public life simultaneously with his retirement from the Army this fall. He has declined to stand as a candidate for the Republican Vice Presidential nomination and intends to devote considerable time to the writing of his memories, which will deal extensively with his part in the world war.

Thirty years of experience in the laboratory of legislation eminently qualifies Oscar W. Underwood to make a great president. Attend the County Convention May 10th and instruct your delegate for him—Advertisement.

A recent proposed bill in a state legislature would have made it unlawful to teach in a public school "any theory or doctrine contrary to the teaching of the Bible." Luckily for teachers, students, legislators, courts and judges, the act failed to become law. For who is wise enough to decide what is "contrary to the teaching of the Bible?"

Doctors of divinity cannot agree. Churches cannot agree. Students cannot agree. The wisest men of all ages have disagreed as to the interpretation of many portions of the Bible. To give to any man, or any set of men, the legal power to say, "this is contrary to the teaching of the Bible, but that is in accord with the teaching of the Bible," is to hamper free thought, and put in the hands of the few, the right to teach the religious beliefs of the many. This nation was founded upon toleration of religious belief. The right to worship God as one pleases is an inherent American right. The man who believes it is against the teaching of the Bible to pick a flower on Sunday has as much a right to his opinion as has the woman who thinks her husband is made to pick and send her flowers into the country on the Lord's day to enjoy his jewels. The man who believes that some of the teachings of modern science are contrary to Biblical revelation has as much right to his opinion as has the scientist who finds no conflict between the Great Book and the "books" of modern science. The man who believes in "God in everything" which his laboratory teaches him.

Through discussion, talk, printed word, teaching, and argument, man struggles through ignorance and darkness to truth and light. What is sunshine for one man is darkness for another, and each believes he is right. The forefathers of this nation decided in their wisdom that, so far as the law was concerned, both are right. Any attempt to take away that liberty of thought, to interpret the Bible or any religious belief, by law, for any one, is an encroachment upon the inalienable rights of American citizens, and should be resisted stoutly by all who have the cause of true religion, true knowledge and true freedom at heart.

NO ONE LIKES A WHINER

Try and look on the right side of life. Don't think because today has been full of pain and disappointments that tomorrow may be a duplicate of it. The world likes to be cheerful. Even a cheerful liar is tolerated.

Everywhere in the world partings are taking place and some one is either starting out in life with high hopes, or else passing out of it with a curse or a prayer on his lips.

For every tear that is shed by some one, there is a smile upon the lips of some one else. While the heart is moving towards the cemetery, a doctor's finger is hurrying to the bedside of a prospective mother. Don't listen to the man who would tell you all his troubles. Tell him you are busy. The pessimist avoids the busy man. Human derelicts naturally drift together on the sea of life.

The things worth while in this world of strife. And the great deeds accomplished by women and men. Oft a mother's love has inspired them. And the good they have done will live again. In the children who come after them. And we, the children, bow our heads. As we think of our mother living or dead.

And a prayer is sent to God above. To preserve the great power of mother love. What it means to live and to see in life. The things worth while in this world of strife. And the great deeds accomplished by women and men. Oft a mother's love has inspired them. And the good they have done will live again. In the children who come after them. And we, the children, bow our heads. As we think of our mother living or dead.

When you have done a thing, even if it was done wrong, don't regret it. Don't review the situation a dozen times a day and wall like some weakling because you made a mistake. All of us make them, but it takes strong men to see that. When you admit it, forget all about it. Crowd the matter out of your life for there are so many other mistakes yet to be made.

How glorious it is to be able to carry a smile upon the face, and a kindly word for every one. How splendid to be able to make others feel joyous by your presence and long for your smiling face. It is like a ray of sunshine in the room when this kind of a fellow comes around.

Talk about sermons! Why people like this can do more actual good in the world than all the sermons combined. Theirs is the religion of Christ, for it is the gospel of doing good to others and making the world better for having lived.

CAN THE CITY MAN MAKE GOOD.

About this time many city people get the idea that they would like to move out into the country and try farming. Many try it and fail. Some others however make good.

The success of such a man seems to depend principally on three points. First, he is willing and able to work. If he is not capable of good muscular effort or unable to hire work done, he would better stay where he is. Second, can he remember the points of good farming if he is told them. It is very easy to get information nowadays on correct farming methods, from Bulletins, demonstration meetings, advice of neighbors, etc. But a man needs a retentive memory to carry all these points in his head. Third, is he observant, and can he see with his own eyes the indications that tell whether crops and animals are making good progress or not. If he has these three essentials, he is fitted for success in rural industry.

MOTHER'S DAY

This whole nation will unite in a tribute to mothers on Sunday May 11th. Flags will be displayed on all public buildings, and a flower of any kind worn in the button hole, or on the breast will serve as an expression of loving memory. But if the "best mother" be alive her happiness may be materially increased by writing a letter, or at least sending an appropriate card.

In all the history of the world mothers have been held in high repute. Poets have sung and great men have honored their mothers always, but the last word has not been said, and never will be expressed, for this ancient and honorable ideal.

Few finer pictures are presented in the Book of Books than those which portray the Mother spirit. Its love and solicitude shine like a halo above the basket hidden in the rushes on the banks of the Nile. Its prayerful guidance instills in the boy Samuel such a consciousness of the presence of God, that the quiet hours of the night are filled with His Voice. Its deep-rooted faith in the power of God reaches out to the prophet Elisha and restores life to a son departed. And in the fine etching of the Epistles, the mother of Timothy is revealed, laying the foundation for a life of power by a careful training in the Scriptures.

Often we under-estimate what mothers do because it is done so quietly. Yet it must be that he who writes the Book of Life makes many entries of mothers' work for the betterment of the world. Her all-conquering love for her children, her implicit faith in God, her patience that is confident of results—these are qualities which we recall with grateful appreciation.

To idealize the motherhood of America by "Mothers' Day" and to recognize the fact that the most sweetly magnificent thing in life is a noble Christian mother is the most beautiful spiritual idea in the world today. No thought could be more beautiful than that which prompts every man, woman and child to pay tribute to these dear ones to whom we owe so much.

Town thru the ages some things survive. Some things forever are kept alive—in the heart and the soul and the mind and will. The mother love is living still. The mother love thru-out the land, Has helped men to live and to understand. What it means to live and to see in life.

The things worth while in this world of strife. And the great deeds accomplished by women and men. Oft a mother's love has inspired them. And the good they have done will live again. In the children who come after them. And we, the children, bow our heads. As we think of our mother living or dead.

And a prayer is sent to God above. To preserve the great power of mother love.

GRADE CROSSING PSYCHOLOGY

When ill, people will spend weeks or months in bed and money for doctors, nurses and medicine, with the hope of saving their life.

But, judging from the number of grade crossing accidents, many of them place their life in imminent peril by dashing across the track in front of a fast-moving train and even into the train rather than spend 10 seconds waiting for the train to pass.

The psychology of this is not easily discernible. It is evident, however, that not grade crossings, but carelessness in effecting a crossing is the seat of trouble.

Many devices have been installed for protection of public at grade crossings, but the most effective safeguard is for drivers of autos to stop and listen.

North Carolina enacted a law requiring autos to stop before crossing and in six months with this law in effect, in spite of increase in registered autos, grade crossing casualties on the principal railway system of that state were reduced 50 per cent fatalities being 4 instead of 9, injuries 11 instead of 22.

If the "stop law" effects such a reduction in North Carolina, how much greater would be the saving of life from passage of a similar law in all states.

Many good bills have been introduced into congress, and rapid progress has been attained in referring them for slumber to the appropriate pigeonholes.

Miss Susan Shedd, niece of Secretary of the Navy William H. Taft, has been appointed director general of Near East Relief orphanages for the Persian area, entering in Tabriz. Her appointment was made by the administrative committee of the relief organization in Persia in recognition of her recent achievement in moving 400 children from Humudun, 400 miles overland to Tabriz. She is a Vassar graduate.

CUTTING SOFT COAL PRODUCTION.

Bituminous coal, comprising the larger part of the nation's third greatest industry, ranking next to agriculture and transportation, began performing a surgical operation upon itself on April 1 with the aim to reduce 30 per cent of its bulk and throw off 2,500 mines too many—and a surplus of 200,000 miners.

After many years of observation and consultation, diagnosticians have agreed that soft coal troubles are due to a toxic and vicious circle wherein over-development by almost a third in excess of the country's need had produced intermittent employment had caused labor unrest and strikes; strikes brought coal famines; coal famines sent speculative prices soaring; speculative prices a cancerous growth of "high cost workings," such as wagon mines, and others which otherwise could not have existed; and the whole inextricably crowded back to overdevelopment.

At Jacksonville, Fla., last February the United States Mine Workers and the Operators agreed to plans proposed by Secretary Hoover to apply the pruning knife. It may hurt, for a time, but will undoubtedly stabilize the industry and result in great benefit not only to the miners and operators but to the consuming public.

COURAGE AND CONVICTION

By THOMAS A. CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

THERE was an unshakable life of depression about Fred when he came home from high school one day during his sophomore year.

"Why this gloom?" I asked sympathetically.

"It's this way," he explained. "Edward and I are on the debate; the subject is woman's suffrage; we have the affirmative, and I'll lose, for Edward refuses to speak against his convictions."

It is a brave man who has the courage of his convictions, who knows where he stands, who has figured out his beliefs and does not hesitate to speak out. There are a good many human "wooden aprons" in the world who turn either side out as may seem most expedient or most profitable; not so Edward. He had his convictions, and he was not afraid to set his foot down even in the face of a growing public sentiment. He was against the modern woman constantly demanding her right and he would not argue otherwise.

There are many who seem to be possessed of feebly struggling convictions, but they lack the courage of expression. If you give voice to a bold or unpopular idea, if you tackle an unpleasant or a difficult situation, they privately pat you on the back or whisper their approval secretly in your ear.

"I'm for you," they say. "I approve what you are saying and doing, but please don't mention my name in connection with the matter. It might prove embarrassing or get me into a nasty situation."

Such a man came to me not long ago. There were immoral and illegal conditions existing in the community, he said, that should be corrected. Certain officials should be exposed, certain property holders warned. It was an unpleasant job which someone ought to do.

"Why not you?" I asked him.

"Oh, it would be too public," he said, "too unpleasant; it would embarrass me. You are used to doing unpleasant things; you don't mind; you are not so sensitive as I am."

I wondered.

It is easy to throw the responsibility for expression of one's opinion upon someone else—the mayor or the minister, the administration or the editor, your roommate, or your wife—and to stand quietly at a safe distance to avoid the bricks that are thrown, but it is not always indicative of courage. It is comparatively easy to rail against existing conditions when one has the crowd with him, when one's friends commend and approve, but it takes real courage to oppose, but it takes real courage to stand firmly for a principle that our most intimate friends are against. All reformers have been men of strong convictions.

I have no doubt that as time goes on Edward may modify if not entirely change his convictions. He may even already have done so, but it strengthens one's faith in humanity to know that there are still boys who have beliefs and who will not be tricked into speaking against them, who have ideals and the courage to stand for them.

HEN EATS THREE POUNDS LIMESTONE EACH YEAR

A hen which lays 300 eggs a year requires over one and one-half lbs. of calcium oxide or nearly three lbs. of calcium carbonate of pure limestone according to bulletin 250 published by the Kentucky Experiment Station, "Calcium Metabolism and the Laying Hen."

It is well known that calcium and phosphorus were of the greatest importance in building the skeleton of growing fowls and that calcium is essential for the formation of egg shells," says the bulletin. "Common experience teaches that calcium in some concentrated form, such as oyster shells or ground limestone must be given to poultry in addition to the ordinary feeds in order to supply the large amount of calcium necessary for maximum egg production and their general welfare."

Strange findings were announced as a result of the research work done by Professor G. L. Buckner, J. H. Hines and Mr. A. M. Peter. The hen is particular about the kind of calcium and phosphate she uses. Calcium in rock phosphate can be utilized by the hen for growth, but not for the formation of the egg shell. The calcium in calcium carbonate is used by the hen for her bones and her eggs. In the absence of sufficient calcium carbonate fewer eggs are produced than where the supply is adequate, and when the supply is short the egg shells become thinner, although the composition of the shells and the edible portion remains the same. Crushed limestone of good quality and crushed oyster shells serve equally well as sources of calcium for laying hens although the preference which hens show for oyster shell may be due to the gloss and shininess of such shells. Shell-less eggs are not caused primarily by a deficiency of calcium.

It does not seem that a large supply of grit is necessary, inasmuch as the hens in the experiment did very well for eight months without any additional grit. The absence of it during the first eight months of confinement of the laying period did not affect the egg production or the physical condition of the hens. Bone growth in the hens which received rock phosphate was greater than in the lot which received oyster shell and limestone.

GOOD HEALTH AND BODY. CLOTHING FOUNDATION.

If you would look your best, or make the most of your clothes the first requirement is a healthy and well-poised body, says Miss Katharine B. Christian, leading specialist of the Kentucky College of Agriculture. With these assets, the specialist says a woman has a wonderful beginning for she stands well, sits well, walks well and carries her chest high.

"The woman who has developed round shoulders, a hollow chest, protruding abdomen and crooked feet has built the poorest foundation possible on which to place her clothing," declares Miss Christian. "These self-inflicted deformities should be corrected early in life by daily physical exercises and by wearing the right type of corset and shoes. Such practices will do much toward reducing the hips, straightening the back and bringing about better posture and general health. Every business woman of today, and the homemaker is truly a business woman, who is competent and educated to do her daily tasks, realizes that her chief assets are her health and happiness."

"To be comfortable she must commence her line of dress from the foundation and her posture, shoes and corsets make the foundation that is right or wrong. Good posture is essential for good health and good looks. To carry the body erect, the head high and to move with an elastic step will gain the applause of discriminating people. The woman who slumps will never appear well, no matter how handsomely gowned. She will be envious of her neighbor who looks well in a gingham frock because her carriage and poise attract rather than the dress she wears. The girl with the slouching figure and hollow chest is unattractive enough when young but when she develops into a misspoken woman with superfluous flesh about abdomen and shoulders, the most skillful artist will be unable to disguise her deformities."

"The stylish woman is always well-poised. This means that she stands well, sits well, and walks well. She carries her chest high and head up. Appropriate and becoming clothing worn by this woman will always give the feeling of comfort, and a consciousness that she has made the most of her good points will give her greater self-confidence."

Plans are being made for a big national celebration, in 1932, of the two hundred anniversary of Geo. Washington's birth. Washington closed his eyes for just as the young American republic was getting on its feet. The population of the country was less than five and a half millions. In his hours of most vivid imagination, he probably never dreamed that the republic which he fathered would ever be more powerful than one of the smaller European countries. Today that republic is more powerful and richer than the whole world was in Washington's lifetime.

One of those Jonahs who spoils the future of many towns is Mr. Al Ways Knocking.

TURN ME OVER

VICIOUS LAW ENFORCEMENT.

Nothing is doing more to discredit prohibition in this country than the violent and improper procedure of men representing the enforcement laws or professing to do so. In several states there has grown up a great and scandalous traffic in fines under the authority of justices of the peace. Men of dubious character, many of them with criminal records, are commissioned as enforcement officers, dragging offenders into court even outside their proper jurisdiction and sharing in the big fines imposed by the justices.

No tears need be shed for genuine offenders against the dry laws. They deserve whatever punishment they get. There have been hundreds of cases, however, of men and women arrested and fined without authority and without legal or moral cause. There have been hundreds of cases, too, of citizens having their houses ransacked, their furniture broken and their families frightened and insulted when there was no liquor in the house and they had never offended against the liquor laws. Instances are on record of raids being made merely for spite. There are many instances of constables or deputies taking liquor discovered in their raids and using it themselves, or sharing it with the justices in whose names they operate.

The most populous county in Ohio is just now upset by a big scandal of this kind. The evil is found in some form or other, in scores of cities throughout the country. If people are to respect the dry laws at all, those laws must be honestly administered, by honest and decent officials.

SOYBEANS SHOW BIG INCREASE IN KENTUCKY

The acreage of soybeans in Central Kentucky will be trebled this year according to Ralph Kenney, crops specialist of the Kentucky College of Agriculture. Fayette county is planting four times last year's acreage. Grant county about three times, Lewis three times and Lincoln two times as much as was ever planted before. Boyle county is planting 500 acres for seed purposes. Soybeans should be planted between May 15 and June 1 according to the specialist and as a general rule Mammoth Yellow gives a larger yield for hay than does any other variety, although it has coarser stems. The past few years show that beans planted with a wheat drill at the rate of one and one-half bushels per acre make a better start and smother the weeds better than any other method used for hay production.

Shallow planting is very advisable. The best results are obtained when the beans are planted from one inch to barely covered with soil. It is a good plan to harrow the field with an ordinary spike tooth section when the plants are from three to 6 inches high. This should be done on the afternoon of a hot, sunny day for the ground will take in light rains better and small weeds, crab grass and foxtail will also be killed. Inoculation is highly advisable and either soil should be used from a last year's bean field at the rate of two gallons to a drill box full of beans or if purchases, inoculation should be applied according to directions.

*COLOSSAL****
"Colossal" is an adjective which is applied to anything remarkable for its great size. The "Colossus" was a famous statue of Apollo, the sun god, which was carved by Chares in 290 B. C. This gigantic statue, 103 feet high, dominated the harbor at Rhodes. The name also was applied to other large statues of antiquity and survives today in the adjective.

BACK TO HONEST GOVERNMENT

WILLIAM GIBBS McADOO

Mass Meeting to be held in this County, Saturday, May 10, at 2:00 P. M.

Mr. McAdoo stands for:

1. Cleaning up Washington.

2. Calling a conference of nations to promote peace.

3. Taking the grip of Wall Street off the Treasury Department and the Federal Reserve System.

4. Repealing the Fordney-McCumber Bill and substituting therefor a tariff which will reduce living cost.

5. Adherence to the policies of Woodrow Wilson in the interest of European peace. This will restore foreign markets for the surplus products of American farmers.

6. Enforcing the Eighteenth Amendment and placing the prohibition forces under Civil Service.

JOSEPH M. BIRKLE

Joseph M. Birkle was born March 2nd, 1856, in Covington, Ky., and died May 2nd, 1924 at Louisville, Ky., aged 68 years and one month.

His early environment of life was spent as an aid to his parents, and while a small boy, served the apprenticeship of the bakery trade, but at the age of 14 years, he made a change of profession and served and finished an expert horse shoer and served his fellowman as long as health would permit.

He was united in holy matrimony June 6th, 1878, to Martha A. Mallory, of Burlington, Ky., to this happy union was born four children: Charles S. Birkle of Burlington, Ky., Fred R. Birkle of Rising Sun, Ind., Theo. F. Birkle of Burlington Ky., and Barbara M. Steffen, who answered our Master's call a few days ago.

Those left to mourn the loss of the departed are the wife, three sons, several grand-children and a host of friends and fraternal brothers.

He united with the Baptist church in the year 1886, and was an active member until the last, praising the Saviour with all his heart.

He joined the I. O. O. F. at McVille, Ky., at the age of 41 years, becoming a bright and zealous worker on that symbolic structure here below, to the end that we all may be the better enabled to eventually enter that spiritual building—that house not made with hands eternal in the heavens.

He organized Viola Lodge, I. O. O. F. at Hebron, Ky., and was active until Our Grand Master of all the Universes called him to rest.

Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for men to dwell together in unity. As the dew of Heaven and as the dew that descend upon the mountains of Zion; for there the Lord commanded the blessings, even life for evermore.

DARKTOWN GLEE CLUB

De "Wildcat," de dapper colored gent what am interested in Politics and what has been informed about de "Coffee Pot Deane Scandal" desires to belong to de "Smelling Committee" (Congressional) and wants to know if de following "ad" found in the Boone County Record will not come under de investigation: "A rat did smell after being dead three months."

De pint dat astonished de "Wildcat" am de word didn't. If de "ad" "a rat that did smell after being dead three months, dere would be sum room for argyment. But when a rat am dead, it am dead, and dat rat can't smell any more den it can see, smell or eat cheese.

I desires to have an extra session of Congress assemble to investigate just sich foolings of de public. Dere has been a terrible stink up at Washington and I hab heard dat de Eagle hab done gone an' quit floppin'—dere where de Smelling Committee am needed argment. Whew! dat smell am coming to las' till after Nov. 4th—den maybe dey buy him (de Eagle) and de Smelling Committee will adjourn. But I jes' states argment I would lak to belong so I could know about de Rat, but in case I am't appointed a membah I'll ar Rustus Rustus Johnson Brown, an' if he ain't too much taken up wid dem gals ob him, I'll sure tell him. An' if he does I'll say next week cause I knows you am interested in dat rat of Massah D. Blythe what can't smell after he done gone and been dead three weeks. Speaking of Rustus, he done gone and got graduated las' week, an' long-side of him Blue Gum Tempy Peruney Pearline, did like wise. Dem darlies all be so stuck up now dey won't want to associate with de res' ob de D. G.

One of our members, Mandy Hawkins (for short) is leabin us and mourns her departure. Dere nebbes was jus' such another as Mandy, and was truly grieve for you Mandy. We writes dis come as a tittin' expression of ouah feelings.

Mandy, Mandy, how we lub you! h sweet lub voice,

Mandy, Mandy, how I lub Youse my choice.

Come back Mandy,

Come back Mandy,

Hurry up ah' get a divorce.

(Mandy hab got a no count husband,

Abraham Lincoln Clay, George Washington and Wilkes Booth Lincoln am sorry day aint old chuf for Mandy.

THOMAS DELPH.

Thomas Delph, one of the county's oldest citizens, died suddenly Tuesday morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. James Feely, near Waterloo. Uncle "Tommy" as he was called by old and young, apparently, had been enjoying good health as he had been fishing on the day before, and it was not until Tuesday morning his daughter heard him groaning in his room where he had layed down to rest, and when she entered the room he gave one or two gasps and died before a physician could be called. He was somewhere in the nineties.

Howard Gagnett says his mother does not improve much.

Thos. Kenyon and family attended services at Pleasant Sunday.

Little Bernice Leah Kenyon is able to be out again after quite a severe sick spell.

Mr. Moyer has improved the appearance of his residence with a coat of paint.

Mrs. Flora Tanner's school closed last Thursday and Saturday she moved back to her home on the hill.

Irvin Hood and family accompanied by his mother-in-law called on his uncle James L. Hood Sunday a week.

The Baccalaureate Sermon for the pupils of the Bellevue High School will be delivered by Rev. J. W. Campbell, Sunday May 11th at 7 p. m., at the Bellevue Baptist church. The commencement exercises will be held in the same church May 13th. The address to the class will be delivered by Rev. Steger, of Covington.

The Germans perhaps feel that they will give a better impression if they accept the Dawes plan in principle, and then refuse to carry it out in detail.

President Coolidge is taking frequent trips down the Potomac, but he should look out not to head up into Salt River.

Next Sunday is Mother's Day.

Quite a lively school election was held in Petersburg, last Saturday, at which about 300 votes were polled.

Many people who find fault with the country churches, could improve them considerably by coming across when the collection plate is passed.

THE GOOD OF ADVERTISING

A young woman asked the question, the other day, "Why do good ideas advertising do, I should think," she went on, "that if all business firms would agree not to advertise, then that element of expense would be saved."

Let us see what would happen. The big result would be that many pushing concerns would not be able to get backing for their enterprises. If such a store saw a chance to buy a big lot of stuff at a reduction, it would not usually be able to work that lot without advertising.

If it advertises that lot at a favorite price, it will draw a big lot of people to the store, but probably from 75 to 90 per cent of these folks would never come near the place to look at that line of stuff, if they were not led to do so by the advertising. Probably under these conditions many firms would refuse to buy such a lot, saying that it would take so long to work them off without advertising that the styles might change and incidental expenses would eat up the profit, and in the end they might have to sacrifice.

Thus a stoppage of advertising would tend to limit the business done by enterprising concerns. Probably there would be twice as many concerns in business as are in trade at this time. Conditions would be unfavorable to building up large volumes of trade.

When a firm reduces its volume of business, it usually costs more to do business per article sold. In a city in which there was no advertising, the business would usually be cut up into a large number of the smaller type of stores, and it would as a rule cost more to do business and prices would be higher. The fact that advertising is so generally used would suggest that it must lower the cost of distribution or the business community would not tolerate it.

CORN VERSUS SORGHUM FOR SILAGE; WHICH?

By Prof. E. S. Good, Chairman of Animal Husbandry, Kentucky College of Agriculture.

The production of milk or beef calls for an abundance of cheap, palatable and nutritious roughage. Roughage of all kinds has been scarce and high priced this year. Hay is now $30 a ton, wheat straw sells for $18 a ton, oats straw is not to be had and pasture scarce. The problem of a cheap roughage was in a large measure solved by the American farmer in the latter part of the nineteenth century by the introduction of the silo.

Of all the crops ensiled, corn and sorghum still stand out prominent in efficiency, succulence, and palatability. The silage of the cornstalk without the grain is much greater than one usually realizes for one-fourth to one-third of the total nutritive value of the corn plant is in the stalk and leaves. If this stalk is fed in the way of stover the butt ends are largely revised and if allowed to stand out and weather much of the nutrients are washed away. It is well proven also that an acre of corn fed in the form of silage is worth from twenty-five to fifty per cent more for milk and beef production than if the acre of corn is fed as matured grain and stover.

There is only one possible disadvantage in the use of silage these days and that is the cost of filling the silo. This can be overcome to some extent by neighbors joining forces in the work.

RECORD ATTENDANCE AT BEEF CATTLE DAY.

Lexington, Ky.—Beef Cattle Day at the Kentucky College of Agriculture this year registered the largest attendance ever brought here for the discussion of beef cattle and feeding. Over 150 feeders and stockmen attended the demonstrations and lectures where the results of feeding steers at Purdue University was given by Dean J. H. Skinner and the results of feeding trials conducted at Kentucky Experiment Station regarding the value of clover and alfalfa hay against silage for finishing the cattle was shown.

The trials this year according to Prof. E. S. Good indicate that alfalfa or clover hay can be substituted for silage during the last part of the finishing period with good results. The lot of ten steers fed silage 110 days and alfalfa hay 51 days made an average daily gain of 1.88 pounds while the lot fed silage straight thru made an average daily gain of 1.77 pounds. As good results were not obtained this year as in previous trials, a condition which may have been caused by the high water content of silage this last season.

"Does you all still refuse to pay me dem two dollars I done loaned you?" de Lawd only knows when.

"Nussah!" dignifiedly replied Bro. Bogus. "I doesn't refuse; I dems refrains."

Julius Caesar was supposed to have performed a historic act when he crossed the Rubicon, but it was not probably any worse than crossing the streets in some crowded cities.

The country merchant may save a little cash by not advertising, but the result is that he frequently sees the motoring crowd going past his store to visit some other town or place.

CALENDARS AND VARIETY

Prof. Charles F. Marvin, chief of the United States Weather Bureau, Washington, D. C., has what he terms an improvement over the Georgian calendar, but some may disagree over its being an improvement.

The new calendar would extend the old one, having thirteen months to the year, four weeks to a month, and the first day of each week being Sunday. An extra day each year would be a national holiday.

Sunday would never be anything but the first, eighth, fifteenth or twenty-second and Monday would always be the second, ninth, sixteenth or twenty-third and so on through the week.

Can you imagine anything more monotonous than to have a calendar that would make it impossible to forget the day of the month?

Can you imagine a calendar that would always make the Fourth of July on Wednesday and Christmas also on Wednesday, and completely remove the date we have set aside for the observance of Memorial Day?

We believe we'll take our Fourth and Christmas on different days of the week, for the sake of variety, and that we like a month now and then with an uneven number of days in it so that it will still be possible for us to be mistaken about a date.

The powers that we may standardize our food, our appetites, our money, our fashions or whatnot, but we ask them kindly to leave our calendar alone.

The new calendar would run to the year 17,600, which would be plenty far enough, but in view of the way the Georgian calendar has weathered these many years, we would like to vote for it—that is, providing some one of our well known magazines conducts a nationwide poll on the subject.

SPRING PLANTING TIME

Burlington is regarded as one of the most beautiful cities to be found any place. The city kept lawns, the artistic shrubbery, rose bushes and all of all, the beautiful shade trees all add to her beauty.

We have these things to which we point with justifiable pride because somebody, many years ago, had the idea that in order to make a community attractive, it should appear thoughtful enough to plant trees along the main streets.

Their sons and daughters, imbued with the same idea, have continued to take pride in their homes and the outside surroundings. They have planted shrubbery, rose bushes and a profusion of other plants which make Burlington distinctive—in a class by itself.

The responsibility rests with those who are now at the helm to carry on. They should never lose sight of the fact that unless some thought is given to the beauty of the premises surrounding their homes, the work of those who have gone before will have been in vain.

Springtime is planting time. Now is the time to keep up the cultivation of that beauty which we all enjoy in the decline of life. Old age comes to all of us, but it can be made more attractive by the exercise of forethought and the expenditure of a little energy while we are still enjoying the heritage of a comparative youth.

SPADING TIME

The incentive of war production and the urge of post-war prices alike having passed, not so much will be heard of the vacant lot gardens this spring. Patriotism and thrift no longer spur us once they did.

Nevertheless, there will be much spading and planting in the next few weeks in soil that, before the war, was given over to weeds. A multitude learned during the vogue of the back-yard garden that the effort is repaid many fold. Not a few who took to gardening making for their country's sake, or for the garden's sake, will sow and pluck again this year for their own sake. It is not only profitable but full of pleasure, health and recreation.

Of course, all do not find joy in the home garden. But the man who loves the felt of the soil and finds philosophy in the miracle of life and growth, quickly becomes an addict. He may not talk so much about it as in recent days of enthusiasm, but will row his hoe in contemplative contentment just the same.

Not all good citizens are home gardeners, but most home gardeners are good citizens. This is no bull.

If there are any dead men senate investigating committees haven't heard of, it is probable the investigators would like to have their last known address, in order to determine whether they ever were offered a job in the cabinet, ever made a campaign contribution or divided any "profits" from the sale of liquor.

The difference in the cost of living, as compared with the days before the war, just about represents the difference between the cost of a golf outfit and a pair of overalls to work in the garden.

School officials of an Indiana county have ruled that teachers with bunched hair will not be employed next fall. But perhaps they will not want to be, if they continue to wear their hair short.

CARBON—IT DEPENDS UPON WHERE IT IS

Carbon in the cylinders of your motor car cause a lot of work and annoyance—but it is almost indispensable to the telephone—and would cause a lot of worry and annoyance were it not in the telephone.

The thousands of minute carbon granules in the telephone transmitter would just about fill a thimble. These granules perform an important function by changing "voice" vibrations into "electrical vibrations" when you speak into your telephone.

When the telephone receiver is off the hook there is a current of electricity flowing through these bits of carbon and they lie in loose contact with each other. As the voice waves strike against a metal disc in the transmitter, this disc alternately presses the granules closer together and releases them.

When the granules are thus pressed together they let more current through and when the pressure is less the current is less.

This agitation produces variable electric voltage current which is a good copy of the rapid waves of the voice. This variable electric current then flows over the wires to the telephone receiver at the other end when the electric waves are transferred back into sound waves by means of apparatus in the receiver.

Warren S. Stone, grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, tersely remarks: "I am sure the wildest exponents of the theory of personal liberty would not agree that one of the engineers I represent should have the right to exercise his personal liberty and take two or three drinks before starting from the terminal with the limited train."

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

The government gives out the figures that 2,000,000 farmers in this country left their farms for the cities and town in the last 12 months. They have in the most cases left the farm because they could not make a living on it. There are at least 4,000,000 more who have made a resolution to do likewise next year if conditions do not prove better on the farm. This immigration to the town and cities is certainly growing very alarmingly. This will create a shortage in farm products, and prices will soar out of the reach of those who buy food stuff. This will in turn bring about another boom in farm lands, and those who stick to the rural districts will reap the benefits. This country is fast filling up with people, and it will not be long until land will be as valuable in the United States as in any of the densely populated countries of the Old World.—Falmouth Outlook.

A delegation from Walton attended a meeting of the Directors of the Burley Tobacco Association, at Lexington, last Wednesday, and presented the claims of Walton for a re-dryer.

It was stated by Director Dawson Chambers, spokesman, that 4,000,000 pounds of tobacco was received at Walton the past season, which had to be shipped to other points to be re-dried and he pointed out the saving that could be effected by re-drying at Walton.

The delegation was composed of Robert Green, president of the Walton Bank & Trust Company; J. L. Reeves, Jess Thornton, Thos. Marshall, Earl Robinson, William Lancaster, John L. Vest, J. Hess Vee, Clarence Menifee, James Elmore and B. W. Franks.

On motion of Director Protzman committees were appointed to investigate the claim of Walton.

A committee representing the Burley Tobacco Growers Cooperative Association has gone to Europe to find a market for the surplus tobacco in the pool. We think that the committee's visit will be fruitful, but the financial condition of almost every country in Europe forbids the purchase of luxuries, such as tobacco. Those countries head bread, and the wheat farmers would stand a better chance to unload than the tobacco grower, if they would extend long time credit. But as Editor Bomar says that nothing less than real spending money will satisfy the tobacco grower.

May 20th should be declared a legal holiday in the White Burley tobacco belt, as the Association has announced that it will cut a $8,500,000 on that date. The farmers, as a rule, are hard up for ready cash, and are waiting with keen anticipation the coming of next Tuesday. It is reported that the farmers of this county will share right well in this mellow-cutting, and we hope this is true.

Messrs. Walter and Carl Eubanks, of Crescent Springs, Kentucky, come were transacting business in Burlington, last Friday. While in town they called at the RECORDER office and renewed the subscription for four of their neighbors and added two new names to our band of joy-riders. We thank Messrs. Eubanks for their kindness, and wish each of these readers continued success.

Last year some people predicted a great slump in the sales of automobiles in this county this year, but from an inspection of the license books at the clerk's office, there is an increase in the number of cars sold and during the first four months of the year. Every day, in every way there is a new car seen on the roads headed toward the court house after license tags.

A man always has nice things said about him when he is resting in a box in front of the pulpit by the side of the preacher, or in the obituary column of his home paper, if his subscription is paid up. But it is said and written after he is beyond the voice of the preacher and out of sight of the paper.

When you see a man on the street with a sleepy look in his eyes, do not think he is spending the midnight oil cultivating his brains or reading the Bible so he will not lose his way along the straight and narrow road. He just had a radio put in and stave up after he gets the old woman and kids to bed to hear the sport news.

Judge Williams of the Franklin Circuit Court has decided that the $750,000 Road Bond Bill is unconstitutional. The question will go to the Court of Appeals for the opinion of that court.

Many alfalfa fields in this county were badly damaged the past winter by frosts. Some entire fields were completely ruined, and have been plowed up for corn or tobacco.

Newton York, after a month spent in the mountains of Kentucky returned home last Friday evening.

PENALIZING BOBBED HAIR

School officials of an Indiana community have decreed that no school teachers with bobbed hair shall be engaged next year.

In a Pennsylvania city, a different course is being pursued—teachers who bob their hair will likewise bob their salary. By the edict of the school board, a raise of $100 will be paid only to those who wear a full head of hair.

According to the best evidence obtainable, there are no restrictions as to the kind of hair worn—it may be real or artificial.

It seems to have resolved itself into a question of respectability. These particular school officials have concluded that children have less respect for teachers with bobbed hair.

It may or may not sound the knell for short hair among the feminine instructors, in these particular communities, the decision of the school authorities notwithstanding. It all depends on the trend of the style in hair dressing.

Not even school boards, though they may sway the destinies of school teachers, are capable of controlling feminine style permanently. They need only to look back into pedagogical history for the answer.

Think of the bangs "rats" bustles, tight corsets, big sleeves, hoopskirts and other horrors that have characterized the teaching profession in the past along with contemporary femininity, and left the awful record in old family albums and ramed photographs of country school rooms.

If long hair comes back, school teachers, in common with all members of the feminine sex who want to be in style, of course, will wear it with a relish. But, unfortunately for school officials who disapprove, it seems to be coming off more rapidly than ever.

From large and small cities and alike come increasing reports of shedding locks. The age-line of sawed-off tresses is advancing with dizzy rapidity. Already some grandmothers have theirs off. The time may not be far away when children may think school teachers who are not bobbed are old-fashioned.

Who knows.

RIGHTING THE COAL INDUSTRY.

The next three years will witness numerous changes in the coal fields of the country, with the closing of many mines presently and the miners thrown out of employment will resort to other work.

This is the admission of the United Mine Workers Journal, official publication of the U. S. Mine Workers of America.

The confession by the Journal says goes to the consumer. Once the coal mining industry is stabilized and placed on a permanent basis, miners will be provided with work the year around and they will not be compelled to demand wages that will enable them to live, though they have employment in the mines only about one-third of the time.

A committee found out some time ago that this was the trouble with the coal mining business—too many mines and too many miners to supply the demand.

Mines have been compelled to close down so as not to accumulate too large a surplus and miners have been thrown out if a job.

The three-year agreement which has been signed will give each coal company an opportunity to know what its production costs will be, and those which can operate and make money will continue operation while others will close.

It looks very much like a victory for the consumer this time.

WETS DIE HARD

The wets are dying hard. Their bill to nullify the Volstead act, and eventually the 18th amendment, is now centered in congress where there are no less than fifty-nine bills pending.

The wets are still hiding behind the smoke screen of light wines and beer. They are hoping against hope that they can gain this entering wedge. By the time the committee, they will still have a card to play.

The new rules of the House provide that if a measure is not favorably reported by a committee, it may be brought upon the floor by petition. Signatures of 150 members are necessary to force a committee to discharge bills.

Wet congressmen admit that they little chance in the House judiciary committee and they are pinning their faith to the new House rule.

In the meantime, drys should be alert, for it's barely possible that wets are not making public all of their battle maneuvers.

The country folks come pretty near being snafus, but they could hardly be expected to know what bargain the merchants have unless the same are advertised.

To Be Finest of Convention Halls

Chicago has long wondered what to do with the old fine arts building of the World's Fair in Jackson park. It is now proposed to convert the beautiful building into the largest and best convention hall in the world at an expenditure of more than $4,000,000. It will seat 25,000 persons and there will be provision for the holding of athletic contests.

AN OLD STORY

I have heard of poor and sad congregations but the saddest preacher I ever knew went from Posey county, Indiana to Pike county, Missouri (where John Hay discovered little breeches and Jim Bidhawe). He was starving to death on donations of catfish, possum and a $100 salary.

Finally he made up his mind to go away. With wet eyes he stood up in the prayer meeting to bid goodbye to his weeping congregation.

"Brothers and sisters," he said, wiping his eyes on his red bandana handkerchief, "I've called you together tonight to say farewell. The Lord has called me to another place."

"I don't think the Lord loves this people much, for none of you seem to die. He doesn't seem to want you, and you don't seem to love each other, for I've never married any of you. And I don't think you love me, for you don't pay me my salary and your donations are mouldy fruits and wormy apples. 'By their fruits ye shall know them.'"

"And now, my dear brothers and sisters, I'm going to a better place. I've been appointed chaplain of the penitentiary at Joliet. 'Where I go ye cannot come; and I go to prepare a place for you.' Amen."

HAS THE RANK AND FILE QUIT WORK.

From the number of young bloods, both male and female who visit over town during the week one would think that the rank and file of the land had about quit hard labor.

It takes hard labor to make a good work horse out of a colt, if he is let gallop about the pasture he soon becomes a worthless animal. So it is with the young folks a little work improves them.

It takes years of hard work to get an education as well as a lot of determination and close application, but when the world is looking for those who are qualified and it is said that qualifications are the best things a young person can start life with.

In every state there are colleges that give summer terms for those who have not quit trying to improve for those who have not given up everything for society.

We wish to say those who are expecting to go out after jobs, that they must have something to cash in on. Ability and efficiency are always in demand.

The fellow who quits is a failure.

HIGH SCHOOL INFLUENCES

High schools in many localities are constituting themselves centers for educational work for the surrounding rural districts. A bulletin from the agricultural department of the University of Wisconsin tells how in one high school they carry on work for the surrounding country, in ways like the following: An annual reception is given for the teachers of the near by schools. An athletic meet for country school pupils is held.

The principal of this high school goes out to the country schools and gives illustrated talks on subjects of public interest. Occasionally parties of teachers and pupils will go out and give evening entertainments in the outlying districts. Activities of this kind must encourage the young people in the back districts to aspire for a better education.

Third party leaders are asserting that their candidate for Vice-President this year is going to be as big a national figure as their presidential nominee. A ticket now quietly being mentioned is LaFollette and Stone, the latter being Warren S. Stone, the able grand chief of the International Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. Mr. Stone is a native of Iowa and was 64 years old last February.

GRIM REAPERS WORK.

EDDINS.

Time rolls on like a mighty river and in its swift course brings many, many changes. Some lives are made happier, some hearts lighter, while on the other hand some are made dark and dreary. To some all is sunshine and no shadows for a while, but we must remember the word of the poet—

There is never a day so sunny,
But a little cloud appears,
There is never a life so happy,
But it has its time for tears.

Another home has again been made sad and lonely by death. On the morning of May 8th, 1924, at 1:30 o'clock, the Death Angel knocked and found admittance at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lennie Lee Eddins and bore to that beautiful beyond, where there is no suffering, pain, nor sorrow, the husband and father who for a number of months had been a sufferer of a complication of diseases.

He battled bravely for life while every effort was put forth for his recovery, but the young body was overpowered and after all a mighty battle swept it away and he closed his eyes forever on this world to open them in a happier one where there is no painful separation, no more sickness and death.

There are sad and sacred times and occasions when all nature seems tinged with sadness, even the sun, whose golden shafts soon drive away the heavy frown, seems by so doing to say "This is life!"

It is but a vapor that appeareth for a little time and then vanisheth away. Such trials as death are hard to bear and we cannot lift the curtain and see why our Master would pluck the husband and father of the home—one so young in years and with such an unclouded future should be taken.

"Jack" Eddins as he was known by his many friends, was a son of J. M. and Lizzie Eddins, and was born on Gunpowder creek, May 6, 1885. He was united in marriage to Lallie Rice daughter of Edward and Ida Rice August 5th 1916 and to this union two children were born.

Besides his wife and two children, he is survived by his father, mother, two brothers and two sisters to mourn his death. Their loss is great for he was a kind, loving husband and father, a patient and indulgent son and brother, always faithful and obedient.

Lennie Eddins was ambitious and industrious, and no young man ever exerted more energy in his work to gain success and a home for his loved ones. But just at the time when he had reached the pinnacle of his ambition he was cut down by cruel death like the grass before the cycle. Life held so much for him of real intrinsic value in this world, that death seems to be very unkind, but whatever men do; whatever they would like to achieve, whether serving in humble station or wielding the scepter of power, all must come at last to the same haven.

He united with the Burlington Baptist church in 1916 and after a short funeral service conducted by the pastor, Rev. W. W. Adams, at the home Saturday morning at 10 o'clock, the remains were laid beneath the sod in Odd-Fellows cemetery in the presence of a large crowd of relatives and friends from far and near who come to give to "Jack" their last testimony of love and esteem.

The pall-bearers were R. E. Berkshire, L. C. Weaver, D. R. Blythe, G. W. Tolin, Albert Pettit and J. J. Kirkpatrick.

PHILLIPS

William H. Phillips, aged about 71 years, one of the county's good citizens and industrious farmers, died at his home on Gunpowder creek, in Carlton precinct, Tuesday, May 6th, 1924, after a few days illness of pneumonia. He was a son of "Billy" Phillips and wife and was born in Burlington, March 1853. His mother died when he was quite young when he was taken into the home of John A. Randall and wife, where he lived until he became of age. After leaving Burlington he located near Rabbit Hash where he lived until taken by death.

He is survived by his wife and three children. After a short funeral service at the home last Thursday morning the remains were conveyed by Undertaker C. S. Chambers to Bellevue, where they were laid to rest in the cemetery at that place.

In the passing of William Phillips his wife has lost a true and faithful husband, and his three little children have lost the guiding hand and support of a loving father. Our sympathy goes out to them in their dark hour of bereavement.

ROUSE.

Mrs. Mary Rouse, widow of Jacob Rouse, died at her home in Monroe City, Mo., last Friday, aged about 79 years. She is survived by four children, three daughters and one son, two brothers, J. M. Barlow, of Burlington, W. H. Barlow, of Pleasant Valley neighborhood, one sister, Mrs. Janie Beeson, of the Hopeful neighborhood.

BURNS.

Clifford, the 17-year old son of Cecil Burns and wife, of Bullittsville neighborhood, was instantly killed last Wednesday evening. The young man had been operating a tractor plow, and when it looked like rain he started for the barn and in trying to pass through a gate the tractor struck one of the gate posts, throwing him off, and it is claimed, that after he struck the ground one of the wheels passed over him, crushing him badly. He lived but a few minutes after the accident happened.

Funeral services were conducted at the Bullittsville Christian church, Saturday afternoon, conducted by Rev. R. H. Carter after which the remains were taken to Petersburg and laid to rest in the cemetery at that place. C. Scott Chambers had charge of the funeral.

GRANT.

Mrs. Lucy Grant, beloved wife of Homer Grant, died suddenly, last Sunday evening, while enroute to her home near Petersburg in an automobile, from a visit to her son Herbert and family near Idlewild. Mr. Grant, his wife together with other relatives had spent a pleasant day with their children and had started home, when about a half mile from the residence, Mrs. Grant complained of being sick.

Mr. Grant stopped the machine and proceeded toward home when she felt better, but had gone but a short distance when Mrs. Grant laid her head on the shoulder of her husband, and she died instantly.

Mrs. Grant was a daughter of the late Geo. W. Terrill and wife. She is survived by her husband and four sons, Raymond, Henry and Carl, prominent citizens of Louisville, and Herbert, who resides on a farm near Idlewild, she is also survived by two brothers, W. R. Terrill, of Erlanger, Geo. W. Terrill, of the North Bend neighborhood, and one sister, Mrs. Lee Early, of Petersburg, besides a host of other relatives and friends, who sympathize with the husband and children, in this their hour of grief and sorrow.

INSTRUCT FOR MCADOO

The Democratic Convention met in the Court House Saturday afternoon and was called to order by G. W. Tolin County Chairman. J. M. Lasing was selected as permanent chairman and N. E. Riddell as Secretary. Resolutions were adopted endorsing the administration of Gov. Fields. Seventeen delegates and alternates were selected to represent the county at the State Convention to be held in Lexington May 14th, 1924. The convention directed the delegates to cast their votes for W. N. Hind of Covington, for Executive Committee. About 100 Democrats from different parts of the county attended the convention which was harmonious. The delegates were instructed to vote as a unit for W. G. McAdoo for President of the United States. The Delegates and Alternates selected are:

EDUCATION FOR FARMERS

Some people used to consider that education made farmers unpractical and unfitted them for their tasks. A bulletin distributed by the Nebraska agricultural experiment station certifies to the contrary.

This bulletin gave figures of the labor income on 400 farms. The labor income where the farmer had had eight grades of schooling or less, was at that time $550 each annually. If the farmer had attended high school, the labor income averaged $727. And if he had attended college it averaged $835. As those figures are about 10 years old, the discrepancy is probably greater now, since education for farm life has become more practical than it was then. It is pretty absurd for a man to compete at anything in the modern world, unless something has been done to develop his brain power.

A roll-top desk doesn't make you a top-notch.

THE GOOD OF ADVERTISING

A young woman asked the question the other day, "What good does advertising do, I should think," she went on, "that if all business firms would agree not to advertise, then that element of expense would be saved."

Let us see what would happen. The big result would be that many pushing concerns would not be able to get backing for their enterprises. If such a store saw a chance to buy a big lot of stuff at a reduction, it would not usually be able to work off that lot without advertising.

If it advertises that lot at a favorite price, it will draw a big lot of people to the store, but probably from 75 to 90 per cent of these folks would never come near the place to look at that line of stuff, if they were not led to do so by the advertising. Probably under these conditions many firms would refuse to buy such a lot, saying that it would take a long time to work them off without advertising and the styles might change and incidental expenses would cut up the profit, and in the end they might have to sacrifice.

Thus a stoppage of advertising would tend to limit the business done by enterprising concerns. Probably there would be twice as many concerns in business as are in trade at this time. Conditions would be unfavorable to building up large volumes of trade.

When a firm reduces its volume of business, it usually costs more to do business per article sold. In a city in which there was no advertising, the business would usually be cut up into a large number of the smaller type of stores, and as a rule cost more to do business and prices would be higher. The fact that advertising is so generally used would suggest that it must lower the cost of distribution or the business community would not tolerate it.

CORN VERSUS SORGHUM FOR SILAGE: WHICH?

By Prof. E. S. Good, Chairman of Animal Husbandry, Kentucky College of Agriculture.

The production of milk or beef calls for an abundance of cheap, palatable and nutritious roughage. Roughage of all kinds has been scarce and high priced this year. Hay is now $30 a ton, wheat straw sells for $18 a ton, and straw is not to be had and pasture scarce. The problem of a cheap roughage was in a large measure solved by the American farmer the latter part of the nineteenth century by the introduction of the silo.

Of all the crops ensiled, corn and sorghum still stand out prominent in efficiency, succulence, and palatability. The value of the cornstalk without the grain is much greater than one usually realizes for one-fourth to one-third of the total nutritive value of the corn plant is in the stalk and leaves. If this stalk is fed in the way of stover the butt ends are largely revised and if allowed to stand out and weather much of the nutrients are washed away. It is well proven also that an acre of corn fed in the form of silage is worth from twenty-five to fifty per cent more for milk and beef production than if the acre of corn is fed as matured grain and stover.

There is only one possible disadvantage in the use of silage these days and that is the cost of filling the silo. This can be overcome to some extent by neighbors joining forces in the work.

RECORD ATTENDANCE AT BEEF CATTLE DAY.

Lexington, Ky.—Beef Cattle Day at the Kentucky College of Agriculture this year registered the largest attendance ever brought here for the discussion of beef cattle and feeding. Over 150 feeders and stockmen attended the demonstrations and lectures where the results of feeding steers at Purdue University was given by Dean J. H. Skinner and the results of feeding trials conducted at Kentucky Experiment Station regarding the value of clover and alfalfa hay against silage for finishing the cattle was shown.

The trials this year according to Prof. E. S. Good indicate that alfalfa or clover hay can be substituted for silage during the last part of the finishing period with good results. The lot of ten steers fed silage 110 days and alfalfa hay 51 days made an average daily gain of 1.88 pounds while the lot fed silage straight through made an average daily gain of 1.77 pounds. As good results were not obtained this year as in previous trials, a condition which may have been caused by the high water content of silage this last season.

"Does you'll still refuse to pay me dem two dollars I done loaned yo' de Lawd only knows when."

"Nuesah!" dignifiedly replied Bro. Bogun, "I doesn't refuse; I dess re-frains."

Julius Caesar was supposed to have performed a historic act when he crossed the Rubicon, but it was not probably any worse than crossing the streets in some crowded cities.

The country merchant may save a little cash by not advertising, but the result is that he frequently sees the motoring crowd going past his store to visit some other town or place.

CALENDARS AND VARIETY

Prof. Charles F. Marvin, chief of the United States Weather Bureau, Washington, D. C., has what he terms an improvement over the Georgian calendar, but some may disagree over its being an improvement.

The new calendar would extend the old one, having thirteen months to the year, four weeks to a month, and the first day of each week being Sunday. An extra day each year would be a national holiday.

Sunday would never be anything but the first, eighth, fifteenth or twenty-second and Monday would always be the second, ninth, sixteenth or twenty-third and so on through the week.

Can you imagine anything more monotonous than to have a calendar that would make it impossible to forget the day of the month?

Can you imagine a calendar that would always make the Fourth of July on Wednesday and Christmas also on Wednesday, and completely remove the date we have set aside for the observance of Memorial Day?

We believe we'll take our Fourth and Christmas on different days of the week, for the sake of variety, and that we like a month now and then with an uneven number of days in it so that it will still be possible for us to be mistaken about a date.

The powers that we may standardize our food, our appetites, our money, our fashions or whatnot, but we ask them kindly to leave our calendar alone.

The new calendar would run to the year 17,600, which would be plenty far enough, but in view of the way the Georgian calendar has weathered these many years, we would like to vote for it—that is, providing some one of our well known magazines conducts a nationwide poll on the subject.

SPRING PLANTING TIME

Burlington is regarded as one of the most beautiful cities to be found any place. The well kept lawns, the artistic shrubbery, and most essential of all, the beautiful shade trees all add to her beauty.

We have these things to which we point with justifiable pride because somebody, many years ago, had the idea that in order to make a community attractive, it should appear thoughtful enough to plant trees along the main streets.

Their sons and daughters, imbued with the same idea, have continued to take pride in their homes and the outside surroundings. They have planted shrubbery, rose bushes and a profusion of other plants which make Burlington distinctive—in a class by itself.

The responsibility rests with those who are now at the helm to carry on. They should never lose sight of the fact that unless some thought is given to the beauty of the premises surrounding their homes, the work of those who have gone before will have been in vain.

Espringtime is planting time. Now is the time to keep up the cultivation of that beauty which we all enjoy in the decline of life. Old age comes to all of us, but it can be made more attractive by the exercise of foresight and the expenditure of a little energy while we are still enjoying the heritage of a comparative youth.

SPADING TIME

The incentive of war production and the urge of post-war prices alike having passed, not so much will be heard of the vacant lot gardens this spring. Patriotism and thrift no longer spur as once they did.

Nevertheless, there will be much spading and planting in the next few weeks in soil that, before the war, was given over to weeds. A multitude learned during the vogue of the back-yard garden that the effort is repaid many fold. Not a few who took to gardening making for their country's sake or for the garden's sake, will sow and pluck again this year for their own sake. It is not only profitable but full of pleasure, health and recreation.

Of course, all do not find joy in the home garden. But the man who loves the feel of the soil and finds philosophy in the miracles of life and growth, quickly becomes an addict. He may not take so much about it as in recent days of enthusiasm, but will reward his hoe in contemplative contentment just the same.

Not all good citizens are home gardeners, but most home gardeners are good citizens. This is no bull.

If there are any dead men senate investigating committees haven't heard of, it is probable the investigators would like to have their last known address. In order to determine whether they ever were offered a job in the cabinet, ever made a campaign contribution or divided any "profits" from the sale of liquor.

The difference in the cost of living, as compared with the days before the war, just about represents the difference between the cost of a golf outfit and a pair of overalls to work in the garden.

School officials of an Indiana county have ruled that teachers with bobbed hair will not be employed next fall. But perhaps they will not want to be, if they continue to wear their hair short.

CARBON—IT DEPENDS UPON WHERE IT IS

Carbon in the cylinders of your motor car cause a lot of work and annoyance—but it is almost indispensable to the telephone—and would cause a lot of worry and annoyance were it not in the telephone.

The thousands of minute carbon granules in the telephone transmitter would just about fill a thimble. These granules perform an important function by changing "voice" vibrations into "electrical vibrations when you speak into your telephone."

When the telephone receiver is off the hook there is a current of electricity flowing through these bits of carbon and they lie in loose contact with each other. As the voice waves strike against a metal disc in the transmitter, this disc alternately presses the granules closer together and releases them.

When the granules are thus pressed together they let more current through and when the pressure is less the current is less.

This agitation produces variable electric voice currents which is a good copy of the rapid waves of the voice. This variable electric current then flows over the wires to the telephone receiver at the other end where the electric waves are transferred back into sound waves by means of apparatus in the receiver.

Warren S. Stone, grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, tersely remarks: "I am sure the wildest exponents of the theory of personal liberty would not agree that one of the engineers I represent should have the right to exercise his personal liberty and take two or three drinks before starting from the terminal with the limited train."

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

The government gives out the figures that 2,000,000 farmers in this country left their farms for the cities and towns in the last 12 months. They have in the most cases left the farm because they could not make a living on it. There are at least 4,000,000 more who have made a resolution to do likewise next year if conditions do not prove better on the farm. This immigration to the town and cities is certainly growing very alarmingly. This will create a shortage in farm products, and prices will soar out of the reach of those who buy food stuff. This will in turn bring about another boom in farm lands, and those who stick to the rural districts will reap the benefits. This country is fast filling up with people, and it will not be long until land will be as valuable in the United States as in any of the densely populated countries of the Old World.—Falmouth Outlook.

A delegation from Walton attended a meeting of the Directors of the Burley Tobacco Association, at Lexington, last Wednesday, and presented the claims of Walton for a re-dryer.

It was stated by Director Dawson Chambers, spokesman, that 4,600,000 pounds of tobacco was received at Walton the past season, which had to be shipped to other points to be re-dried and he pointed out the saving that could be effected by re-drying at Walton.

The delegation was composed of Robert Green, president of the Walton Bank & Trust Company, J. L. Reeves, Jess Thornton, Thos. Marshall, Earl Robinson, William Lancaster, John L. Vest, J. Hess Vest, Clarence Menifee, James Elmore and B. W. Franks.

On motion of Director Protzman committees were appointed to investigate the claim of Walton.

A committee representing the Burley Tobacco Growers Cooperative Association has gone to Europe to find a market for the surplus tobacco in the pool. We think that the committee's visit will be fruitful, but the financial condition of almost every country in Europe forbids the purchase of luxuries, such as tobacco. Those countries need bread, and the wheat farmers would stand a better chance to unload than the tobacco grower. If they would extend long time credit. But as Editor Bomar says that nothing less than real spending money will satisfy the tobacco grower.

May 20th should be declared a legal holiday in the White Burley tobacco belt, as the Association has announced that it will cut a $3,500,000 on that date. The farmers, as a rule, are hard up for ready cash, and are waiting with keen anticipation the coming of next Tuesday. It is reported that the farmers of this county will share right well in this melon-cutting, and we hope this is true.

Messrs. Walter and Carl Eubanks, of Crescent Springs, Kenyon county, were transacting business in Burlington last Friday. While in town they called at the RECORDER office and renewed the subscription for four of their neighbors and added two new names to our band of joy-riders. They thank Messrs. Eubanks for their kindness, and wish each of these readers continued success.

Last year some people predicted a great slump in the sales of automobiles in this county this year, but from an inspection of the license books at the clerk's office, there is an increase in the number of cars sold and during the first four months of the year. Every day, in every way there is a new car seen on the roads headed toward the court house after license tags.

A man always has nice things said about him when he is resting in a box in front of the pulpit by the side of the preacher, or in the obituary column of his home paper, if his subscription is paid up. But it is said and written after he is beyond the voice of the preacher and out of sight of the paper.

When you see a man on the street with a sleepy look in his eyes, do not think he is spending the midnight oil cultivating his brains or reading the Bible so he will not lose his way along the straight and narrow road. He just had a radio put in and staves up after he gets the old woman and kids to bed to hear the sport news.

Judge Williams of the Franklin Circuit Court has decided that the $750,000 Road Bond Bill is unconstitutional. The question will go to the Court of Appeals for the opinion of that court.

Many alfalfa fields in this county were badly damaged the past winter by frosts. Some entire fields were completely ruined, and have been plowed up for corn or tobacco.

Newton York, after a month spent in the mountains of Kentucky returned home last Friday evening.

PENALIZING BOBBED HAIR

School officials of an Indiana community have decreed that no school teachers with bobbed hair shall be engaged next year.

In a Pennsylvania city, a different course is being pursued—teachers who bob their hair will likewise bob their salary. By the edict of the school board, a raise if $100 will be paid only to those who wear a full head of hair.

According to the best evidence obtainable, there are no restrictions as to the kind of hair worn—it may be real or artificial.

It seems to have resolved itself into a question of respectability. These particular school officials have concluded that children have less respect for teachers with bobbed hair.

It may or may not sound the knell for short hair among the female instructors, in these particular communities, the decision of the school authorities notwithstanding. It all depends on the trend of the style in hair dressing.

Not even school boards, though they may away the destinies of school teachers, are capable of controlling feminine styles permanently. They need only to look back into pedagogic history for the answer.

Think of the bangs "rats" bustles, tight corsets, big sleeves, hoopskirts and other horrors that have characterized the teaching profession in the past along with contemporary femininity, and let the awful record in old family albums and ramed photographs of country school rooms.

If fing hair comes back, school teachers, in common with all members of the feminine sex who want to be in style, of course, will wear it with a relish. But, unfortunately for school officials who disapprove, hair seems to be coming off more rapidly than ever.

From large and small cities and alike come increasing reports of shedding locks. The evolution of new styles is advancing with dizzy rapidity. Already some grandmothers have their hair cut. The time may not be far away when children may think school teachers who are not bobbed are old-fashioned.

Who knows.

RIGHTING THE COAL INDUSTRY.
The next three years will witness numerous changes in the coal fields of the country, with the closing of many mines permanently, and the miners thrown out of employment will resort to other work.

This is the admission of the United Mine Workers Journal, official publication of the U. S. Mine Workers of America.

The confession by the Journal sounds good to the consumer. Once the coal mining industry is stabilized and placed on a permanent basis, miners will be provided with work the year around and they will not be compelled to demand wages that will enable them to live, though they have employment in the mines only about one-third of the time.

A committee found out some time ago that this was the trouble with the coal mining business—too many mines and too many miners to supply the demand.

Mines have been compelled to close down so as not to accumulate too large a surplus and miners have been thrown out if a job.

The three-year agreement which has been signed will give each coal company an opportunity to know what its production costs will be, and those which can operate and make money will continue operation while others will close.

It looks very much like a victory for the consumer this time.

WETS DIE HARD.
The wets are dying hard.

Their efforts to nullify the Volstead act, and eventually the 18th amendment, is now centered in congress where there are no less than fifty-nine bills pending.

The wets are still hiding behind the smoke screen of light wines and beer. They are hoping against hope that they can gain this entering wedge. The problem confronting them is to be able to delude enough people into believing that light wines and beer would be an improvement over the present "bone dry" law.

Beer advocates claim that they have not placed all their eggs in one basket, so that if all of their fifty-nine bills are unfavorably reported by congressional committees, they will still have a card to play.

The new rules of the House provide that if a measure is not favorably reported by a committee, it may be brought upon the floor by petition. Signatures of 150 members are necessary to force a committee to discharge bills.

We congressmen admit that they have little chance in the House judiciary committee and they are pinning their faith to the new House rule.

In the meantime, drys should be alert, for it's barely possible that wets are not making public all of their battle maneuvers.

The country folks come pretty near being mind readers, but they could hardly be expected to know what bargain the merchants have unless the same are advertised.

To Be Finest of Convention Halls

Chicago has long wondered what to do with the old fine arts building of the World's Fair, in Jackson park. It is now proposed to convert the beautiful building into the largest and best convention hall in the world at an expenditure of more than $4,000,000. It will seat 25,000 persons and there will be provision for the holding of athletic contests.

AN OLD STORY

I have heard of poor and sad congregations but the saddest preacher I ever knew went from Poy county, Indiana to Pike county, Missouri (where John Hay discovered little breeches and Jim Bidhawe). He was starving to death on donations of catfish, possum and a $100 salary.

Finally he made up his mind to go away. With wet eyes he stood up in the prayer meeting to bid goodbye to his weeping congregation.

"Brothers and sisters," he said, wiping his eyes on his red bandana handkerchief, "I've called you together tonight to say farewell. The Lord has called me to another place."

"I don't think the Lord loves this people much, for none of you seem to die. He doesn't seem to want you, and you don't seem to love each other, for I've never married any of you. And I don't think you love me, for you don't pay me my salary and your donations are mouldy fruits and wormy apples. By their fruits ye shall know them."

"And now, my dear brothers and sisters, I'm going to a better place. I've been appointed chaplain of the penitentiary at Joliet. Where I go ye cannot come. And I go to prepare a place for you." Amen.

HAS THE RANK AND FILE QUIT WORK.

From the number of young bloods both male and female who visit our town during the week one would think that the rank and file of the land had about quit hard labor.

It takes hard labor to make a good work horse out of a colt, if he is let gallop about the pasture he soon becomes a worthless animal. So it is with the young folks a little work improves them.

It takes years of hard work to get an education as well as a lot of determination and close application, but when the world is looking for those who are qualified and it's said that qualifications are the best things a young person can start life with.

In every state there are colleges that give summer terms for those who have not quit trying to improve for those who have not given up everything for society.

We wish to say those who are expecting to go out after jobs, that they must have something to cash in on. Ability and efficiency are always in demand.

The fellow who quits is a failure.

HIGH SCHOOL INFLUENCES

High schools in many localities are constituting themselves centers for educational work for the surrounding rural districts. A bulletin from the agricultural department of the University of Wisconsin tells how in one high school they carry on work for the surrounding country, in ways like the following: An annual reception is given for the teachers of the near by schools. An athletic meet for country school pupils is held.

The principal of this high school goes out to the country schools and gives illustrated talks on subjects of public interest. Occasionally parties of teachers and pupils will go out and give evening entertainments in the outlying districts. Activities of this kind must encourage the young people in the rural districts to aspire for a better education.

Third party leaders are asserting that their candidate for Vice-President this year is going to be as big a national figure as their presidential nominee. A ticket now quietly being mentioned is LaFollette and Stone, the latter being Warren S. Stone, the able grand chief of the International Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. Mr. Stone is a native of Iowa and was 64 years old last February.

GRIM REAPERS WORK.

EDDINS.

Time rolls on like a mighty river and in its swift course brings many, many changes. Some lives are made happier, some hearts lighter, while on the other hand some are made dark and dreary. To some all is sunshine and no shadows for a while, but we must remember the word of the poet—

There is never a day so sunny,
But a little cloud appears,
There is never a life so happy,
But it has its time for tears.

Another home has again been made sad and lonely by death. On the morning of May 8th, 1924, at 1:30 o'clock, the Death Angel knocked and found admittance at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lennie Lee Eddins and bore to that beautiful beyond where there is no suffering, pain, nor sorrow, the husband and father who for a number of months had been a sufferer of a complication of diseases.

He battled bravely for life while every effort was put forth for his recovery, but the young body was overpowered and after all a mighty billow swept it away and he closed his eyes forever on this world to open them in a happier one where there is no painful separation, no more sickness and death.

There are sad and sacred times and occasions when all nature seems tinged with sadness, even the sun, whose golden shafts soon drive away the heavy fogs, seems by so doing to say "what a pity!" It is but a vapor that appears for a little time and then vanishes away. Such trials as death are hard to bear and we cannot lift the curtain and see why our Master would pluck the husband and father of the home—one so young in years and with such an unclouded future should be taken.

"Jack" Eddins as he was known by his many friends, was a son of J. M. and Lizzie Eddins, and was born on Gunpowder creek, May 6, 1885. He was united in marriage to Lallie Rice daughter of Edward and Ida Rice August 5th 1916 and to this union two children were born. Besides his wife and two children, he is survived by his father, mother, two brothers and two sisters to mourn his death. Their loss is great for he was a kind, loving husband and father, a patient and indulgent son and brother, always faithful and obedient.

Lennie Eddins was ambitious and industrious, and no young man ever exerted more energy in his work to gain success and a home for his loved ones. But just at the time when he had reached the pinnacle of his ambition he was cut down by cruel death like the grass before the scythe of death. He left behind him a wife and two children, but whatever men do; whatever they would like to achieve, whether serving in humble station or wielding the scepter of power, all must come at last to the same haven.

He united with the Burlington Baptist church, and after a short funeral service conducted by the pastor, Rev. W. W. Adams, at the home Saturday morning at 10 o'clock, the remains were laid beneath the sod in Odd-Fellows cemetery in the presence of a large crowd of relatives and friends from far and near who came to give to "Jack" their last testimony of love and esteem.

The pall-bearers were R. E. Berkshire, L. C. Weaver, D. R. Blythe, G. W. Tolin, Albert Pettit and J. J. Kirkpatrick.

PHILLIPS

William H. Phillips, aged about 71 years, one of the county's good citizens and an industrious farmer, died at his home on Gunpowder creek, in Carlton precinct, Tuesday, May 6th, 1924, after a few days illness of pneumonia. He was a son of "Billy" Phillips and wife and was born in Burlington, March 1853. His mother died when he was quite young when he was taken into the home of John A. Kiddell and wife, where he lived until he became of age. After leaving Burlington he located near Rabbit Hash where he lived until taken by death.

He is survived by his wife and three children. After a short funeral service at the home last Thursday morning the remains were conveyed by Undertaker C. S. Chambers to Bellevue, where they were laid to rest in the cemetery at that place.

In the passing of William Phillips his wife has lost a true and faithful husband, and his three little children have lost the guiding hand and support of a doting father. Our sympathy goes out to them in their dark hour of bereavement.

ROUSE.

Mrs. Mary Rouse, widow of Jacob Rouse, died at her home in Monroe City, Mo., last Friday, aged about 79 years. She is survived by four children, three daughters and one son, two brothers, J. M. Barlow, of Burlington, W. H. Barlow, of Pleasant Valley neighborhood, one sister, Mrs. Jane Beeson, of the Hopeful neighborhood.

BURNS.

Clifford, the 17-year old son of Cecil Burns and wife, of Bullittsville neighborhood, was instantly killed last Wednesday evening. The young man had been operating a tractor plow, and when it looked like rain he started for the barn and in trying to pass through a gate the tractor struck one of the gate posts, throwing him off, and it is claimed that after he struck the ground one of the wheels passed over him, crushing him badly. He lived but a few minutes after the accident happened.

Funeral services were conducted at the Bullittsville Christian church, Saturday afternoon, conducted by Rev. R. H. Carter after which the remains were taken to Petersburg and laid to rest in the cemetery at that place. C. Scott Chambers had charge of the funeral.

GRANT.

Mrs. Lucy Grant, beloved wife of Homer Grant, died suddenly, last Sunday evening, while enroute to her home near Petersburg in an automobile, from a visit to her son Herbert and family near Idlewild. Mr. Grant, his wife together with other relatives had spent a pleasant day with their children and had started home, when about a half mile from the residence, Mrs. Grant complained of being sick.

Mr. Grant stopped the machine and proceeded toward home where she felt better, but had gone but a short distance when Mrs. Grant laid her head on the shoulder of her husband, and she died instantly.

Mrs. Grant was a daughter of the late Geo. W. Terrill and wife. She is survived by her husband and four sons, Raymond, Henry and Carl, prominent citizens of Louisville, and Herbert, who resides on a farm near Idlewild, she is also survived by two brothers, W. R. Terrill, of Erlanger, Geo. W. Terrill, of the North Bend neighborhood, and one sister, Mrs. Lee Early, of Petersburg, besides a host of other relatives and friends, who sympathize with the husband and children, in this their hour of grief and sorrow.

INSTRUCT FOR MCADOO

The Democratic Convention met in the Court House Saturday afternoon and called to order by G. W. Tolin County Chairman. J. M. Leasing was selected as permanent chairman and N. E. Riddell as Secretary. Resolutions were adopted endorsing the administration of Gov. Fields. Seventeen delegates and alternates were selected to represent the county at the State Convention to be held in Lexington May 14th, 1924. The convention directed the delegates to cast their votes for W. N. Hind of Covington, for Executive Committee. About 100 Democrats from different parts of the county attended the convention which was harmonious. The delegates were instructed to vote as a unit for W. G. McAdoo for President of the United States. The Delegates and Alternates selected are:

EDUCATION FOR FARMERS

Some people used to consider that education made farmers unpractical and unfitted them for their tasks. A bulletin distributed by the Nebraska agricultural experiment station certifies to the contrary.

This bulletin gave figures of the labor income on 409 farms. The labor income where the farmer had eight grades of schooling or less, was at that time $550 each annually. If the farmer had attended high school, the labor income averaged $727. And if he had attended college, it averaged $835. As those figures are about 10 years old, the discrepancy is probably greater now, since education for farm life has become more practical than it was then. It is pretty absurd for a man to compete at anything in the modern world, unless something has been done to develop his brain power.

A roll-top desk doesn't make you a top-notch.

W. H. Bagby and Mrs. Celia Napier of Banklick were quietly married last Thursday. Congratulations.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank McCoy entertained Sunday Mr. and Mrs. B. I. Bristow and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Fagin and children.

Miss Lucy Schaeffer of this place and Mr. Brice Scheffle of Nicholson pike were quietly married Saturday afternoon by Rev. H. C. Runyan at Latonia. Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Schaeffer entertained with a reception Saturday evening.

Beech Grove school closed May 6, after a very successful term taught by Miss Hattie Riley. Miss Hattie entertained the children with a most enjoyable fishing party and picnic lunch. We feel that we are most fortunate to have Miss Hattie for our teacher.

An auto ran off the bridge on the Bristow pike near the home of V. F. Marquis Saturday evening. The occupants of the car, Mrs. Wilbey Myers and daughter were unhurt. This road is being used as a detour from Covington, as the Madison pike below Independence is torn up and many people are unfamiliar with the detour.

Our community was sadly shocked by the sudden death Saturday at midnight of Mrs. Wm. Weber at her home here. Mrs. Weber's death was due to paralysis of the brain, and she was ill but about an hour, although she had not had very good health for quite a while. Her death comes as a blow to her husband, relatives and many friends who can hardly realize her passing. Mrs. Weber was a most lovable person and her good deeds will live ever as a monument to her memory. To the family we extend our heartfelt sympathy.

PETERSBURG.

The teachers of our school have all been employed for another year. Last Sunday being Mother's Day many flowers were worn in memory of mother.

Rev. Chastain left Tuesday morning for Atlanta, Ga., to attend the Baptist Convention.

Rev. Chastain and family are now enjoying their new home, having moved into the Baptist parsonage.

Cage Stephens of Lawrenceburg, spent a few days at this place last week with his mother and sister.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry of Oklahoma, spent a few days with their children at this place. Rev. Chastain and wife.

Your scribe spent one day last week with her daughters in Lawrenceburg, Mrs. Ruth and Mrs. Penock.

Captain Alden and wife had for their guests last Sunday their nephew and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Caldwell of Cincinnati.

Our little village was made sad on Sunday afternoon when the news reached here that Mrs. Homer Grant had passed away.

The Death Angel has again visited our community and called from our midst Mrs. Mary Ann Barker, wife of Wesson W. Barker. She was born near Pleasant, Ind., Switzerland co., Oct. 18th 1856 and died May 8th 1924, at her home in Petersburg after a lingering illness of about three months.

The funeral was held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Baptist church in Rising Sun, Ind., by Rev. Lowe of that place and Rev. C. C. Tanner, of Petersburg, after which she was laid to rest in the Rising Sun cemetery.

"One by one they cross the river and we are reminded that today we are in the midst of life; tomorrow we are in death." Mrs. Barker was loved by all who knew her and expressed her readiness to meet her Creator if it was His will for her to go.

CARD OF THANKS

We desire to thank all who have been so kind and helpful to us by their deeds of love, during the illness and death of our deceased wife and sister. Especially do we thank Dr. Strelle for his medical attention, Mr. Strelle for the way he conducted the funeral and Rev. Lowe for his kind consoling words.

Bereaved Husband and Sisters

John W. Langley, Pikeville, Ky., for 18 years Representative of the Tenth District of Kentucky in Congress, was adjudged to be guilty by a jury in the Federal court in Covington, Monday night of conspiracy to sell whisky and to transport whisky by truck in violation of internal revenue laws. As a result of the verdict Congressman Langley faces a maximum penalty of two years' imprisonment and fines of $10,000 on each of two counts. It is within the discretion of the court to impose jail sentences instead of prison terms.

OUR LANGUAGE

Contrary to the popular view, the dictionaries are not made for us but by us.

The managing editor of a well-known dictionary explains that the dictionary-maker's job like that of the housekeeper—never ending.

"From morning sunrise to the dawn of the next day, words pour in upon him," this dictionary editor says, "and have to be identified, sorted, dusted and classified, just exactly the same as plates and dishes on a shelf or other knickknacks of a dictionary, something that bears the badge of authority—never something that originated with those whom it is expected to benefit.

But when we consider the origin of some of the most recent words now in use, we find that the dictionary-maker tells us something that we already knew.

The late president Harding did not go to the dictionary for "normalcy." It was a word of his own making and it was so expressive and so useful that popular usage soon fixed it in the minds of the people as a standard word.

When Grover Cleveland dug up "desuetude," using "innocuous" in front of it he startled the prim-minded students. "Desuetude" had been sleeping for years, but it suddenly took on new life after the president of the United States dignified it by using it.

So new words are born over night and old ones are given the spark of life through usage by men in public life.

It is natural that our language should change and that our speech should move constantly. It would be unnatural for a language to remain static and unchanging.

We need expressive words and the constant searching for them by alert minds is certain to be productive of a flexible language that will suit our ever-changing needs.

TSE SATISFACTIONS OF WORK.

The happiest people are those who get their satisfactions out of their daily work. If they can get that point of view, they have acquired a form of pleasure that will never pall in their taste.

There are millions of people whose only idea of pleasure is to spend some money on some form of entertainment. Thus they develop a lack of resources for self amusement.

The man who stands up to a machine in a big factory, and does just the same thing all day with that mechanical contrivance, without exercising special skill and getting superior results by superior ability, with difficulty find pleasure in his work. The same thing is true of much of the routine clerical work of the big city industries.

But the tasks of country life call for more originality. They are a kind of game. The farmer can look at himself as playing a game against the forces of nature, and it is a source of unceasing joy to him to feel that as a result of his skill and experience, he is able to win that game to some degree.

Almost every country town job gives scope for initiative and ingenuity, and the person who puts his brains into his work can always see that he accomplishes results and can feel a sense of elation in overcoming difficulties. The housewife can have the same feeling, as she produces her results in carrying on a home according to modern ideas.

Every country task can be made into a line art, in which the thoughtful person can feel a sense of triumph and achievement that shall be a constant joy. Many country people have achieved this point of view. Every time they look at their hand, some animals, or their thrifty garden, or their nicely kept and improved home, they feel a sense of pleasure far more thrilling than could be given by mere sport.

THE COUNTRY IS DANCING

It is an interesting reflection of modern life, that 10,000,000 people in rural communities are estimated to be learning the latest dance steps by radio. This may make a change in country life. Dancing may be more popular at the crossroads than ever before. Many old timers who had supposed their dancing days were over, are quite likely to "shake a leg."

There are still some folks who disapprove of dancing. Any pastime can be made harmful by loose-minded people. If the good country folks will run dancing parties in a wholesome way, the farmer's boy who has been itching for the white lights may conclude that the old home town is not such a bad burg after all.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR
MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESS.

Encouraged by the great success of American Education Week last year, the Bureau of Education of the Department of the Interior, in connection with the American Legion and the National Association, will promote a fifth National week for education in 1924. American Education Week will be observed during the week preceding Thanksgiving—November 17 to 23, inclusive.

There are certain phases of education which it is generally agreed, require emphasis from a National standpoint. Among these are Americanization; patriotism; better trained and better paid teachers; improvement of rural schools; more adequately equipped buildings; eradication of illiteracy; and physical education and hygiene. In order to give these phases of education prominence in the observance of American Education Week it has been agreed to designate certain days in the week for calling particular attention to them. Monday, November 17, will be American Constitution Day; Tuesday, November 18, Patriotism Day; Wednesday, November 19, School and Teacher Day; Thursday, November 20, Literacy Day; Friday, November 21, Physical Education Day; Saturday, November 22, Community Day; Sunday, November 23, God and Country Day.

It is hoped that this year the press, the church, the national organizations of all descriptions, women's clubs, men's clubs, the motion picture producers, distributors and exhibitors, and the public generally, will join in making American Education Week the success it should be. This campaign should reach every American home and every American life. The schools are the bulwark of American democracy, and it behooves every friend of America to only to see that the future of America is not imperiled by any weakening of our schools, but also to strengthen and extend our educational system so that every boy and girl in America may have the opportunity for that kind and degree of education that will best fit him or her for life and for the duties and responsibilities of citizenship in our Republic.

THE CONSTITUTION

The national oratorical contest for high schools and secondary schools, which is being held in all parts of the United States, beginning with county contests and progressing into district, territorial, state and zone contests, the final winner is eventually selected in a final event in Washington, is proving of value not alone to the contestants, who are limited to a discussion of the constitution, but to those who have had an opportunity of hearing the orations.

Anything that arouses interest in or a desire to study the constitution of the United States is commendable.

The entrants in the contest, in preparing their orations, no doubt had some difficulty in interpreting the basic law of the land.

They found that the constitution provides for three branches of government—legislative, judicial and executive. The authority of each is clearly defined.

But if they have been following the news from Washington, they probably concluded that the three branches of government are not investigative, judicial and executive.

They doubtless recalled that one school of thought advocates a law which will give congress authority to pass legislation even though it is declared unconstitutional by the U. S. supreme court.

The youthful orators were probably very much confused trying to square up the terms of the constitution with the terms of affairs in the present day.

But they expounded the constitution, its glories, its success in piloting a republic through dangerous waters nearly a century and a half, and its value as an ever-present, dependable friend in perilous times.

The young students will have performed a very valuable service if they influence any considerable number of people to study the constitution and to come to some appreciation of the part it has had in making this the greatest nation in the world.

CARD OF THANKS

We desire to express our sincere thanks to the friends, neighbors and relatives who lent us their assistance, extended to us their sympathy and helpfulness during the great hour of our bereavement, when our husband and father passed to his final reward. We wish to extend thanks to the ministers, Odd-Fellows and to all others who were a comfort to us in our time of need.

Frank Thomas, the oldest man ever executed in Kentucky, before going to the electric chair last Friday, wrote the following, "Advice to the World":

"As I have but a few more hours on this earth, and sitting in the death cell at Eddyville penitentiary I wish to give the following advice to the world:

"I came from one of the best families in the State of Kentucky. Young people, keep out of bad company and obey your mother and father, and go to church and work for Jesus. For, if we all would, we would have no need for penitentiaries and electric chairs.

"Mother, teach your children and see what kind of company they keep. And see that they go to church instead of going to roadhouses, and other places of sin. The devil, with his cunning smiles, tells them to come and let's have a good time.

President Coolidge says we as a people have lost our ideals, which is something that can't be found by inserting an ad. in the classified columns of the newspaper.

MATCHES AND DEFECTIVE FLUES

The National Board of Fire Underwriters has recently shown actual destruction of $405,232,801 property in 1923, and estimated unreported and uninsured losses at $100,000,000 in addition.

The carelessness of smokers stands first among the causes of this terrific loss and wicked waste. The second mischief maker was the defective chimney or flue.

It is certain that there can be no excuse for carelessness on the part of smokers in disposing of matches, carelessly tossed aside.

They have themselves insured first start from a match that they had thrown away. They ought to make it a better way of fighting fire to make it a matter of conscience never to set a match aside without first assuring themselves that it is absolutely "dead."

A contest has been held in Boston to see who is the best bed maker. Most folks nowadays are engaged in a contest to see which will lie in bed the longest.

PLAYING THE GAME

OF SAFETY FIRST

Said Abraham Lincoln, "I don't think much of the man who is not wiser today than he was yesterday." No truer words were ever written of the Safety First Game. If you would be a winner, each day must find you wiser, keener and more alert than the day before. It is a contest in which we match our determination to have no suffering from accidents to ourselves and fellow men against little acts of thoughtlessness and carelessness that bring results.

Nor is this game ever ended. Each day calls for a better score; new conditions surround us, and all of our faculties, the best that is in us, is challenged to increased effort. To have our work really well done, it must be safely done, and none of us want any less than the best.

For our own sake—for the sake of the family at home, the wife and children, the mother or sister, play the game and play it well. Play it with the interest, the spirit, the enthusiasm that will make you WIN. It will take all your skill and ability to play it right!

THIRD PAYMENT ON 1922 CROP

Lexington, Ky.—The payments to be made to members of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association May 20th on their 1922 crops range from 40 to 510 per cent of the first payment, according to a statement by Secretary and Treasurer H. Lee Earley, who gave out the percentages to be paid the growers in the third and final payment on the thirty-six grades of the association tobacco which have been sold out by the Association.
On only ten of the thirty-six grades will the May 20 payment be under 100 per cent of the first advance to the grower when he delivered his tobacco. On sixteen grades the third payment will be more than 100 per cent of the first advance and on the other ten grades it will be 200 per cent or more of the first advance.
The Burley co-operative in this distribution will put into circulation a little more than $8,500,000, Secretary Earley said.

The first advance, the payment to be made May 20 and the percentage the third payment is of the first advance on each of the thirty-six grades are shown in the following table:

A tremendous slump in Kentucky's prospective wheat crop this season of more than 50 per cent below 1923 production is indicated by the May crop report for this state issued by H. P. Bryant, agricultural statistician in charge of the Kentucky office of the U. S. Department of Agriculture's division of crop and livestock estimates. Condition of the Kentucky wheat crop May 1 indicates a probable production of only about 3,743,000 bush, this season compared with 7,688,000 bush last year. Kentucky's probable wheat production this season is estimated at 192,000 bush compared to 234,000 bush in 1923. The final output of these crops may be larger or smaller than the amounts given above according as conditions developing during the season prove more or less favorable to the crops than in an average year. Wheat and rice in most counties came through the winter in very poor to fair condition, though occasional fields are fairly good. Kentucky's wheat acreage left for harvest now is estimated to be about 474,000 acres compared to 620,000 acres harvested last year. Condition May 1 1924, was only 69 per cent of normal compared to 86 May 1, 1923 and the ten year average of 88 on May 1. Rice condition was only 75 per cent of normal compared to a 10-year average of 92 per cent May 1.

THE CHURCH AND WAR

Five of the largest Christian denominations in America are to meet in their several conferences during the next few months. From present indications the real, big, outstanding issue before all these conferences will be the outlawing of war. The Methodist conference has already prepared a resolution which will not doubt be accepted as the basis of all other denominational conferences, which declares that the church "can give neither our blessing nor our aid nor permit our organization to be used for its promotion." It further declares that all preparation for war, aerial, chemical and industrial—shall cease at once, and calls for an international conference to agree upon a plan for the abolishing of all forces within a specified time.
It is claimed that several thousand preachers in several different denominations, have already made solemn obligations to denounce war, to protest against the use of the church for that purpose to recognize war preparation in any manner. This attitude is based on the belief that the churches were "buddied" into a false Christian attitude during the last war.
Returns from the election held in Indiana on Tuesday last week, indicate that the Ku Klux Klan had everything their own way.

A Junior Red Cross portfolio prepared by pupils of a seventh grade in Amsterdam N. Y., was used at the University of California recently to illustrate evil training, thru Junior Red Cross.

The Pine Mountain Settlement school, Inc., in Harlan county, Ky., has been instituted for the avowed purpose of offering industrial and intellectual training. And the school has enthusiastically taken up the course in Home Hygiene and care of the sick. Through the Harlan county chapter three school classes have been organized and text books furnished.

One of the principal reasons that there is delay and difficulty in getting dependency compensation is that applications in this connection are very frequently inadvertently filled out. All questions should have careful attention.

KEEPING COOL

By THOMAS A. CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

DURING the days when the sun pours down upon us and the thermometer climbs up to the one-hundred mark, no one seems willing to let his neighbor forget the weather.
"Is it hot enough for you?" the grocer's boy queries as he runs in with the day's provisions. "Pretty hot day," a professor ventures, mopping his dripping dome as he speaks. "Some weather," the elevator boy says as I make my exit.
Keeping cool is quite as much a matter of temperament as of temperature; it is a state of mind as well as condition of the weather. The people who stand the heat the worst are those who never allow themselves to forget it, who talk about it continually, who are never still, who rush from one place to another in a frenzy of desire to find a cool spot; who fuss and fume and fan until they are red in the face and running perspiration. The best way to keep cool is to go about your work methodically, be as quiet as you can, and forget the weather.
It is much the same way with the other worries of life. We grow hot over the slights and insults, we are agitated over our misfortunes as we talk of them, and let our minds dwell upon them, and exaggerate them. We are constantly fending the fires of anger or resentment or they would shortly burn themselves out.
The man who under stress and irritation and misrepresentation can keep his balance, can control his temper and his tongue, can subdue the rising emotions, has conserved his own strength, has made it possible for himself to do more and better work, and has more than half defeated the purposes of his opponent.
"How can you sit so calmly and say nothing?" I asked a friend of mine some time ago, who was the subject of a bitter, untruthful personal attack. "Because the cooler I keep the hotter and the weaker his words become," was the answer.
So far as we can, we may better take the hot words and hot days quietly, without comment, without physical agitation. There is a force and a strength in keeping cool.

MEANDER

The "Meander" was a river in Asia Minor which was proverbial in ancient geography for the twisting, turning course which it followed to the sea. It has given its name to the noun "meander," which means a winding course, and to the verb "meander," which means to wander about with frequent turnings.

Deep Scottish Lochs

Many of the Scottish lochs are astonishingly deep, the depth of one—Loch Three—being known to exceed 1,000 feet.

Origin of Name Catskill

The name Catskill originated from "Katsberg," the name given by the Dutch to the mountain now known as the Catskills, because of the number of wild cats found in them. "Katskill," the river that flows down from the mountain's base, means "Tumultuous Creek."

AL SMITH'S sudden stepping out as one of the leading candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination since the death of Boss McCall in New York is one of the political sensations of the moment. The fact that Smith has secured Franklin Roosevelt, long a Tammany enemy, as his campaign manager, is expected to enhance his chances considerably, and there is a possibility that the New York Governor will let the nomination decide all the objections that are urged against him.

REPUBLICAN politicians are beginning to be fearful that Indiana Long a doubtful state, politically, will swing clear over into the Democratic column in November as a result of the conviction of Governor McCray and his resignation to serve a long sentence in federal prison. The primaries gave some indication of this trend, and it is suggested that Albert J. Beveridge, former Senator from Indiana, should be the Republican Vice-Presidential candidate in an effort to cure Hoosierdom for Coolidge.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE selected the Temporary Chairman for the Republican National Convention without even asking the advice of William M. Butler his chief campaign manager. The result was that Butler told some of the newspapermen in the Capital after the announcement was made that the story of the selection of Theodore E. Burton of Ohio was "just gossip." But when the committee on Arrangements met in Cleveland, it was Butler that placed Burton's name in nomination. In the meantime of course he had not been careful from the White House and had learned that Coolidge intended to run his own campaign—and to suit himself.

J. R. MCCALL, the Comptroller General of the United States, is at the moment of storm center of an attack, not only from Congress, but from all the executive departments of the Government. Under the Budget law, the Comptroller General has authority to take in all the money and pay all the bills of the United States Cabinet, members say that he has arrogated to himself so many duties and so much added authority that he has become a czar—so much so that he is able to tell anyone—even the President—what he can and what he cannot do where the Government's finances are concerned. Legislation to alleviate the troubles and rows between McCull and the Cabinet is being considered.

THE CONGRESSIONAL "beer bloc" has made a brave fight, but its efforts to liberalize the Volstead Act appear to be futile. A veritable flock of beer bills have been offered in the present Congress. Extended hearings before the House Judiciary Committee has brought forward a number of persons who would like to have 2.15 per cent beer legalized, but the passage of any legislation along this line, or even anything like a wet and dry fight on the floor of the House, looks doubtful. Among the interesting side-lights of the liquor agitation is the charge by Representative Celler of New York that at the time of the hearings were going on in certain Congressmen who always voted "dry" was discovered in a drunken condition at the Capitol.

HUNDREDS upon hundreds of bills are doomed to certain death as the time for the adjournment of the 68th Congress approaches. Among these is the proposal for American entrance into the Permanent Court of International Justice, made by the late President Harding more than a year ago. Hearings on the world court are being held before a subcommittee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, but the "hearings" are about as the Senate will go before national politics claims its time and energies completely.

A PERSONAL investigation of charges that Japan, Great Britain, France and Italy are violating the spirit, if not the letter, of the Washington naval limitation treaty has been launched by President Coolidge. The charges have been made separately, but the President was required to action by the announcement that the British Government planned to protest the changing of the American battleships from steel to oil burners. The violation of the treaty by foreign powers is said to consist in the construction of large numbers of auxiliary craft, submarines, etc., which the treaty did not specifically limit or prohibit.

Every year the United States Postal Service handles 23,000,000,000 articles. Every year the increase in number of articles in the mails is more than a billion. Of the total mail submitted, 12,000,000,000 pieces are letters.

Every year the Postal Service, on an average, delivers 112 letters to every man, woman and child in the United States.

Atlas would have had a tough time indeed lifting the annual load of letters alone that the Postal Service moves. It is estimated to total 133,333 tons.

Every second of the twenty-four hours of every day there are 389 letters dropped into letter boxes; every minute, 23,334, and every hour 1,400,000.

SEVERING EVERY MAN AND EVERY BUSINESS

Nearly 41,000 postmen, members of the greatest single business, daily deliver mail to millions of homes and business houses in American cities. The farmer is not neglected by the postal service. Today 44,552 rural routes supply mail to 6,504,592 families or 29,921,123 individuals.

Out West the Postal Service has established a veritable automobile railroad 125 miles long to the fruit-fertile (Utah) Valley to which no private rail line has penetrated.

WHO DOES THE WORK AND WHERE IS IT DONE

On February 25, 1924, the Post Office Department had more than 351,000 in its employ. Besides the 33,677 letter carriers, there are 62,740 clerks, 14,417 rural carriers, 51,393 postmasters, and 21,916 railway postal clerks.

The 61,393 postmasters run as many offices. There is one post office for every 58 square miles of territory.

The 351,000 full and part time postal employees are paid approximately $4,622,517 annually for their services.

THE MAILED MOVE

Almost every conceivable type of transportation is used to move the mails—railroads, steamboats, automobiles, airplanes, motor boats, wagons, horses, bicycles, the sled of the Arctic, and even the "dog car."

The "dog car" is an Alaskan invention. An abandoned railroad runs out of Nome to a mining camp. The surprising Arctic Circle mailman hitches his dog team to a hand car and scoots up the mountain side with the post.

Last year the air mail planes flew 2,000,000 miles, carrying 65,295,000 letters.

Although interstellar service has not yet been established by the Post Office Department, it is a fact the routes covered by the railway mail cars last year reached the planetary proportions of 219,171,224 miles. This transportation cost $85,194,239. The Postal Service now uses 5,096 postal cars.

Automobiles are running a race for numerical supremacy with the railway postal cars. There are now 4,930 in operation carrying the mails.

POSTAL PIONEERING THROUGH THREE CENTURIES

America's most cherished quality is the pioneer spirit of its people. The United States postal system, in the spirit of America, has been a pioneer in the 17th, 18th, and 19th centuries, and now, with the opening of the 20th century, it is abreast of the foremost in progressive ingenuity and invention and service.

It was a mail courier who blazed the first trail between New York and Boston.

It was the mail coach which brought into existence the old Boston-New York Philadelphia Baltimore turnpike—the first great American highway.

Benjamin Franklin, as deputy post master general, made this post road serving the scattered colonial settlements show a greater income than the principal post road between England and Scotland.

Richard Fairbanks, who conducted an office in a Boston tavern in 1639 to receive letters from ships, was the first colonial postmaster.

Benjamin Franklin in 1775 became the first Postmaster General of the United States.

Railroads were patronized by the Postal Service from the time the first few miles of track were laid. Subsidies through the Postal Service made possible the maintenance of many of the early railroads.

The railway post office was adopted in the United States in 1864.

The Postal Service has always been on the heels of the pioneer settlers as they advanced westward. Service to day Point Barrow on the northernmost tip of Alaska, and to the isolated miners in the fastnesses of the mountains, bears out the motto, "Where American citizens go, the mails go."

Gummed postage was adopted in the United States in 1847.

Postmaster General Montgomery Blair initiated the movement in 1861 which has resulted in the foundation of the Universal Postal Union. A concrete example of this international cooperation is found in the fact that the letter sent for 5 cents to Australia today cost $2.04 in 1857.

It was the demands of the Postal Service which first brought night trains on the railroads, and the first fast mail trains were followed by fast passenger trains.

The money-order system was adopted in 1847.

Postmen today bring mail to the doors of millions of homes. Free delivery of all service in cities began in 1863.

KEMP'S BALSAM

Don't cough! cough! cough!

Postal savings banks, the greatest savings bank in the world was started in 1911.

R. F. D. service rings the city to the country. This rural service was started in 1896.

Parcel post was adopted in 1913. Air mail service was started May 18, 1918. For two years it has been operating an advancing service on a transcontinental route 3,000 miles long from New York to San Francisco, and earned in 1922 and 1923 the honor of making the greatest contribution to the progress of American aviation.

Pioneering never stops in the Postal Service. Faster, faster, faster the relay must be made. This summer the Postal Service, if Congress agrees will inaugurate through service, 28 hours, between New York and the city at Golden Gate. One-third of this journey will be at night.

FACTS AND FIGURES

The United States Postoffice uses annually more than 300 tons of stationery and typewriting paper.

Nearly 4,000,000 sheets of carbon paper.

Also 175,000,000 envelopes and millions and millions of blank forms of one kind and another.

To write on this vast amount of stationery and to fill the thirsty ink bottles from New York to San Francisco requires 70,000 quarts of ink. This vast ink reservoir is supplied by hundreds of thousands of rubber stamps, while the mucilage requirement as 35,000 quarts. In addition to this it takes 1,620,000 lead pencils, nearly 6,000,000 steel pens, 100,000,000 paper clips rubber bands by the ton and 2,331,446 lbs. of twine.

Nearly 12,000,000 mail sacks are used, and it requires annually 6,000,000 yards of canvas to make new ones.

Other interesting figures show that the army of rural letter carriers travel daily 1,173,473 miles, and annually 360,256,364 miles.

Fifteen and a half billion stamps and one and a quarter billion post cards are sold yearly by the Post Office Department to the American public.

SOUR GRAPES

"Sour grapes" is the expression which is applied to someone whose unfavorable comment is based on envy. The reference is to Aesop's fable of the fox who vainly tried to reach some grapes which were just out of his reach. At last, giving up, he consoled himself by saying that the grapes were sour. Knocking is usually the old story of "sour grapes."

Twelve million children and young people of rural America have not even a country Sunday school to help them understand the problems of life. As many more receive no religious teaching worthy of the name. The task of reaching these spiritually neglected children and young people ought to be regarded as the most important work of every American. It can't be done by compelling them to work in the mines, mills and factories.

COAST TO COAST AIR MAIL

Air mail from San Francisco to New York in 33 hours, beginning on July 1, is promised by the Post Office Department. Air mail postage is eight cents per ounce or any fraction thereof for each air mail zone.

There are three zones. The first extends from San Francisco to Cheyenne, the second from Cheyenne to Chicago, the third from Chicago to New York, the rate from San Francisco to New York therefore being 24 cents an ounce.

Plans for the inauguration of night flying on July 1 contemplate a schedule starting from San Francisco at 6 o'clock each morning. The first stop is Reno at 8:15 a. m. The second relay is at Salt Lake City, where mail will arrive at 2:30 p. m. The third relay reaches Cheyenne at 6:45 p. m., the fourth at Omaha at 1 a. m., while the fifth is due in Chicago at 6:45 a. m. The sixth relay takes the mail to Cleveland, arriving at 10:30 a. m., and the seventh is due to land at New York at 3:15 p. m. The air mail service guarantees delivery in New York each afternoon—except on Sundays and holidays.

Air mail may be addressed to any point in the midwest or east. It will be taken to the nearest relay point at the air mail rate for that zone and then put aboard the first train for its destination, there being no additional charge for taking the mail from the air mail terminal point to its destination by railway mail.

TRIFLING IRRITATIONS

By THOMAS A. CLARK
Dean of Man, University of Illinois

MOST men could have a leg cut off or receive a refusal of marriage from the girl they love with fortitude and resignation; it is the trifling irritations of life that try our courage and wreck our nervous systems. We can meet death without winking an eyelash, but cold pancakes for breakfast or a lost collar button units us for business for the day. Our friends and our reputations are often made or lost by the way in which we meet the seemingly insignificant situations of life.

I knew a man once who lived with his wife twenty years. They stood by each other through all sorts of sorrows and disasters, but he finally applied for a divorce. She had a perpetual habit of taking his solid handkerchief out of his pocket each evening and substituting a fresh one. It was a violation of his rights, which could not be brooked, and which bade fair to sour his whole disposition; he tried in vain to break her of the practice, and, failing in this, sought release from the annoyance through the divorce courts. Yet they had met with heroism and fortitude, the serious things of life.

It is seldom the vital or important occurrences which try our tempers or upset us, or make home heaven or hell for us; it is the trifling thing, the unexpected annoyance or omission.

Many of these things are largely matters of personal temperament to which we yield without a struggle. We even become elated or take pride in the fact, at times, that there are certain things which we do not like or which we cannot stand. Some men boast of their little fancies or irritations as if they were an asset rather than a liability.

I heard a man admit the other day that a corroded pen, or a dry inkwell, or a waste-paper basket put thoughtfully out of reach by the janitor did more to disturb his equanimity than a dozen difficult customers would have done.

In my college days I saw an otherwise well-balanced instructor—an experienced middle-aged gentleman—thrown into a frenzy because his hat dropped twice from the hook on which he was trying to hang it. He would have met a crisis in life with composure and calm.

Perhaps when we learn to estimate men's characters justly it will not be wholly from the great crises which they meet, but by the trifling irritations as well which they are able to overlook or to control.

Folks who keep busy trying to damage the reputation of others, should first go out and get themselves a reputation.

Practically everyone believes in action, but few take into account that the aftermath in reaction, either favorable or unfavorable.

Advertising has got people to eating yeast and raisins, but no one has yet been influenced to go out in the garden and eat worms.

The newspaper that carries a good line of advertising is to the shopper what the railroad and interurban time card is to the traveler.

A LEADER WANTED.

Charles W. Elliot, President Emeritus of Henson University, in a historical sketch of the Democratic Party, concluded by saying:

"WANTED—A Leader With a Platform"

In the Article he declares that the Democratic Party historically is the Party of progress and achievement. No cause can win over the silent forces of good and privilege without leadership. Leadership aggressive, courageous and able. In McAdoo, we have the Leader. We have many candidates named, but to whom can we look for Leadership. Who possesses the elements of personality, courage, aggressive strength to fight to overcome and to overthrow. This question is not alone who can hold together when in control—but, who can read as a winning fight.

Is there any figure in American politics today that suggests the powers necessary for such leadership. In McAdoo we also have a man with a progressive platform. He leaves no doubt as to where he stands upon every question. His declarations ring clear and distinct.

HIS PLATFORM

First: To rid Washington of corruption and mercilessly punish all guilty of wrong doing. To remove from office all incompetent public political appointees.

Second: To call a conference of all nations at Washington for the purpose of promoting peace. To submit results of the Conference to a National Referendum.

Third: To take grip of Wall Street and the Treasury Department and of the Federal Government System and to have them operated in the interest of the people.

Fourth: To repeal the Fordney-McCumber Tariff Bill which robs the common people for the benefit of privilege and substitute a tariff which will reduce living cost.

Fifth: To settle the railroad problem so that transportation shall be furnished at a reduced freight rate and passenger rates and bring justice to labor and investors.

Sixth: To do something, instead of talking, for the aid of prostrate agriculture. To promptly restore foreign markets for the surplus products of American farmers.

Seventh: To enforce the 18th Amendment and to put prohibition officers under Civil Service instead of making the service the spoils of corrupt politicians.

Eighth: To reduce Internal Revenue taxes to the lowest possible limit that is compatible with Governmental honesty, efficiency and economic conduct.

Ninth: To set up a labor code establishing living wages and appointing tribunals for sustaining peace.

Tenth: To establish child labor laws.

Eleventh: To clean out the Veterans Bureau and to administer it honestly and efficiently. To do justice to the Veterans of the war by adjusted compensation.

THE BABY'S GARDEN

When you plan your garden reserve one corner of it to plant vegetables for the small children. Call this part of your garden "The Baby's Garden." City mothers usually can obtain proper kind of vegetables for children easier than the country mothers because the country mothers do not have access to good markets and they fail to think of the baby when planning their gardens.

From records obtained from hundreds of mothers we know their mashed or baked potato is nearly always the first vegetable given the baby. Child specialists tell us that the baby should have a green, leafy vegetable before he is given a starchy one, such as potato. Since this is true, plant in your "Baby Garden" vegetables that are essential for the baby's health. Spinach and carrots are rich in iron and have in them growth producing elements, called vitamins, that are needed by all growing children, so plant first these two vegetables in your garden for the little ones. A one year old child can eat carrots and spinach if they are well cooked, mashed fine and seasoned with a little butter. Many adults have never learned to eat carrots and spinach and fail to recognize their value in the diet of children. Mothers frequently say, "Oh, I cannot make baby eat carrots. I do not like them and I know he would not." Children do like carrots as well as spinach and frequently the adults in a family learn to eat these vegetables. They see that the children not only like them but grow and remain healthy when these vegetables become part of a regular diet. A child between three and six can eat tender young peas, lettuce cut fine, beets seasoned with butter, asparagus, beet tops, mustard, green and tender young string beans if they are cooked without grease. The vegetables that should not be given young children are: green corn, egg plant, raw peppers, radishes, raw onions, raw cabbage and cucumbers.

While the American packers have not yet come to any such agreement, says R. C. Miller, sheep specialist of the Kentucky College of Agriculture, "they universally pay more for ewe and wether lambs. Last year buck lambs marketed from Kentucky averaged around $1.50 a hundred pounds less than ewe and wether lambs. The premium paid, the gain in weight, and the far greater number of seconds among the buck lambs are all taken into consideration in making up this difference in price. There is still time to castrate late lambs. All lambs under seven weeks old should be castrated; if a little pine tar is used there should be no danger of loss at this time of year."

TURN ME OVER

KENTUCKY PULLEY HIGH

LAYER IS COAST CONTEST.

The Barred Plymouth Rock pulley which has been making such a high record on the Pacific coast in the Western Washington Egg Laying contest is still running an egg race with three Leghorns and a Rhode Island Red according to the latest summary received here by the Poultry Department of the Kentucky Experiment Station. The pulley which has now been in the contest for five months has laid 132 eggs while the only other general purpose bird near the top of the list is the Rhode Island Red whose record is only two eggs better. The first bird which shows signs of broodiness will be out of the contest for leading honors.

The Kentucky Experiment Station is also showing the results of good breeding and selection by leading all other general purpose pens with a total of 523 eggs in 5 months or 104 eggs per pen, twice the number laid by the average Kentucky hen in a year. The hen laid 112 eggs in the month of March and was the leading hen for the month.

This Barred Rock pulley is making a remarkable record so far," says J. Holmes Martin of the Poultry Department, "for Lady Jewel, the Leghorn, which laid 335 eggs in one year thereby establishing the American contest record two years ago had laid only 127 eggs previous to April 1st which is 5 eggs less than the Experiment Station pulley has laid thus far. In addition, the pulley has outlaid 513 out of 516 Leghorns in the contest which shows what careful breeding can do with general purpose breeds."

NO PRICE SET FOR TRIMMED LAMBS HERE

Although packers who buy lambs in Canada this year have agreed to a price cut of $2.00 per hundred for all buck lambs, no such agreement has been entered into for this country as is stated in an article of last week. The price of trimmed lambs in Kentucky has generally averaged over $1.50 a hundred over that of buck lambs.

Trade Where They All Trade

This flour has made its reputation on its merits only. Every user is a booster. The first cost may be a little more, but it makes more and better bread and therefore is economical to use. The satisfaction of always having good bread is remembered long after the price is forgotten. The lowest priced flour is not always the cheapest.

This flour is made from the choicest selected Turkey Red Hard Winter Wheat grown in a small section of Kansas where it produces to perfection. There is no other flour equal to it. Wood Bbl., $8.25; 98-Lb. Bag $3.90; 24-lb. Bag $1.05 F. O. B. Covington.

THE LOGICAL MEDIUM

Live merchants advertise because they want the people to know about the goods they have for sale, especially when bargains are offered.

People read the advertisements because they want to know what they can buy to best advantage, and this can be determined only by knowing what the merchants have to offer.

The local paper is the logical medium between buyer and seller. It is the means whereby the merchant talks to his customers. He can't call on them individually, so he speaks to them collectively.

The one should use it and the other should read it.

Orphan children in Rochester, N. Y., orphan asylums have been inoculated with a new test for scarlet fever prevention. The report concludes with the comment that the test is "expected" to prove satisfactory. Even so it means that in this land of the free hundreds of innocent children have no redress against being experimented upon. If such a thing occurred in Russia—well, that's another story.

December next has been designated as Golden Rule Day for the civilized world. Last year about $1,000,000 was received, and this year it is hoped to double that amount. The money is used in supporting orphans in the Near East who are not only parentless but have no country and are therefore regarded international charges.

Chief trouble with the Back to the Soil movement is that some people fear it means Back to the Toll.

(By Margaret Bold.)

"Carefully then were covered the embers that glowed on the hearthstone."

—Evelyn Waugh.

When the modern householder covers his fire at night, it is to keep the hot-water pipes from freezing during the night or to keep the house from becoming unduly chilly overnight.

When the farmers of Grand-Pre covered their fires at night, it was to save themselves much trouble the next morning with flint and steel and tinder. Lighting a fire in those days was no simple matter of lighting a match—it was a slow, laborious process.

Countless centuries ago man discovered that fire would keep him warm in cold weather, would make his food easier to chew and would help him in faking stone for axes and spearheads and would aid him in countless other ways. In the very earliest days men had to depend on lightning for their start of fire—hence it was perfectly natural that the Greeks should have believed Prometheus stole fire from the gods and gave it to man. When the lightning struck a tree and started a forest fire, our primitive ancestors no doubt hunted around in the wake of the fire for smoldering stumps and logs. These pieces of smoldering wood they probably carried to their caves and used to start fires that were kept alive for weeks or months at a time. If through carelessness or accident the fire was allowed to go out, the people of that early day were compelled to wait for another lightning storm to get a fresh supply of fire.

Later man discovered that by rubbing two pieces of wood together very briskly he was able to start a fire. This marked a tremendous step forward in the history of fire making for it made men independent of lightning storms.

Later still he discovered that by striking a piece of iron or steel against flint he was able to strike fire that could be caught by a bit of tinder if he were skillful enough. He also discovered that it was possible to start a fire by focusing the sun's rays through a piece of glass. Fire could not be started with a burning glass except on sunny days, and lighting a fire with flint and steel was tedious business; but both methods were much simpler than the method that had preceded them.

The matches that are in use at the present day are a comparatively recent invention, made possible by advancements in chemistry. Up until the days of the Civil war and for a quarter century afterwards they were looked upon as something that must be used sparingly—and the housewife who used matches to light a lamp when she could light a splinter or a bit of rolled paper and from that light the lamp was regarded as extravagant.

THE MISSION OF FLOWERS

A home place may look neat and trim without flowers, and many people nowadays seem to seem to find time to cultivate any bloom about their places. They might at least set out flowering shrubs, arranging them in rotation so that there would be some in blossom most of the summer.

The old timers, in spite of their busy lives, were apt to find time to raise flowers. These plants gave the old fashioned village a wonderful touch of color and cheer that is often missing from fine modern homes.

In some progressive cities, now, special efforts are made to encourage flower growing. A flower decorated city looks like a home place, where people love their dwellings and are attached to the soil. Also it suggests that its people have imagination, and are not just grubbing for dollars every minute of their lives. We need more flower beds around the homes of Burlington.

TWO PARTY GOVERNMENT

Every voter in the country should find sufficient attraction in one or the other of the two major parties to command his support.

Two-party government is the logical development of popular government—a party of administration and a party of opposition. Many members of each party may differ more or less with the policy platform of their organizations, but that is not sufficient reason for forming a third party.

Carried to its conclusion, such a course would mean the complete disintegration of all parties. Few men think alike on every topic, hence, applying the third party theory, there is no chance of an organization strong enough to e-felt in national affairs.

Without compromise on the part of everyone our economic structure would soon give way to anarchy.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to take this means to thank all our dear friends for all kindness and respect shown to us in the death of our beloved husband, father son brother, Jack Eddins; we also thank Bro. Adams for his sympathy and comforting words, also C. Scott Chambers for the efficient manner in which the funeral services were conducted, and we appreciate the beautiful flowers sent by our dear friends.

IMMEDIATE STEPS TO ORGANIZE POOL BANK ARE ORDERED

Burley Tobacco Growers Will Meet Demand For Financing Of Members And Prompt Action Directed By Board

Lexington, Ky.—On motion of U. S. District Attorney Elliott Northcott, director for West Virginia, and by unanimous vote, the board of directors of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association at Lexington Wednesday, directed by Secretary and Treasurer H. Lee Earley and the executive committee of the association to proceed with the establishment of an agricultural bank whose sole purpose shall be to lend money to tobacco growers who may need it, their participation certificate being the only required collateral.

The directors took this action because of the fact that in many sections of the Burley district local bankers this year have not been able to advance as much money on this class of collateral as the growers wanted and the need of such an institution has become so apparent and the demand on the part of the growers for its establishment so insistent that the board, it was said, felt that prompt action ought to be taken, and it was unanimously ordered.

At the close of his final report as director of the operation of the association, covering the operation of the warehouses and redryers for the past year, Ralph M. Barker declared that "if there is anything you fellows ever want me to do for this association, you have only to say what it is and I'll do it, if I can." Mr. Barker's report was unanimous, covering the cost of re-drying at each point in the district, the amount of tobacco sold, the amount re-dried, the cost of receiving and re-drying and the amount of tobacco on hand by grades.

THE DEAD TOWN

There is nothing deadlier than a dead town. Try as hard as it may to conceal the facts, the truth is written all over it so that he who runs may read. No camouflage—no bluster can conceal to true situation from anyone who comes within the limits of the community.

A man looking for a place to launch a new business or a new line of work, or a new line of work, is not going to select a town in which business is plentiful, a town whose business men are progressive and whose residents, as a whole, are prosperous and contented. There are too many alive and thriving towns in the world for a man to risk his future in one that is dead.

A town is just like a corporation and the money possessed by its inhabitants is as capital. If this capital is depleted the town will fail just as the corporation, whose capital is depleted through poor management or other causes fails.

The capital of a community is depleted when its money is spent away from home in a way that brings no return benefit to the community. It is able to realize that the town, like the individual, cannot live long if it is paying out more money than it takes in.

Many people are apt to overlook the fact that they are stockholders in their town and that their fortunes are bound up with those of the community as a whole. They do not realize that if their town fails—they will fail with it. They—or many of them—at least—send their money away to the mail order houses in the great cities, without realizing that they are impairing the capital of their own corporations and that if enough of them pursue that course they will force their corporation into certain bankruptcy.

The merchant is not the only one injured, but he pays taxes, contributes to public charities, churches, etc., and when his business is gone his ability to contribute is gone. The time for all the people to pull together for a live town is while the town is still alive and not after it is dead, for when a town dies it is a long time dead.

Louisville, Ky.—Dr. R. N. Risner and Dr. E. D. Porter, chiropractors, have been found guilty in Greenville of practicing without a license. The penalty for this misdemeanor is a fine of $50.

Upon being notified by Commonwealth's Attorney Hubert Meredith of the conviction of Dr. A. T. McCormack, secretary of the State Board of Health pointed out that the law which prohibits the practice of medicine or the healing art without a license, protect the chiropractor from the invasion of quacks, just as it has protected the legitimate medical profession from the "correspondence school" physician.

"Laws are designed to protect the people, not to exploit them," said Dr. McCormack. The legitimate chiropractor who desires to practice his profession in Kentucky must stand an examination before three members of their own profession. More than sixty licensed chiropractors now are practicing in the State. No chiropractor who knows his profession and fear a law which puts up a barrier against the entrance of quacks."

GUNPOWDER

J. T. Stephenson, of Linsburg, was on the jury that tried Congressman Langley in Covington.

PIGGERY POPULAR WITH THE FARMER

Meets the Requirements of Most Any Locality.

WOOD COVERS CEMENT FLOOR

Structural Design is Such as to Entail No Construction Difficulty—Material is Available Everywhere.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD
Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF CHARGE on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building work on the farm, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1327 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

Here is a type of piggery which meets with popularity among farmers generally, because it combines the two elements of reasonable cost and general adaptability to many different local conditions. The structural design is such as to entail no construction difficulty, and the lumber and cement and trim, with proper fittings, are obtainable from any local lumber yard and building material dealer.

The floor is of cement overlaid with removable planks. This is a type of floor which helps the pig to remain healthy, and the coldness of the cement is effectively offset by the warm-retaining planks, which may be removed at intervals for cleaning and ventilation of the individual pens. The foundation for this piggery should rise about two feet above the floor surface.

The walls can be constructed by setting two-by-fours on end, boarding outside with shiplap or other grooved lumber, smooth finished to admit of more easy painting. Building paper, tarred preferably, should be placed between the outer boarding and the studs. The inner boarding is best if there is no very high ceiling, as in the case of this piggery. It is the best solution of the difficulty. Of course, one must have side-wall shaft ventilators, but these are more necessary when the wall is of brick, cement or tile. Eight inches square is a good dimension for such an air shaft.

You will observe that this piggery is laid out with twelve pens, six on a side of the feed alley. One might extend the house a bit, to permit of a feed cooker room, or utilize one of the pen spaces for this purpose. A good plan, and one which helps keep Mr. and Mrs. Pig comfortable, with their small and noisy family, is to have the chimney constructed so it runs the length of the piggery, losing its heat into the structure rather than into the outer air. One ought to plan something like this where farrowing is the prime essential of the piggery. The overhead rest assured the pigs will do nicely in a rather cold pen, straw spread, and with a reasonable degree of air circulation.

"NO MAN'S LAND" IN BANK

Place Where Neither the Depositor Nor Cashier Has Custody of the Money.

Have you ever heard of there being a "No Man's Land" on the counter of the bank where you deposit your dollars?

Just recently a depositor at the Victoria street branch of the Western bank went to the bank to deposit $420 in British treasury notes. He pushed them in a pile at least eight inches under the grille which runs all round the counter, dividing the customers from the cashier, says a correspondent. They were approximately eighteen inches from the cashier's hand, but he did not immediately take them, being busy with a previous transaction. The would-be depositor looked around, and when his eyes strayed back to the grille again the notes had disappeared. He calculated the cashier had them, but he had not. They had been raked back by a light-fingered man standing beside the depositor and the pilferer managed to get away with them. But he was colored later.

Meanwhile a little drama was being enacted on the bank's counter. The depositor reckoned the bank was responsible for the loss. He had pushed

"This is a slight unmerited mart, meet to be sent on errands: is it fit, The three-fold world divided, ha should stand One of the three to share it?"

—Julius Caesar.

"During a prolonged study of the lives of various men both great and small," writes Goethe, "I came upon this thought: In the web of the world the one may well be regarded as the warp, the other as the woof. It is the little men, after all, who give breadth to the web, and the great men firmness and solidity; also, the addition of some sort of pattern."

This figure is less forcible now than it was during Goethe's day, when everyone was thoroughly familiar with weaving and most homes had a loom in some corner or in the attic. Then everyone knew that a web was any finished piece of weaving, whether a strip of rag carpet, a blanket, a tablecloth, a length of towel, or a pattern of dress goods. Then everyone knew that when a weaver began a web, he first of all fastened the threads that were to run lengthwise of the web to the warp beam of his loom—and they knew that he called these threads the chain or the warp of the web. They knew, too, that the width of the web was determined by the number of threads fastened to the warp beam—so many threads for cloth a foot wide; twice as many for cloth two feet wide; and three times as many for cloth a yard wide. They knew, too, that when the warp threads were in place, the weaver began to cast back and forth from one side of the warp to the other, over one warp thread and under the next, a shuttle containing the thread that was to run crosswise of the web, the woof thread. They knew that the closer together the woof threads were crowded, the finer the cloth.

Nowadays few people know much of weaving, and the comparison is but meaningless, words unless one knows what web and warp and woof are. That understood, the comparison becomes one of the most forcible in all literature, and one sees the unmerited man and the brilliant man in their true relation to each other and to the universe. The slight unmerited man that make up the warp of the world are quite as essential as the showier poets, artists, musicians, statesmen, inventors, business executives, and others who make up the woof.

of grooved or matched lumber, smooth finished. There is no loft over the piggery, as is the case with some of the others. Provision is made instead for ample ventilation and sunlight, and with the windows on the lower walls, and with the piggery placed with proper east and south exposure, there is plenty of sunlight possible. Sunlight is something which is good for pigs as well as for us human animals. Personally, we prefer to consider Mr. and Mrs. Pig as intelligent beings. Scientists tell us that their skulls are more nearly like the human skull than are the skulls of many more highly appreciated animals—like toy terriers and pet monkeys, for instance. (We will never forget the sad, reproachful, almost humanlike expression in one old sow's eyes around hog-killing time in the late fall. She was our pet and seemed to resent the inevitable confinement to the realm of blood sausage, pork chops and pickle barrel.) Pigs respond quickly to favorable surroundings and need no training to keep their pens or sty clean.

the notes under the grille over to their side. The bank declared that they were not responsible because they had not actually physically pushed them through the instrumentality of their cashier. They may have been pushed under the grille, but they were in no man's land till the cashier took hold of them, and then the responsibility of the bank commenced.

The issue has not been argued out in a court, but maybe it will be some day. Attention has merely been directed to it by the publicity which the matter has received. The thief was caught and sentenced, and the story came out in evidence. There still remains determination of the question of the bank's responsibility.

"Why, darling," said the mother, "that is a naughty word. You should never use it. Why do you want to spell it?"
"I want to spell 'Hewen,'" was the innocent reply, "and I thought I'd just write down one cylinder at a time."

SEASONABLE GOOD THINGS

This is the time of the year when steamed brown bread tastes very good as well as the richer steamed puddings with sauces.
Boston Brown Bread.—Mix and sift one cupful of rye meal, one cupful of corn meal, one cupful of graham flour, three-fourths of a teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of salt, add three-fourths of a cupful of molasses and two cupfuls of sour milk. Stir until well mixed, turn into a buttered mold and steam three and one-half hours. Grease the cover of the mold and fill but two-thirds full.
German Potato Salad.—Cut six medium-sized cold boiled potatoes into thin slices. Put into a baking dish and sprinkle with salt, pepper and one-third of a cupful of finely-chopped celery and one and one-half tablespoonfuls of chopped parsley. Mix four tablespoonfuls of vinegar with four tablespoonfuls of olive oil and add a slice of lemon. Bring to the boiling point, pour over the potatoes, cover and let stand in the oven until well heated. Onion may be added if liked.
Mushrooms a la Newburg.—Remove the stems and peel the caps from one pound of mushrooms. Cut into small pieces. From the peeling and stems make one-quarter cupful of stock. Put the caps into a double boiler, with a tablespoonful of butter, and cook over the heat for five minutes; now place over water and add one cupful of thin cream. Drain off the cream after it has cooked with the mushrooms for a few minutes, thickened with one tablespoonful of butter mixed with two of flour, add to the cream, cook until smooth; add two beaten eggs, the mushrooms, the stock, a dash of salt and cayenne and a tablespoonful of canned fruit juice or apple jelly.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

The body of a man was found floating in the river at Constance, last Thursday by J. P. Dolwick when he was rowing a skiff near the shore. Dolwick notified R. H. Tanner, magistrate, of Florence, who because of the condition of the body ordered it buried in the sand.

When it was learned that a body had been caught, Mrs. Botley, of Newport, came to Constance, that night to investigate, and when informed by Dolwick of the kind of clothing worn and that two gold teeth was noticeable, Mrs. Botley said she believed it was the body of her husband, and notified Undertaker Radel to go down to Constance immediately when Dolwick informed her that the grave in the sand would be covered within an hour.

The body was exhumed just as the water was covering the grave, and was taken to Radel's Morgue in Covington, where it was identified.

Mrs. Botley explained that her husband fell from a barge at the foot of Central avenue, Cincinnati, three months ago and disappeared in the water.

County Agent W. D. Sutton acted as a go between for farmers of Hopkins county and the manager of the Federal Hospital at Dawson Springs with the result that vegetables and fruits which have previously been shipped in, will this year be supplied by local farmers. One item required is 1200 roasting ears of sweet corn for a single day.

Mr. B. C. Stephens Jr., of Burlington, sold, last week, to Mr. O. R. Russ of Florence his fine herd boar, Jack of Boone, which he purchased of A. P. Adair & Son, of Paris, Ky., last fall. With the closing of this deal Mr. Russ will now have the finest herd of Duroc Jersey swine in Boone county.

J. A. Clore, industrious young farmer of Rabbit Hash precinct, was a pleasant caller at our office last Friday. Albert said the water of the Ohio river is over about 15 acres of his land which he intends to plant to corn, but he will have to wait until the water gets off of it.

Burlington is just what you make it if you don't like the town, you will probably find that the town doesn't like you. But if you have the right attitude, then you will find the community friendly. It is a mirror in which you will find a reflection of your own disposition.

Most of the people who take great joy in calling at the Recorder office each week and pointing out typographical mistakes in the paper, are usually the ones who have nothing else to do but look for mistakes made by others.

The County Judge has been notified that the State Tax Commission is contemplating making an increase of twenty per cent on Tangible Personal property and five per cent on live stock in Boone county.

This is said to be one of the most backward springs in years, and farmers are hustling as much as they can between showers. Corn and other things already planted do not seem to be doing much good.

R. N. Head, one of the good citizens of Union neighborhood, was a Burlington visitor last Thursday. He never fails to call in to see the printers when in town. He like the rest of us is getting gray.

The play "Guilty, But Not Guilty" presented by the Senior Class of the Boone County High School at the Theatre building, last night was a decided success with a large crowd present.

Marriage licenses were issued last Saturday by the County Clerk as follows: Alfred H. Jones and Miss Lydia Aylor, Franklin A. Rouse and Miss Ruth Kerns, both of Walton.

It is asked what has become of the girl that used to be anxious to conceal her feet. Well, last heard from she was buying the most vivid shade of flesh colored stockings.

Short-sleeved frocks are still popular, the spring fashion notes say, but we note that the hair is still being worn long enough so that the ears are not exposed.

At last accounts the men were not concealing from their wives the names of any women friends who had been seen working in the garden.

Dr. I. E. Carlyle, of Rabbit Hash, was a business visitor to Burlington, last Friday. He made our office a pleasant call.

Friday, May 30th, is Decoration Day. There will be no Rural Delivery of mail on that day.

Hunt for the GOOD in the other fellow—he has to do the same in your case.

OLD COMRADES MEET

After A Separation of Sixty-One Years —Former Boone County Boys.

Sixty-one years ago T. H. Cloud, of this city, and Gustav Foster, who was a Boone County, Ky., man, were comrades in Co. B, 6th Confederate Cavalry. The 6th Cavalry was at Big Moccasin Gap, Va. Foster was sent away on detail and Cloud never saw him again until a week or so ago the two men met at Higginville, Mo. Foster was a member of the Confederate Home family at that place, Cloud as a member of the Board of Managers of the Home.

Some time ago Foster's application for reinstatement as a resident of the home, also for reinstatement of his wife, came before the board and Mr. Cloud was sure when he saw that it meant his old comrade. That was last month, and during the month, Mr. Foster, now 88 years old, and his wife, arrived at the home and settled to housekeeping in one of the cottages.

Thither after the regular board meeting early this month Mr. Cloud found his way. The aged Foster talked to the board member quite a while and then was asked if he was Gustav Foster who had gone to war, from Boone county. He was he answered.

"Well, Gustav, don't you remember me—my name is Cloud?"

"Why, why—is this 'Til' Cloud," the old man queried as he struggled to his feet.

Well, of course, it was "Til" and the old man's eyes streamed tears of joy at this meeting with one he had considered dead no doubt for many a year. It might be added, too, that Mr. Cloud's eyes were not undimmed.

Cloud and Foster were with their company at Big Moccasin Gap. General Humphrey Marshall received word that there were some men in Central Kentucky who wanted to come out to enter the army. Foster was detailed to go in and pilot them to the line. He did so, but did not return to old Co. B; he was transferred to another regiment. Cloud never heard what became of Foster and the silence had been unbroken for 61 years.

Foster and his wife were residents of the home before under the administration of Col. Gross, but they were given a furlough and went out to support themselves again, which they did for a number of years. But when their fortunes failed in the haven they again sought shelter in the Confederate veterans and it was thus that two long-separated comrades were brought together after so many years.

The above was taken from the Pleasant Hill (Mo.) Times, of which R. T. Cloud, son of T. H. Cloud, is the editor. "Til" Cloud is a former Boone county boy and a brother of W. T. Cloud, of Ft. Pleasant neighborhood while "Gus" Foster is a son of the late Jeremiah Foster and was born in Burlington, and there are very few left in the town who remember "Gus" when a boy.

THE DIFFERENCE.

There is a difference between observing the law and enforcing it.

The duty of the people is to observe the law and the duty of the legally constituted officers is to enforce the law.

Former Governor McCray of Indiana, as chief executive of the state, was charged with enforcement of the law, but he did not observe it.

Evidence at his trial in federal court, resulting in his conviction and sentence of ten years at the Atlanta penitentiary, disclosed that he had forged notes amounting to nearly a million dollars.

Here was a man who took oath to uphold the constitution of the United States and Indiana and the laws of Indiana.

Yet in a few short years, he repeatedly violated the law with impunity. His violations were continuous and he must have had knowledge in his own mind that he was acting contrary to law.

Such an example as the former proud governor of Indiana affords us, is not calculated to help either law enforcement or law observance.

The punishment that he must suffer should ever remind us that this is still a land of government by law and that the high as well as the lowly are measured by the same legal yardstick.

McCray's plight should be a lesson to all those who once in close quarters financially, think they can escape by committing more crimes.

The deeper the hole is dug, the more difficult it is to climb out.

On next Tuesday evening the Commencement Exercises of the Boone County High School will be held at the Burlington Baptist church at 8 o'clock. The Class Address will be delivered by Prof. McHenry Rhoads, Supt. of Public Instruction, Frank Fort, Miss Mary Mcullen, Salutatorian, and Miss Julia Cook, Valedictorian; presentation of diplomas by Supt. J. C. Gordon.

TESTING THE SEED

A STAY AT HOME WEEK.

President Coolidge has called a National Outdoor Recreation conference.

That's all very good. Few people get all of the outdoor recreation they need.

But why not have a national Stay At Home conference or observe a Stay at Home Week if we can find a week some time during the year that is not being used for something else?

If we could, with such a conference or special week, induce even a small portion of the people to stay at home one whole week—making allowances for the time duty called them away—we could revolutionize this community in any other community.

Staying away from home is one of the greatest evils of our boasted twentieth century civilization.

We complain about our flapper daughters and our wayward sons roaming at large and where they wish; about no place for them to be amused, and then object to the kind of amusement they do find; but we never seem to think that parents—all parents—are the example that young people follow.

More young people would probably stay at home and find diversion if they could find their parents would give some thought and attention to making the home attractive for their children and their children's friends.

But perhaps we should not be too harsh with our roaming, restless parents; neither should we be too critical of our young people.

The demands upon parents are so great from their home and their multitudinous obligations on the outside that it is little wonder that they have drifted into a position where too little attention is paid to the home.

All parents are not guilty of being indifferent towards their homes, but the condition exists to such an extent that it is worthy of some thought and consideration.

A MONTH OF ROMANCE.

No other month, except perhaps June, is so popular with versifiers as May. The poet Thompson put it like this:

Among the changing months
May stands confessed,
The sweetest, and in fairest colors
Dressed.

The fresh shimmer of young leaves the brightness of spring flowers, the carols of birds eagerly seeking their mates, make it a season of romance.

Yet marriages during May have been considered unlucky. An old proverb runs, "Marry in May, rue the day." Perhaps the feeling arose from the idea that young men and maidens may be too sanguine of the future at this hopeful period. But not many modern lovers are held in by such old world notions.

In prosaic every day life, May is a month of hard work, when farmers and gardeners are busy delving, and factories are busy furnishing summer supplies. People ought to feel well and cheerful, stimulated by out door activities and happy to escape from the seclusion of winter.

A GREAT STEP FORWARD

The fact that the foreign governments interested in the reparations question, including Germany, have accepted the Dawes report as the basis for final settlement, is the greatest step toward better world conditions that has been made since the signing of the Armistice.

The United States should be proud that three American business men could evolve this plan in a few short months.

The honor of consummating such a program for the benefit of humanity falls to the lot of but few men.

HOME COMING.

Just as all true Kentuckians stand with bared head when the national anthem is played or sung in their presence, so will Kentuckians rise and stand uncovered whenever they are set a tingle by the strains of "My Old Kentucky Home."

This is the suggestion of Ad Kinkeads everywhere of Breckinridge Jones of St. Louis, president of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company, one of Kentucky's most loyal sons and at the same time a well known citizen of the Missouri metropolis. Mr. Jones for some years has made it a practice of doing this very thing wherever he goes and invariably finds other Kentuckians in any gathering who follow his example.

"The time has come to inaugurate this custom generally among Kentuckians," Mr. Jones says. "Foster's great song, written at the Old Kentucky Home near Bardonia in 1852, was first published in 1854, if my information is correct. This year, the seventh anniversary, coincides happily with Kentucky's 1924 Home Coming. The beginning of that event on June 16th should be the date for initiation of the custom."

"The Home Coming has turned the attention of the whole world to Kentucky. The state's famous song will be heard frequently. I hope that other Kentuckians will make the occasion one to do this honor to their song, their state and themselves."

Mr. Jones is a native of Boyle county and was graduated from Center College at Danville in 1875. The next year he taught school at Lawrenceburg. The following two years he studied law in the office of Hill & Alcorn at Stanford, and in 1878 moved to St. Louis where he was a member of the Missouri Legislature in 1883. He has been an officer of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company since its incorporation in 1890.

On June 16th, by way of compliment to Kentucky and the Kentuckians present, all hands, theater orchestra, organists, pianist and singers will be asked to play "My Old Kentucky Home" at the regular appearances. Kentuckians present will be called on to acknowledge the compliment by standing while their own anthem is being played.

WOMEN RESPONSIBLE

It has been estimated by some students of the merchandising game that 80 per cent of all retail buying is done by women. This may be a high estimate but a visit to the retail stores of any town or city is enough to convince one that the figures are not too high.

Women are taking a more and more prominent part in public affairs all the time. They are aiding now in many parts of the country in running the affairs of state. Even where they do not have the ballot they are playing a big part, individually and through their organizations, in the conduct particularly of local governments, yet in one field where they can do most to help build up their communities they may be overlooking their opportunity.

With the buying power in their hands they can do more for their communities by stanchly supporting their home business men than they can possibly do in any other way. In this respect women have a responsibility that they do not always appreciate. The women of a town, thru their buying power can make or break the town. It is in their power to make it a prosperous town or a dead town. When the women of a town acquire the mail order habit, the town may just as well begin making arrangements for its own obsequies.

A prosperous town means steady work, it means advancement in property values; it means good churches, schools and environment for the children, and its up to the women folk.

So far this season we have not heard much complaint of cut-worms.

GOOD ROADS NEEDED.

That the Nation needs good roads is admitted by all.

That the Government should build and maintain national highways, to which the States can and will build State trunk roads, they in turn to be fed by county and township roads, is agreed to by most students of the problem.

That they can not afford additional road taxes is contended by many farmers, already overburdened with expense and with prices of farm products below their proper levels. What is generally understood is that any campaign of national highway building must inevitably be paid for by the richest section of the country, by the most populous section where the greatest amount of tax money can be raised.

It is a fact that when national highways are built they will be paid for, very largely, by the northeast of the United States and the large cities. Yet 90 per cent of all the road traffic in the country will go over them. The farmer will pay about 10 per cent and industry and cities will pay the rest.

The most ardent advocates of national highways in the northeast sections of the land know this. It does not frighten them. They already pay the larger part of the Nation's bill. Why shouldn't they? If 100 people live in a small town and wish to build a quarter of mile of road to a nearby lake, on the shore of which lives one man, do the hundred people stop because the one man will benefit 150 per cent and pay but 1 per cent? They do not. They build the road. The northeastern section of the country, the thickly populated filled-with-factories localities, will benefit immeasurably from national highways. They will benefit, because the farmer will benefit, and they are happy that he will benefit.

The farmers can not afford not to have national highways when they get 90 per cent of the good and pay but 10 per cent of the cost!

30 YEARS AGO TO-DAY.

In looking through an old RECORDER of May 23, 1894—thirty years ago, we found the following: "The cold snap which put in an appearance here last Friday, May 18th, put the oldest inhabitant to brushing up his memory to ascertain if there was ever anything like this at this season, and he had to go back thirty years, when it occurred to him that (on May 21, '83, the ground was covered with two or three inches of snow. It will be remembered that that was a very fine crop year." Still you hear people say they never saw anything like the present season.

Also in the news from Union appeared the following: "Sitting in our Sanctum Sunday morning looking out upon the falling snow as it kissed the blushing rose and sang a funeral dirge over our frozen bunch beans, or else put the eternal calm of death on our early tomatoes, we thought no prettier scene had we ever looked upon. The snow came in bluffy flakes and falling among the blooming roses and snow balls and upon the green shrubs of grass, it was a sight long to be remembered."

"The southern part of this county was visited by a very severe hail storm on the afternoon of Tuesday of last week and did much damage to the growing wheat and other crops."

FIRE AT CO. INFIRMARY.

Heroic work on the part of those present prevented, what might have been a very disastrous fire at the County Infirmary, about five o'clock last Thursday evening. While Earl Aylor was cleaning the engine that furnishes the lights for that institution a spark from the engine ignited with some gasoline and the inside of the wash house was soon a mass of flames. By hard work and the application of a barrel of salt that was handy the fire was smothered, but not until it had been badly burned and the engine put out of commission.

The alarm of fire was sounded over the telephone and quite a number of Burlington citizens responded, but by the time they reached the scene the flames had been checked. Had the wash house gone up in flames, it would have taken a hard work to prevent the main building, which is but a short distance away, from being consumed.

Some men take their troubles home to wife and family—and take pride in it. Others believe the wife has enough troubles of her own and when they go home they leave all business and family cares at the office. Every business man in the world has his troubles and cares—and every man knows that 99 per cent of these troubles disappear after 24 hours. They are part of the game of life and the man who can meet them with a smile is the fellow who wins out. Trails are but stepping stones to triumph.

BOOTJACK PASSES OUT.

A rural paper ventures the query, what became of all the bootjacks that once were regarded as a household necessity. Like many other things once in common usage the bootjack seems to have disappeared and become as rare as the dodo.

When the boots were worn by men the bootjack was regarded as an essential in the pull-on process and it usually occupied a fixed place in the house. Most of the bootjacks were of the home made construction, consisting of a board from one end of which a V-shaped piece had been sawed to admit the heel of the boot and a block attached to the under side. Then there was the more pretentious iron bootjack with the fancy jaws. In those days the bootjack was a standby of the punsters and jokesmiths as a vapor to hurl at meowing felines that disturbed nocturnal rest.

When the wearing of boots went out of vogue the need for the bootjack went the same way and that may account for the disappearance of the old-time utility that the wearer of boots found it hard to get along without. An attic hunt or search thru the lumber-room might disclose a bootjack, but the chances are that few could be found in the limbo of unused and cast-off articles that are reminders of other days.

Bootjacks often figured in personal affairs of the time, being used as handy weapons of offense and defense. Armed with a bootjack one could well calculate to hold his own with an antagonist or put him down for the count with a well-directed blow with a boot-puller. All the signs indicate that the bootjack days are gone never to return and few persons probably could answer the query as to what became of the bootjacks then in almost universal use.

Alfred Jones, the popular mascot carrier on route two out of Burlington, and Miss Lydia Aylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry T. Aylor, of the Hebron neighborhood, were married in Covington, last Saturday, May 17th. After the ceremony the young couple left for a several days motor tour of the Blue Grass country. They will reside near Burlington. The Recorder with many other friends wish these splendid young people a long and happy married life.

The little four-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Hendley, who reside about a mile from town on the Petersburg pike, met with a serious accident last Sunday evening, when he was knocked down and stepped on by a cow, fracturing one of his legs. The little fellow was taken to the city Monday morning to have an X-ray taken of the injured leg.

In a letter from W. D. Sutton, former County Agent of this county, but now at Madisonville, Hopkins county, he says: "The folks here have been very good to me, and the work with them has been a pleasure. Have used me from the start. Wife and girl doing fine. Find enclosed check for $174.10 the Recorder." Will know a good thing when he sees it.

Out of about seventeen hundred dogs in the county, listed by the Tax Commissioner, only 972 owners have secured their license. The last grand jury recommended that the grand jury which meets in August, look after all delinquents. Better be safe than sorry—a dollar spent now may save you several after while.

Bert Sullivan, who was operated on one day last week at a Cincinnati hospital for an affection of the throat, is now at the home of his sister, Mrs. Asa McMullen, on the Burlington and Union road, and is getting along as well as could be expected. His many friends wish for him a speedy recovery.

The comedy "Never Weaken" by Harold Lloyd at the Burlington Theatre next Friday evening, May 23, is a three-reel play and is well worth the price of admission—besides "Bucking the Barrier" is a play that no one should miss. A Burlington May 23, and Petersburg May 24.

In the County Court, last week, J. M. Eddins qualified as Administrator of the estate of L. L. Eddins; Mrs. Blanch Phillips qualified as administratrix of William Phillips' estate; the Walton Bank & Trust Co. qualified as administrator of the estate of Claud Moore.

Miss Ruth Kelly, who taught in the High School at Grayson, Ky., returned home, last week, Prof. Skittman who taught in the Boone Co. High School two years ago, was the principal and has made a success of the school at that place.

The Baccalaureate Service to the graduating class of the Boone County High School will be delivered at the Burlington Baptist church next Sunday evening. His subject will be "Silent Rome and America."

There is plenty of work to do, but nobody to do it. Let George do it.

SUCH IS LIFE

By Dan Zeln
1 WAY 2 GET A RISE OUT OF TOMMY.

ONE WAY TO HELP
THE FARMER.

Soil fertility lies at the very basis of human life. As soil grows poor the human race dies out. America is consuming and wasting its soil fertility at a rapid rate.

We have come to the point where our land must be fed if it would feed us. The question asks itself: Can soil be kept indefinitely fertile? The answer is found in land that has been cropped for 2,000 years and more, and is yet very fertile. But such land is not found except in stable civilizations.

Within the memory of men now living, commercial fertilizers in America were hardly known. America now consumes over 6,000,000 tons of these every year. Of this, 89 per cent is from raw materials found in our own country, but the 20 per cent we buy from abroad costs us more than $35,000,000 every year.

This money goes mostly to Germany for potash and to Chile for nitrate. Potassium, nitrogen and phosphorus are the three elements most needed for soil sustenance, and these are what we seek in commercial fertilizers. Raw phosphorus we have in abundance. Indeed, the world comes to us for it, because our deposits now open, are very rich and easily worked.

And yet to help the farmer besides lending him money and marketing his products, is to ensure him cheap fertilizers as a national policy.

COURTESY MARKS
THE GENTLEMAN.

Courtesy sometimes seems to be pitifully lacking in this busy hurrying, rushing existence of which men appear to be a part. It might be said that courtesy is a wonderful attainment, which is much needed, much to be desired, and should be attained by all. An appealing definition of courtesy is "politeness originating in kindness and exercised habitually; courtliness; graciousness." Henry Drummond wrote of courtesy as "love in society." When courtesy is understood for what it is, it will not be considered trivial, but something to be greatly esteemed.

Never should one be in too great a hurry to be polite. If one is engaged in what is necessary and an interruption should come, there is no excuse for lack of courtesy. If one desires to be courteous and gracious, he should be able to differentiate between courteous and that which only appears to be courtesy. Some times apparent courtesy may be but artificiality, a poor varnish to cover selfish motives. One may crave admiration and favors, and by assuming a seeming courtliness may think he will profit thereby.

From outward appearances, in homes where culture and refinement are supposed to flourish, and where lofty ideals might be attained, courtesy is sometimes little practiced and real refinement is lacking. With this refinement one fails in the first essential that constitutes a gentleman or a lady. Courtesy should be taught and practiced in all grammar grades of our public schools as an asset to the lack of it in many of our homes.

CLEM KENDALL, Secty.

The weather bureau has announced the mean temperature for April and in some places the people who knock the weather say it was very mean.

Now if the college base ball pitchers will use their fine muscle in pitching this summer, they will win great applause in their home towns.

Voters who follow the dictates of their own conscience when they enter the voting booth are the kind who are going to save the country from itself.

One thing about this immigration agitation is that it has taught many of us that there are two "m's" in immigration and only one in emigration.

The home town paper does not claim to be so wise as the oyle on the big city newspapers, but it does not know so many things that aren't so.

Probably the tramp element at least can be depended upon to keep away from a place named "Muscle Shoals."

Richard Stephens and Hugh Ryle, of Rabbit Hash, were business visitors to the Hub, Tuesday.

CHRONIC INFLUENZA

Influenza is usually a short, sharp disease that, if it neither merges into pneumonia nor seriously impairs the heart, subsides after a few days of great discomfort, leaving the patient apparently as well as ever. Occasionally, however, and not so rarely as was formerly thought—and not so rarely as was formerly thought—the patient does not fully recover. The acute symptoms disappear, and the doctor dismisses the patient with the assurance that the physical depression and the feeling of "falling sickness" that still remain will gradually pass if he will take care of himself and faithfully take the tonic prescribed for him. But the patient does not get well; his weakness and disinclination to think or to work persist; his determination to resume his normal activities is of no avail; he simply can't do it. Finally he concludes that he is breaking down, and if he is wise he goes back to the doctor for examination and advice.

The examination shows that his temperature is a degree or two below normal, though occasionally it makes brief excursions a degree or two above; the pulse is likely to be irregular, palpating on exertion and dropping a beat occasionally—a circumstance that directs attention to the heart, which is found to be weak; moreover, the blood pressure is usually too low. The appetite may remain good, but digestion is slow; pains in the joints are common, and the patient is often wakeful at night and drowsy through the day. He may be more or less irritable or too much depressed in spirits to care one way or the other. He may have repeated though slight nosebleeds, but nosebleed is not common.

The treatment of this distressing condition must be directed to removing the cause, which is either chronic poisoning by the toxins of influenza and catarrhal germs lodged in some part of the respiratory tract or a form of auto-intoxication owing to sluggish and incomplete action of the kidneys or the bowels. The hidden focus of the germs may be in the tonsils, in the nose or in the mouth. If it eludes search, the system may be helped to undertake the task of exterminating the germs by means of an appropriate vaccine, preferably made from the secretions of the patient's own throat. In some cases, curiously enough, Nature does the work herself by giving the patient another acute attack of influenza, the reaction to which is strong enough to cure the chronic as well as the acute trouble. The autointoxication, if present, must be combated by diuretics, rascal oil and diet.

FINANCING FARM MORTGAGES.

January 1, 1920, census bureau showed $7,857,700,000 farm mortgage debt.

The census enumerators only returned $4,003,767,192, having secured returns on only about half the mortgaged debt.

Based on these facts, farm mortgage debts Jan. 1, 1924, were estimated at $10,500,000,000.

The loans carried on farm mortgage debts are distributed as follows: Carried by farm mortgage bankers, $2,450,000,000; farm loan companies $1,600,000,000; life insurance companies, $1,672,000,000; fraternal insurance companies $2,884,864,313; federal land banks, joint stock land banks $392,638,863. This is a remarkable showing of small percentage of farm mortgage debt mostly held by farm loan bankers and insurance companies with aggregate farm values as set forth at $70,000,000,000.

American agriculture is operated on about 15 per cent of borrowed capital and 85 per cent of capital owned by farmers themselves.

This is a remarkable contrast to all other lines of business industries and corporations run on an average with 50 per cent or more of borrowed capital.

The Senate by a vote of 59 to 26 more than the required two-thirds majority, passed the soldiers' bonus bill over the President's veto.

The bill now becomes a law automatically, the House having taken similar action last week.

Thus ends the five-year fight to provide for a bonus for the 4,000,000 veterans of the World War, in the course of which a bonus bill has been passed in the House eight times and the Senate five times. Twice the House has passed a bonus bill over an Executive veto, while the Senate sustained the late President Harding's veto in the previous session.

As in the House, party lines were obliterated in the vote taken in the Senate to-day.

Some men limit their interest in theft to deciding that their wives don't need any new hat.

OUR PROBLEM, TOO

Oswald Ryan, a member of a commission headed by Secretary Davis of the president's cabinet which in investigating the immigration question in Europe, says that the invasion of alien copies is more deadly than the invasion of a hostile army.

How many people had ever viewed the immigration problem from that standpoint?

We of small and peaceful communities have never concerned ourselves about immigration. We always have felt that it was a question far removed from our lives and one which should occupy the attention of the large centers of population.

Recent discussion of the question, since immigration legislation has been before congress, has made us realize that it is a question of grave import and great significance.

Anything that threatens our spiritual as well as our political unity is a matter of concern to every American citizen.

Restrictions on the stream of unassimilable races of southern Europe and Asia, that has been flowing into the United States for the past thirty years, now appears to be imperative.

Courage on the part of our legislators is needed to do that which is best and not that which is most expedient, for the future of the country.

PRaises KENTUCKY
POULTRY WORKERS.

Interest in poultry in this state is unusually keen and the industry is developing along unusual lines according to Homer T. Jackson, Associate Editor of the Reliable Poultry Journal writing in a recent issue of that magazine. Seventy out of one hundred and twenty counties now have standardization in some form and it is doubtful if there is another state in the union where there is as widespread interest in standard bred poultry.

Mr. Jackson explains the fact that Kentucky is a state of poultry breeders rather than of poultry keepers and remarks upon the tendency for dual-purpose breeds to hold their own here. While many counties have standardized in White or Barred Rocks, White Wyandottes, Rhode Island Reds and "All Breeds" not a single one has standardized in Leghorns, though there are many commercial Leghorn flocks.

Much credit is given the county poultry associations for their activities, and the state association for its organizing work among the county members. The sales methods of the associations are especially commended.

"The interest in poultry which exists in Kentucky," says Mr. Jackson further, "and the rapid progress that is taking place there, must be credited quite largely to the influence of the poultry department at the University of Kentucky at Lexington. Kentucky is not one of the leading agricultural states, and the agricultural college does not have the unlimited funds for developing its work. By comparison the poultry department shares liberally with other departments in the college budget, but nevertheless is greatly restricted in its activities. The poultry plant on the experimental farm comprises only eight acres of land, and buildings and equipment are extremely limited. However, Prof. Martin is making excellent use of the facilities he has and the extension work is most efficiently handled."

FOUR MORE COUNTIES
RECEIVE PRIZE TRIPS.

Meade, Henderson, Breckinridge and Daviess counties have been included in the list of counties which will be given free transportation for Junior Livestock Judging teams to the State Fair at Louisville this fall according to an announcement by R. N. Hudson, President and General Manager, and L. W. Mack, General Passenger agent of the Louisville, Henderson, and St. Louis Railroad.

Members of the judging team will be selected from the county by the county agents in cooperation with representatives from the Ky. College of Agriculture. Each team is composed of three members and one alternate, all of whom will receive the free transportation to the fair. These prize trips make it possible for boys and girls who might otherwise be deterred to become judges and in addition enjoy the privileges of seeing the state fair this fall.

Another case where the editor left town occurred when the political orator referred to the benefits of his policies as descending on the people "like rain," but the printer got it "likker in."

Although the height of folly has been reached by many, thousands still compete for the distinction.

VEGETABLES ARE THE BEST SPRING TONIC.

The best spring tonics are fresh vegetables according to Miss Eleanor Enright, nutrition specialist of the Kentucky College of Agriculture. In our grandfather's day sulphur, molasses and sassafras tea were a part of the spring diet but modern mothers supply the spring tonic with fresh vegetables.

"Too often the diet of the winter months consists mainly of potatoes, meats and cereal foods," says Miss Enright, "and frequently there is almost a total lack of leafy vegetables so that the body is deprived of the necessary minerals and its general condition is lowered. Therefore the need for greens is even greater during the spring months than at any other time of year. The garden should be planted so that the winter diet will have a supply of vegetables, for if the diet is rich in leafy foods there is no reason why the condition of the body should be any poorer in the spring than at any other time."

"Many people do not care for vegetables and their health suffers for it. In most cases this dislike is due to faulty cooking. It should be our aim in cooking vegetables to save the food value as well as the appearance and flavor. It is necessary to know what type of cooking is most suitable for each vegetable in order that these aims be carried out."

"Cabbage may be used as an example for cabbage is one of our most valuable vegetables and is one which is frequently ruined by long slow cooking. In conserving the value of vegetables steaming is preferable to boiling, but as we consider attractiveness and palatability we will not use this method for cooking strong flavored vegetables like cabbage, cauliflower and onions. When these vegetables are steamed they develop the characteristic unpleasant appearance and waste of vegetables that have been cooked too long. Cabbage should be cooked as quickly as possible in a fairly large amount of water. If the leaves are separated so that the heat gets to them quickly the cooking process will be shortened. Strong flavored vegetables should be cooked in an uncovered container. If a potato is cooked with a strong vegetable it absorbs much of the undesirable odor which otherwise would be given off and perhaps be retained by unpolishes and draperies."

No man's honesty is really tested until he has a checkered coat or a Canadian quarter, but doesn't.

BASE BALL.

Burlington traveled to Petersburg last Saturday and engaged that team in a contest featured on both sides by good rivalry and errors in abundance. Although featured as aforesaid, by errors the game was both interesting and exciting, for each team had its turn in holding the lead.

Petersburg scored in the first inning due to some aggressive base running on the part of White, and from then on until the sixth it was a see-saw affair. In this inning however, the Burlington boys scored six runs aided by errors of various descriptions. At this juncture Ruth, the veteran of many seasons, was thrown into the breach, and he succeeded in stopping Burlington to a slow walk.

The two teams went into the 9th with the score 8-6 in favor of Burlington. At this juncture the Petersburg contingency sent in Jarrell to pinch-hit and trotted out their star rouser "Gene" Berkshire. "Ding" Rouse pitching for Burlington was effected by a temporary fit of wildness and walked Jarrell, Ruth went out, Keim was hit by a pitched ball, White out, and then with the count at three and two and destiny hanging on the next ball pitched, Cox drove a pretty single into right, scoring two runs and tying the score. Manager McWethy then scored his left fielder with a double to right and the game was over. Final score 9-8 in favor of Petersburg.

The outstanding features of the game were the pitching of Wilson until he twisted his arm, and the pinch hits of Cox and McWethy. It is to be hoped that Wilson's arm is not hurt seriously.
Final summary—Hits—Burlington 9; Petersburg 6; Two base hits Nixon Garnett (2) Shinkle and McWethy. Umpires—Mahan and White.

HEBRON WINS EIGHT TO FIVE.

Regular schedule game between Hebron and Bellevue called at 2:30 with batteries as follows: Joe Brady and Snelling for Bellevue and Bullock and Edgar Goodridge for Hebron with Doc Goodridge relieving Bullock at the seventh.

Hits off Brady seven; off Bullock three; off Doc Goodridge two. Base on balls off Bullock 1; off Brady 1; off Goodridge 1.
A running catch by Howard Acker and home runs by Riley and Bullock being the sensational features.

It is the general opinion of the fans and players at Hebron that if the Boone county league is to be what it should be, that the members of the Executive Board should strive to keep peace rather than cause trouble.

YEGGMEN FOILED

Yeggmens were foiled in an attempt to rob W. E. Tewell's grocery store at Richmond, Monday night. It was about midnight when Russell Tewell, who was sleeping in the store was awakened by a noise on the outside, thinking it might be some boys he got up and made an inspection, but saw no one. Presently he saw the glare of a flash light and kept quiet until he heard a key trying to unlock the door when he fired through the door two or three times. After everything had become quiet he opened the door, when he found a man lying on the ground in front of the store mortally wounded, a bullet from a 45-caliber pistol having pierced his bowels. Young Tetwell notified the neighbors over the telephone who responded and helped to care for the wounded man.

The wounded man was rushed to a hospital in Covington, but it is reported there is no hope for his recovery. He gave his name and said he lived in Covington.
Just after the wounded man had been removed, two men in a truck who are supposed to be confederates, drove up and stopped, and on learning what had happened speeded to toward Covington. Sheriff Hume and his Deputy, Thos. Percival, were notified and were soon on the hunt of the fleeing truck.

Road working days are becoming popular in Rockcastle and Madison counties under the leadership of county agent Robert F. Spence. Two free road working days have been put on each month since the work started in January and nearly 400 people, seven teams, a grader, a tractor and a stone crusher and roller worked gratis at the last meeting. A moving picture was made of the project.

SOPHISTICATION AGAINST SIMPLICITY

City people take pride in being more "sophisticated." They are often too much so for their own good. If you take them to see some very fine entertainment, they have often become critical that they can't enjoy it. In country life people get their satisfactions out of simpler and more lasting pleasures. The country boy should be just as happy watching the antics of the calves in the barnyard, as the city boy is in watching the performances of a highly paid acrobat in some show. The fellow who watches the simple things in his ordinary environment becomes very observant, so that he sees many things that escape the eye of the city fellow who has to be amused all the time to keep him good natured.

The country woman sits on her porch and hears the sweet songs of the birds. They have just as thrilling a quality as the finer opera singer that her city cousin has heard the other day. The country woman can hear those birds every day, and the more she hears them, the more she is fascinated by their ways and finds pleasure in studying them. Meanwhile the city woman can't find time or money to make a journey to the opera house every day.

It is a more interesting thing to cultivate a garden and watch it grow and expand and become beautiful and fruitful, than it is to stand on a city street and watch the crowd go by. The garden gives one the sense of triumph and achievement, while the city crowd just satisfies curiosity and one soon gets tired of it. Thus in city life you get pleasure from being a spectator in life's show while in country life you get pleasure from taking hold and winning triumphs for yourself. The latter is much more enriching and is a surer basis for happiness.

PERSISTENT ADVERTISING.

If a traveling salesman were asked what was the first principle of success in his business, he might say that it was to call on the trade regularly and often. A salesman might not be so polished or fluent as his competitors, but if he was "Johnny on the Spot," if he managed to get around about twice as often as his rivals, he would pick up a lot of business.

A prospective customer might feel that his lines were all right and that they did not care to upset their previous business arrangements to deal with this fellow. But if the new man was right on deck twice as often as the other fellows, there would be times when his personal solicitation would land an order that was lying around loose waiting for some one to pick it up. And once concerns got to dealing with him, they would keep on and his frequent calls would strengthen the habit of buying of him. The business would appreciate and respond to the enterprise of the man who solicits business persistently.

This is one of many reasons why newspaper advertising brings such splendid returns. Its solicitation is more regular and frequent than other forms of salesmanship.

The average person will be likely to see an advertisement in a newspaper much more frequently than he or she sees the display in a store window. The newspaper advertisement is seen at hours when people are at leisure and can read and think about it, while the show window display is apt to be seen when people are in a hurry and can't stop to consider it.

The effect of advertising then, is to keep up a constant solicitation. The persistence with which it calls attention to what is on hand, and the salesman who calls over and over again is likely eventually to make many permanent customers, so the public almost invariably follows the suggestions given by the persistent advertiser.

THE COUNTRY GIRL'S

A recent bulletin of the University of Wisconsin, speaks of the surplus of men in the rural districts, and it accounts for that partly on the theory that very few girls become wage earners in rural communities, but many migrate to the cities to earn an independent living. That comes hard on many fine young country fellows who are looking for good wives.

Do these girls gain anything when they make the change? They get more pay than they can earn in the country. But to get a comfortable boarding place, they have to pay very high. Their expenses are much more than that of the girl whose family lives in the city and who can usually get board at cost in her father's family. Many of these girls would be better off financially, and their chances for a good marriage would be improved, if they were willing to do housework in some good country town family.

Oliver Wendell Holmes, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States has rendered a decision which defines the provisions of law as it relates to the fundamental of property rights. He holds that prohibition enforcement officer would not be violating the Constitution if they arrested persons for violating the law openly and on their property.

The proposed amendment to the Constitution regarding child labor is not, as many suppose, an anti-child labor law. It is simply a provision giving Congress the right to regulate child labor, experience with the Supreme Court having proved that under the Constitution at present Congress cannot legislate on this subject for the states.

One million children between 10 and 15 years of age were reported during 1920 as gainfully employed. Considerably more than one-third of these were under 14 years of age. State child labor laws have improved during the last decade, but 11 states still allow children under 16 to work from nine to 11 hours a day; nine states do not prohibit all children under 14 from working in both factories and stores; 35 states allow children to go to work without a common school education; four states do not protect children under 16 from night work.

Those opposed to child labor legislation will cry that the amendment is an invasion of state rights; those who see the question from the children's side will contend that the government has a right to protect its future citizens from greed and too early labor.

Once the amendment passes Congress, it seems very doubtful that even those states where child labor is rife, will fail to ratify it. Many of those states have regulations as good as any the national government would propose. National child labor legislation will affect all states alike, if passed.

Far deeper than the economic side is the question of the future of this nation; children who labor cannot learn; children who do not learn cannot be good citizens. It is the inalienable right of every child to get a good education, to have his or her fair chance in the world. To deny children this right, because of a mere political difference as to what is and what is not an encroachment of States' rights will hardly appeal to fair minded men and women just as much and just as good American citizens in child labor states as elsewhere.

PROTECTING BIRD LIFE

Every country youngster should be brought up with the idea that the welfare of the rural regions depends to a large extent on protecting the birds that destroy insect pests. Boys that go gunning for birds or those who rob birds' nests should be sharply blamed for acts that are harmful to the interests of their own homes.

Also every congressman and legislator should realize that the country people demand strict protection of their birds. Many migratory birds that are protected well in this section, are yet destroyed in others to which they migrate, and all federal and state laws protecting those birds should be rigidly enforced.

OLD THEORIES UPSET.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat has recently completed an interesting house-to-house survey of 110,000 homes in and around St. Louis, covering several questions as to the type of news demanded, the results of advertising and the effect among automobile owners. Over 60 per cent of the women asserted that they had more time to read newspapers in the morning than in the evening. In many instances it was found the evening paper advertising was read the next morning.

The great and increasing popularity of the motion picture, evening entertainments, and the automobile has come at a natural phase of social progress, but it has demonstrated that the average family now takes less time than ever before for evening reading. The rush of household duties pertaining to the evening meal is followed by a hasty departure in quest of relaxation and pleasure elsewhere. Labor-saving devices for the home—washing machines and vacuum cleaners—have given the women more time to read the evening newspaper.

Too many people are throwing mud nowadays, and not enough are digging ditches in it.

"IDIOT"

"Idiot" is an interesting word which is derived from the Greek. The idiot was a class of persons whose time was devoted entirely to their own affairs. They did not even exercise their right to vote. Idiot today means someone who is mentally affected. Failure to vote is perhaps a part of the old and new definitions.

Father Sage Says:

"The most idealistic person in the world is the young man just twenty-one—but watch him change during the next ten years."

POLITICAL APATHY

It was a notable fact that in spite of the tremendous importance of the recent German elections, the people regarded this fateful contest with apathy. Thereby they show that they have not made much progress yet in the art of self government.

A country's fitness for self government depends on the interest the people take in politics. It is sometimes argued in the United States that people should be forced by fines or other penalties to vote. But when a person habitually fails to vote, he shows a lack of interest which often proves that he is not qualified to vote intelligently. Probably the best way is to let him alone, until such time as he wakes up to his own self interest and civic duty, and proceeds to qualify himself for citizenship by intelligent reading.

If you understand what you're trying to do your job is half done.

Mr. and Mrs. Hazel Walton and little daughter, of Ludlow, were Saturday night and Sunday guests of relatives here.

Rev. Royer wife and daughter, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Getker, were the dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Dye, last Sunday.

Miss Lydia Aylor, the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Aylor, and Mr. Alfred Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Jones of East Bond pike, a popular young man of Burlington, were married in the city last Saturday morning. They left for a short honeymoon trip to Lexington and Frankfort. Best wishes and congratulations are extended to this young couple with the hope that the future holds for them many years of happiness.

Rev. Royer delivered a very interesting sermon to the graduating class of Hebron High School last Sunday night at the church. The nine graduates and the other high school pupils marched up the aisle headed by their teachers Prof. Lucy and Mrs. J. L. Fowler, all singing "Onward Christian Soldiers." The large audience was favored with a beautiful solo by Miss Mabel Royer and a duet by Misses Alberta Jones and Myrtle Wilson. The church was carefully decorated for the occasion. There were five young ladies and four young men of the graduating class. Misses Alice Graves, Lorena Goodridge, Georgia Hays, Myrtle Blacker and Myrtle Wilson, and Joseph Bullock, Joseph Aylor, Robt. Hafer and Lloyd McGlasson.

Miss Olive Smith, who was confined at Spears hospital for about three months, is at home and we are glad to say has improved very much and the wishes to thank her friends who manifested so much interest in her during her stay in that place.

We wish her a speedy recovery.

J. WESTON ALLEN

J. Weston Allen, former Attorney General of Massachusetts, who destroyed the fish trust, drove Charles Pond into jail, caused the removal of District Attorneys Feltner and Tufts for malfeasance and finally broke up the Boston blackmail ring, has been appointed general counsel of the Citizens' Federal Research Bureau, opened by Frank A. Vanderlip for the purpose of "driving rottenness out of government."

"ADAM'S APPLE"

"Adam's apple" is the name given to the projecting cartilage in a man's throat. It refers to an old tradition that the apple which Eve gave to Adam in the Garden of Eden stuck in his throat because it was forbidden fruit. Eve is to be congratulated for having swallowed hers.

FARMERS AND IMMIGRATION.

The complaint has been made that restricted immigration makes farm labor scarce and thus tends to increase the cost of labor on the farm.

Authorities on the subject assert that the contrary is true—that restrictions placed on immigration has helped to maintain at a higher level the economic condition of farm labor and to give the farmers a better home market.

While farm labor has not been as plentiful during the past two or three years as it was previously, and while the farmer has been compelled to pay more for labor than formerly, it requires a wide stretch of the imagination to see how immigration has had any effect.

Farm labor costs naturally went up after the war on account of higher living expenses and the high wages which were paid in industrial centers.

Manufacturing interests increased wages as the demand for labor increased and in the due course of time drew men from the farm. Consequently, farmers had to meet the offers of other business or lose their help.

The view that immigration has affected the farmer is far-fetched. Restricted immigration has been in effect two years, but farm wages were mounting before that time.

It is largely propaganda of a few selfish manufacturers who clamor for a protected market in which to sell, but want the barriers let down so that they may employ the cheap labor of Europe and thus accumulate larger profits.

PSYCHOLOGY OF BOOSTING

It does not require a very good memory to recall the time when men shied at the word psychology.

Now it rolls off the tongue of the average after-dinner speaker without any apparent effort on the part of the speaker.

Fifteen years ago it was regarded as something that should be discussed only by the very learned and as a fit subject for college and university study.

But today the man in the street speaks of psychology fluently and never acts as if he had said or done anything out of the ordinary.

The dictionary says that psychology is the science of mind.

And we hear every day about the psychology of this, that and the other thing.

Most of all, perhaps in everyday use, psychology is connected with boosting and knocking.

Reduced to its simplest terms, the psychology of knocking is the constant reiteration of the same complaint about any given subject that creates a state of mind among the people which leads them to accept it as "Gospel."

The same holds true with respect to coostiny. Incessant and tireless boosting eventually causes optimistic views to prevail.

Most anything within reason is possible through right thinking and right talking. We can produce the proper mental attitude with optimistic talk.

Over 200,000 pounds of live poultry were marketed in car lot shipments from Crittenden county this spring at an average of 20 cents a pound according to reports gathered by H. K. Warth, county agent.

TO INSPECT WHEAT FIELDS FOR PUREBRED SEED.

With prospects for a 50 per cent reduction in wheat production this year good seed wheat may be scarce this fall according to Ralph Kenney, crops specialist of the Kentucky College of Agriculture. All farmers who have pure varieties of wheat free from contamination by rye, cockle, cheat, wild onions and other noxious weeds should have the fields inspected so that the wheat may be classed as "inspected seed."

Over 40,000 bushels of inspected seed were available last year according to the Crops Department, of the two varieties Ashland and Bluestem. These varieties will be included in the inspected wheat this year and Fultz, Fulcrater, Currell's Providence, and other common varieties will be added to the list. The specialist emphasizes the fact that fields which are to be inspected must trace back to a reliable source of pure seed in order to be of sufficient merit to be included in the list of inspected seed fields.

The Experiment Station offers the service of inspection of wheat fields intended for seed purposes this year free of cost, following the procedure of previous years. If there is no county agent in the county at the time of inspection it will be necessary for the owner of the field to meet the inspector at the train and take him back to the station after completing the work. All growers who desire the services of the inspector should confer with their county agent at once or write to Ralph Kenney, Kentucky Experiment Station, Lexington.

TERRACES AND ALFA STOPS SHEET WASHING

How five broad base terraces, ground limestone, acid phosphate and alfalfa saved the field of H. E. Beebe, Pembroke, Christian county after he had tried every other means to prevent washing is the story told in a letter to Earl G. Welch, engineering specialist of the Kentucky College of Agriculture. The field contains eight acres and Mr. Beebe says that he had been unable to control erosion although he "sweet blood" trying to stop the formation of gullies by the use of cover crops, brush, corn stalks, straw, manure and the like, but to no advantage.

Finally in July 1923 county agent H. G. Cress came to the rescue and the two men then used a Kentucky variable grade terrace level, laid out five broad base terraces on the field, and filled the gullies at the points where the terraces crossed them with a slip scraper. The terraces were given a fall of about four inches to a hundred feet so that the water would run around the slope at a low velocity and not carry soil with it.

Following this Mr. Beebe used two tons of lime and 200 pounds of lime and 200 pounds of acid phosphate to the acre (the previous crop had received 400 pounds of acid phosphate per acre) and an excellent stand of alfalfa was secured both on and between the terraces. This spring the alfalfa is excellent and only where the soil was badly eroded before the terraces were built is the stand thin.

Just after the terraces were completed a very heavy rain fell which washed out bridges and flooded corn fields but the newly constructed terraces did not break and there was no washing on the field. The soil of the field is a heavy clay loam and although the slope of the hill is only five feet to one hundred the soil washes very readily. So satisfactory are these terraces that Mr. Beebe is now terracing other fields and intends to terrace his entire farm.

"Hundreds of fields in western Kentucky as being ruined by sheet erosion and gullying," says Mr. Welch, "yet these losses could be stopped and the soil rebuilt by terracing and the growing of legumes. The variable grade terrace costs only $2.50 to build, and terracing the field is a matter of only a few hours work. Write for free information to Extension Division, College of Agriculture, Lexington, Ky."

Junior Week will be held at the University of Kentucky this year the week of June 9, with functions beginning Monday morning and continuing through Saturday. Between 300 and 400 boys and girls from all parts of the state will arrive here at that time to take a one week course of instruction at the university and to enter the various demonstration contests.

One of the features of the week will be the boys and girls demonstration contests which will begin on Tuesday and continue until all teams have demonstrated before the judges. On Friday afternoon the public demonstration will be given when the two best teams of boys and the two best teams of girls will enter the finals. Prizes amounting to three hundred dollars for the boys and three hundred dollars for the girls will be divided among the demonstration teams, the first prize being thirty dollars.

Classes for the boys will be given in the various subjects of soils, farm management, dairy, machinery, poultry and livestock judging for two hours each day during the week, while the girls will attend classes in clothing, foods and home furnishings.

From six o'clock in the morning until nine o'clock at night the boys and girls will be entertained and busy. They will have rooms in the student dormitories and will be housed six o'clock for room inspection and setting up exercises immediately following. The following day program will then be carried out:

7:00 a. m. Breakfast.
8:00 a. m. Chapel.
9:00-11:00 a. m. Classes.
11:00-12:00 p. m. Rooms.
12:00-1:30 p. m. Dinner and rest period.
Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday girls will have music while the boys have news writing instruction.
2:30 p. m. Boys will have music while the girls have news writing.
3:30 p. m. Plays, games and athletic contests.
5:00 p. m. Supper.
6:00 p. m. Vespers.
7:00 p. m. Moving pictures.
9:00 p. m. Bedtime.

WHY CHILDREN SHOULD DRINK WATER.

Water, is, in most cases, the first liquid to enter the stomach of the newborn baby. It may be thirty-six hours before the mother's milk comes during which the baby is given cool, boiled water at two hour intervals. Catnip tea, weak coffee, sweetened water and the concoctions of bygone days are now condemned and are considered very harmful for the baby, and he grows older water should be offered him at frequent intervals between nursings. The run-about child should be taught to drink water between nursings; often a child may appear to be hungry when he is merely thirsty. Mothers must see that pure children are furnished with school drinking water while at school. It is useless to urge a child to drink water and then fail to provide it for him. Water is as essential for the growth and development of children as it is for flowers and plants.

There are six reasons why plenty of water—six glasses a day as a minimum—is necessary for health: 1. Water softens food, making it easier to digest and absorb. 2. It dilutes the digestive juices so that they can act on every particle of food. 3. It dilutes the blood and lymph and keep the membranes of the body moist. 4. It regulates body temperature.

5. It is an important factor in removing body wastes, thus preventing the accumulation of poisons in the system. The lungs, skin, kidney and intestines. 6. It replaces the loss of water in the body tissues. Two thirds of the body weight is water, and to remain healthy this proportion must be maintained.

Methodist Family United
By a vote of 802 against 13 the report of the joint commission of unification was adopted by the Methodist General Conference in session at Springfield, Mass., and reunion with the Methodist Episcopal church South from which the northern body split 30 years ago became a reality.

Joy was unbounded. Tears streamed from the eyes of the delegates. The victory for progress was more complete than anyone had dreamed. The next step to complete unification will be to call a general conference of the Methodist church, South. Under the provisions of the joint report the two churches are made one church with one general conference and two jurisdictional conferences with a judicial council to pass on the acts of both. All the present bishops both north and south will become bishops of the united church without further action. The general conference will meet quadrennially at the time of the jurisdictional conference will follow.

The denomination split 80 years ago over the question of Bishop Andrews holding slaves which had been left as a bequest to his wife. As it was illegal in the State of Georgia to free slaves, the bishop had a difficult question to settle. Naturally, there was widespread variance of opinion and the controversy turned out to be the rock on which the church was wrecked.

10,000 MURTERS LAST YEAR
Statistics compiled by the Prudential Insurance Company covering most of the cities indicates an increase in murder from 9 per 100,000 of population in 1922 to 10.2 in 1923. They show that the homicide rate has doubled in twenty years. The number of murders committed in this country in 1923 shows that we are slowly drifting toward a degree of acquaintance in crime and criminal traits which, if not sternly dealt with, will permeate every stratum of society. The percentage in New York is half that of Chicago, about one-third that of Cincinnati, while Memphis heads the list—12 times as many as New York. Jacksonville, Fla., a close second Nashville, Tenn. St. Louis has four times as many as New York in proportion to population.

The records show that the indiscriminate sale of fire arms, especially by mail order houses is one of the most fruitful sources of murderous crimes.

THE WASTE PAPER PROBLEM.
What to do with the waste paper that drifts about the modern town is one of the worst problems. Careful communities clean up the streets regularly, only to see them get littered up again soon. People living along streets where many children pass on the way to school, find their yards and lawns littered up by the youngsters who throw away candy and fruit bags.

The man who owns a vacant lot may clean it up, and then in a few weeks he may find it all marred with paper waste, which seems to blow from everywhere. People throw away wrappers, parts of newspapers, etc., and many of them treat their home town streets about as if they thought they were a pigpen.

Paper should no more be thrown away on the streets or on vacant land than you should throw it around on your living room floor. If you have a bit of waste paper in your hand as you walk the streets, take it home and burn it, or throw it in a waste can for removal to a suitable dump.

The Joy rider out into the country is often the grief walker back after the smash-up.

Her many friends here wish her a speedy recovery.

ONE BAD CORNER TURNED

A serious peril was averted when the German people voted for a parliamentary majority favorable to the Dawes reparation plan. The parties in Germany that favor a monarchy have been preaching for five years that that country's troubles are due to the republican form of government.

The way to regain prosperity, according to this theory, is to put an emperor back on the throne, and let the old military crowd run things again, which means getting ready for another war.

The result of these elections would indicate that the German people had had all the fighting they want for the present generation, and as if they must some effort to pay for the damage they did. It is the only way for peace. If the idea is established that nations can reduce neighboring countries to ruins, and then escape paying for their escapades, it will not be long before there will be more wars.

Here is a bungalow with a quaint, foreign air, and such a little home as you will find, should you wander down the highways and byways of foreign places. But it has a typical floor plan.

Floor Plan.

such as is possible only through advanced American comforts and conveniences. Character has been given to the exterior by a judicious use of color in the stucco. It is not one plain color, but mottled, through varying the colors placed with the stucco mixture. The result is an exterior that gives the weathered effect that gracefully comes with long exposure to wind and weather. The roof could be of dark maroon, brown or dark green, and the roofing used could be either red cedar shingles, or prepared composition in shingles or roll shape.

The recessed porch gives into a vestibule, with convenient clothes closet, and thence into the living room. This latter has a fireplace and the open, airy effect given by the colonnaded doorway leading into the dining room gives an effect of spaciousness which is pleasant and adds greatly to the effect of the furnishings. The dining room has a triple-lighted window, and right off it is the compact kitchen, well-lighted, and with shelves lessening the floor space required.

Off the dining room we reach a hall which connects with the two bedrooms and bathroom, making this part of the house thoroughly private and out of the range of casual callers' view. The closet space is ample, and one could remove one bedroom closet from its present jutting-out position in the hall and place it over the space now occupied by the stairway to the basement. There is a rear porch and vestibule, permitting outside icing of the refrigerator.

The landscaping of the lot is very effective, the twin cypresses flanking the recessed porch entrance helping to accentuate the general touch of quaintness. The handling of the window recesses, too, helps carry out this idea.

One would naturally strive for the simplest possible furnishings in fitting out this home for occupancy. You will appreciate the fact that many of our quaint cottages in America are borrowed almost bodily, as to exterior design, from peasant houses in foreign countries. But fortunately American well-being and conditions of life enable us to give homes of this kind a character typically modern, and while we may be better able to furnish them comfortably, we ought to strive to maintain that degree of simplicity in the furnishings which would make the home interior be in keeping with the simplicity and quaintness of the exterior.

Thus, our interior walls might be finished in rough plaster, of lime or magnesia, or using some of the specialty textured mixtures now on the market, and which give effective "textured" walls that have more character than the plain, smooth finished wall. Some of these "textured" walls are sanded, following the simple early American fashion; some are very coarse, as in Spanish and Italian home walls; and some have sand dusted on after rough troweling, giving a lustrous effect. The walls might be tinted afterward in neutral tones of ecru, gray, gray-blue or cream; even where wall paper is preferred it is best to confine one's self to the simpler patterns.

The furniture should be simple of line. Early American Colonial style

"I've often offered to take the management of things, but you know you've taken it all away, and seemed to think I wanted to push you out of your place," said Sister Mary.

There is nothing that is able to hold its place in the world without constant struggle. One of the keenest of all struggles is that between the established generation and the rising generation, whether of plants or animals or men.

Long ago, Abram and Lot, the older generation, and the younger, found that "the land was not able to bear them, that they might dwell together," and they separated, the young man going to live in the cities of the plains, the older one going to live in the country of Canaan. Their example has been followed by many millions since. The age-old struggle between father and son is embittered by the fact that neither recognizes it as a part of the natural working out of nature's laws, but each regards his own case as unique. There is in hardy families an interval of from ten to fifty years between the time the son feels capable of taking over the management of the farm or business or profession and the time the father feels ready to step out. During all this period it is to the young man's interest to push his father out of his place, and it is to the older man's interest to hold his own. The result is usually much the same as that observed when a young tree grows up close to its parent oak. After both have struggled in vain to monopolize all the sunlight and water within their area, they compromise by growing normally on the side away from each other and by dying off on the side next to each other—so that you will never see a perfectly developed oak unless you find one that stands alone.

The struggle is bitterest where the father comes into his fullest earning power late in life—notably in the professions of medicine and of the law.

"An unreacted observer," says Dr. Johnson, "expects the love of parents and children to be constant and equal; but this kindness seldom continues beyond the years of infancy; in a short time the children become rivals to their parents. Benefits are alloyed by reproaches, and gratitude debased by envy." The opinions of children and parents of the young and the old, are naturally opposite, by the contrary effects of hope and dependence, of expectation and experience, without crime or folly on either side. . . . Thus parents and children, for the greatest part, live on to love less and less."

Service is one of the ways by which a tiny insect like one of us can gain a purchase on the whole universe. If he finds the job where he can be of use he is hitched to the star of the world, and moves with it.—Richard Cabot.

CHESTNUTS, FIGS, PRUNES

As chestnuts are in market at this time we will enjoy serving them in different ways. As a stuffing for turkey or other fowl, there is nothing more tasty. Cook the chestnuts until tender, remove the skins and mash them, seasoning with butter, salt and pepper and bind with an egg. If the nuts are plentiful they may be used entirely; if not use bread crumbs mixed with the chestnut paste.

Chestnuts cooked and chopped, served with an equal part of apple and celery, make a delicious salad, using mayonnaise dressing to moisten. As a soup mash chestnuts put through a sieve and served as a cream soup is the simplest disappointing. Chestnuts cooked, blanched and served in a heavy lemon sirup poured over ice cream is a dessert de luxe.

For the company table a dish of figs prepared as follows will be found delicious: Stuffed Figs.—Mash a cream cheese, moisten with heavy cream and season highly with salt and cayenne, then make into balls three-fourths of an inch in diameter. Wash and dry the figs, make an incision in each and stuff with the cheese balls. Arrange in piles on a plate covered with a lace paper dolly.

Chicken Consommé.—Disjoint a four-pound fowl and cut in pieces. Take four pounds of veal from the forequarter. Put into a kettle with one onion, two stalks of celery, eight slices of carrot, one teaspoonful of peppercorns, one-half bay leaf, four cloves, two sprigs of thyme and two sprigs of parsley. Cook slowly for four hours, removing the fowl as soon as tender. Add salt and pepper, strain and cool. Reheat when ready to serve.

Molded Cheese With Preserves.—Mash a cream cheese and press into a cone-shaped mold. Remove from the mold to a serving dish. Cover with whipped cream sweetened with powdered sugar and pour around preserved strawberries, currants, cherries or gooseberries.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

Do you realize fully the importance of advocating and supporting any measure that has for its aim the betterment of the city, town or community in which you reside. Are you unmindful of the importance of helping to educate your and the children of your neighbor? Surely you are not. Then, when you are called upon to make school buildings comfortable and the roads leading to them passable, do not dodge the issue by stating that "the district can not afford it." Rather, help the district in what is needed along educational lines, and benefit the youth of the country. Some school buildings in the county are said to be inadequate for the purpose for which they are used, and should be made to better serve the school children's needs by being remodeled before beginning another school term.

The Legislature of Kentucky passed a law making it a heavy penalty for anyone to sell eggs unfit for human food. It is unlawful for any person to offer for sale eggs, that have not been candled. A dealer is subject to the penalty for having eggs in his possession unfit for food. Farmers and poultry raisers are compelled by this law to candle all eggs before they offer them for sale or are subject to this fine. The State Board of Health of Kentucky is enforcing this law and all dealers caught with damaged eggs will be prosecuted.

The old saying that there is always a "calm after a storm" is suggested by the present quiet conditions in Burlington. With the school closed, the commencement exercises over, there is a sea of "quietness" in the atmosphere about Burlington. But the young folks will soon smash the monotony of things by giving picnics, fishing parties, etc., and soon the old town will again resume its old air of gaiety, and throw wide its gates of welcome to all who desire to come in and mingle with as good people as God's sun shines on.

When men, high in office, so disgrace their position as to be sentenced to imprisonment, it is high time that the voters of the country study well the character of men they elect to office. Corruption in the private walks of life is bad enough, but when carried into the sacred halls of State and National government, it becomes doubly deplorable. Within the last few weeks a Governor and a Congressman have been sentenced to the penitentiary, causing many to wonder as to what goal is the country drifting?

The tobacco poolers of this county received their third check last week, on the 1922 tobacco, and the great majority are highly pleased with it. Many received a greater amount than they ever dreamed they would receive. The association is given full credit for the great business-like method in selling the growers weed to such fine advantage. The money that has been paid the growers in Boone county comes at a time when it is greatly needed.

This season, so far, looks blue for the farmers. No tobacco plants, not much corn planted, and what is planted doing no good, no garden "sage," and even greens growing mightily slow, but cheer up the editor has not had his garden plowed, but, when he does the sun will shine warm at last, and the crops will grow. When the Editor gets to work in his garden anything is likely to happen. So cheer up and prepare for the worst.

Ronald C. Oldham, 38, a Louisville attorney, convicted of having conspired with others to obtain the release of a prisoner from the Louisville jail, was sentenced to two years' imprisonment in Atlanta, penitentiary by Federal Judge A. M. J. Cochran in Covington, one day last week.

There might be conditions that would justify a man in resorting to trickery to appease the pangs of hunger, but to an official drawing a salary of $7,500 per year, we are unable to see any justification for such a man stepping aside from the paths of integrity and honor.

At present there is but little excuse for any laboring man, who wants to work, remaining idle, there is a demand for laborers, and at a fair scale of wages.

Politics may warm up the weather during the month of June, but they have certainly been "cool and wet" during the month of May.

TWENTY PER CENT CUT IN ACREAGE OF BURLEY ADVOCATED

Chief of Market Section Says Reduction of as Much as Thirty Per Cent May Be Advisable To Avoid Over-Supply for 1924.

Lexington, Ky.—A reduction of twenty per cent in the acreage of Burley tobacco is declared advisable under present conditions by Prof. C. B. Jessness, chief of the section of markets of the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station, in a statement given out today. Prof. Jessness expresses the further opinion that a cut of thirty per cent in acreage as compared with 1923, may be advisable, with a favorable season, in order to avoid an over-supply on the 1924 crop.

"The time for setting out tobacco is near at hand," says Prof. Jessness, "and the acreage of Burley tobacco to be grown in 1924 soon will have to be finally decided. The growers of Burley tobacco know by this time what acreage they expect to use for tobacco this year. It is to be hoped that their decision calls for a considerably smaller acreage than last year in view of the supply of Burley tobacco on hand. Growers who contemplate setting out about the same acreage they set out last year can well afford to give consideration to the advisability of a last-minute reduction."

"No general rule suited to the conditions of all growers can be laid down, but a material reduction in total acreage is necessary if we are going to be assured that there will not be over-production. According to government reports, the stocks of Burley tobacco on hand April 1st reached a total of more than $40,000,000 pounds, which is about 80,000,000 pounds more than the stock reported on the same date last year. From these figures the conclusion may be reached that a cut of twenty per cent in the acreage from that of last year would appear conservative, if the season turns out to be favorable. A cut of thirty per cent may be necessary if an over-supply is to be avoided."

In referring to the holdings of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association unsold, Prof. Jessness said:

"A carry-over of tobacco from one year to the next is not unusual and it is to be expected that the Burley Association will carry over tobacco from time to time as a part of its marketing functions. The growers need to remember, however, that an over-production means a large carry-over for the Association. It is reported that the Association has on hand 190,000,000 pounds of tobacco. These large holdings are the result of the large crop last year. If the growers continue to over-produce the Association will have difficulty in disposing of all the tobacco at favorable prices."

"The responsibility for making the needed readjustment in production rests upon the growers. If they over-produce they have no reason to expect that the Association, or any other marketing system, will be able to sell without delay at favorable prices."

THE HOME TOWN BUSINESS MEN

Some good words ought to be said every now and then for the merchants of Burlington, the men who are plugging every day in the year to keep this community on the map, and to serve the needs of the people in the most up to date manner.

It is for the direct interest of these men and concerns that our city should grow and secure more advantages, since the more the city goes ahead, the more their business will prosper.

Equally it is for the interest of the people of this city, and the surrounding country, that these merchants should prosper, since the more they gain the more they can render, and the more they can do to bring about the advance of the community. The people who make it a matter of principle then to patronize the home stores, and give direct aid to a force that works for the service and the progress of the entire community.

POPPY DAY

The Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States will observe the Annual Poppy Day from May 27 to May 30. This memorial is in honor of the thousands of our boys who sleep their sleep under the lily covered fields. The poppies of the Marne, many others under the tropical sun of the Philippines and of the Orient, while squadrons of them are entombed in the restless waves of the great oceans. Each of them is a Prince in the Kingdom of Glory by reason of service suffering and sacrifice, and none of them should be forgotten on this our Memorial Day by wearing a poppy in their memory.

The Thermoscope

MEMORIAL DAY

Memorial Day was not set aside exclusively for a bank holiday, nor even for a double-header at the base ball park. It is a day which in its majestic significance ranks close to Easter itself.

In the year 1868 Major General John A. Logan, then Commander-in-Chief of the Grand Army of the Republic introduced a Memorial without form or substance, based upon sentiment alone and dedicated it to every soul that ever "suffered, sacrificed or served" in the defense of home, our native land, the enforcement of law and order and the preservation of the unity of the United States of America. The conception of this order was sublime and appealed to the highest sense of the nation at large, then staggering under the appalling losses of the war of the Rebellion.

The mystic chords of memory, stretching from the thousands of battle fields and the millions of patriotic graves distributed all over our great nation, to every home and hearth within its boundaries, compelled instant approval of the Memorial thus inaugurated. All home loving, law abiding and patriotic citizens, enthusiastically and universally endorsed it; many of the states legalized it, and at this time it is nationally accepted and observed as the silent, yet eloquent Memorial of the Grand Army of the Republic, and of every soul that ever "suffered, sacrificed or served" in behalf of the unity of our native land and its institutions.

If you who stayed at home, or you who went and returned could wake those who sleep and ask of them why they gave their lives, what would be the splendid chorus of these haloed dead. Go to God's Acre yourself. Stand before the tomb of him who died at Saratoga, or at Gettysburg, or on the scarlet hills of Champagne, and in all faith and humility ask him to answer.

No need to write his answer. It will be written in your heart. God grant you heed that answer, and on this Memorial Day guide your conduct as to make him glad that he died for America and you.

SEEDING TIME

Farmers were discouraged a few weeks ago. The ground was dry and prospects for wheat and clover were poor. It was seeding time and they were fearful of results if they planted.

Then the heavens opened up and down came precious rain—the most valuable of all food for plant life.

The pastures, suddenly turned green, leaves quickly developed and all nature expressed its appreciation of God's bounty by dressing itself in resplendent colors.

How little we appreciate the way everything has been worked out for us, so that in the fullness of time, conditions are made right for the growing of the crops.

Some of us complain when everything seems to be going wrong, when there is too much moisture, or a lack of it, always forgetting that the heavens and the earth have never failed to do their part.

If there is ever a failure, it is due largely to human frailty.

Henry H. Granger, of Bogota, Columbia, has deposited $10 in the government bank under a contract or agreement that compound interest is to be paid for 1,000 years, at the end of the period the principal and accumulated interest is to be divided equally between the United States and Columbia. At the present interest rate the fund will total over five thousand five hundred trillions of dollars. In view of this legacy why worry over a mere matter of a dozen paltry billions of dollars?

MRS. MARY ROUSE DIES

Death Came to Aged Lady After Several Weeks Suffering. Resident of Monroe City, Mo., Forty-One Years.

Mrs. Mary Louise Rouse, 80 years old, died at her home in this city Saturday noon. Her death resulted from complications which developed in connection with the injury of a broken hip she received in a fall at her home seven weeks ago. Funeral services were held at the Methodist church, of which she had been a long and faithful member, Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, conducted by her pastor, Rev. Ernie Jones.

Mrs. Rouse was born in Boone Co., Ky., September 21, 1843, her maiden name being Mary Louise Barlow. She was married January 12, 1865, to Jacob Rouse in Kentucky. Three years later they located in Missouri, living in Ralls county near DeMos. In 1883, when they came to Monroe City, Mrs. Rouse having continued made her home here for the forty-one years since. The husband died July 26, 1900. She is survived by three daughters and one son, Mrs. J. C. Kincaid and Miss Eliza Rouse of Monroe City, Mrs. T. P. Middleton of Hillsburg, and W. J. Rouse, of this city. She also leaves two brothers and one sister, all of whom still live in the old home community, Boone county, Kentucky. A rather singular happening was that all the time Mrs. Rouse was ill, this only sister was in a serious condition having been paralyzed just four days following Mrs. Rouse's injury, and the latest word received from her bedside Friday was that her death was expected any time.

Mrs. Rouse had lived a true, christian life, was a noble mother and devoted to family and friends, sacrificing for her family and others.—Semi-Weekly News, Monroe City, Mo.

A CALL-DOWN

Last week we received the following call-down from one of our lady subscribers for addressing her paper in her maiden name instead of using her husband's first name. We always knew that she had a perfectly good husband, but did not dream that he possessed these wonderful qualifications. We stand corrected. Here is the description she gives us: "My husband is not a handsome man. He is a twelve-cylinder, guaranteed twenty miles to the gallon of gas self starter, demountable shoes, easy controlled, look-sep standard, built heavy and close to the ground, and carries a title that I would not exchange with Mrs. Coolidge or the Queen of England, as I have spent nearly eighteen happy years in training him. With him the rocks become all sparkling diamonds, the animals all birds, the atmosphere all sunshine, the sounds all music, and the foliage all flowers. Without him I would be like a toad chasing vapors in a dungeon. I make these statements because I ought to know." It is no wonder when old maids read such statements as these that they get all fussed-up.—Falmouth Outlook.

Young men who are considering whether they will attend the citizens' military training camps, might well think of the advantages of this experience as a school in discipline. That word may sound hateful to them, but discipline makes men of superior efficiency.

Discipline simply means the ability of a person to control his own wandering impulses and to work in harmony with others. A person who has not learned that lesson, is not apt to fit well into a crowd. And when he learns it, he acquires a power that is likely to make him a leader. The young men who attend these camps will come home from them with new forces that ought to promote their advancement.

CLOSING OF ANOTHER SCHOOL YEAR.

The Baccalaureate sermon to the graduating class of the Boone County High School at the Burlington Baptist church, Sunday night, was attended by a large crowd of relatives and friends of the members of the class, and patrons of the school. Rev. Adams took for his subject, "Ancient Rome and America," and delivered a splendid address. The house was packed to its capacity.

The church, artistically bedecked in colors of the class and fairly blooming with flowers until it resembled a flower garden symbolical of the merry month of May, seemed to speak forth the joy that filled the hearts of the members of the graduating class and their parents.

To say the least, the baccalaureate services held Sunday night were among the best ever given in this town from the standpoint of singing, the sermon, the decorations and every item that went to make the program complete.

On Tuesday evening the court-house was filled to witness the Commencement exercises which marked the closing of another year in the Boone High School, when eight graduates, two boys and six girls, completed the course of study prescribed by the faculty. Prof. McHenry, Rhodes, Supt. of Public Instruction, Frankfort, delivered the Commencement Address, which was a splendid discourse and very much enjoyed by the large crowd that attended. The graduates were Misses Mary McMullen, Majorie Tanner, Julia Cook, Rhoda Eggleston, Martha Kelly, Jessie Jones; Messrs. Julius Smith and Mark Craven.

The Valedictory and Salutatory addresses were delivered by Julia Cook and Mary McMullen, respectively. These two talks, also, were good, and revealed a great deal of study and talent on the parts of these young Honored Graduates. The diplomas were presented by Supt. J. C. Gordon, who expressed his appreciation of the cordial relation that existed between the class and the members of the Faculty. He praised them for their high standard as students and the active part they had taken in promoting the best interests of student life.

The class play, "Guilty, But Not Guilty," written by Miss Martha Kelly, one of the graduating class, held at the Burlington Theatre building on Wednesday night of last week, was attended by a very large crowd—standing room being at a premium. The play was a grand success in every particular, something over $125 being taken in at the doors.

BETTER BOYS.

One boy mishandled, misunderstood or unnecessarily committed to a reform school is a life marred and may be the ruin of other lives. This is the statement of a probation officer who has dealt with delinquent boys for years.

The professional tramps and most of the inmates of penal institutions were reared in "institutions," not always correctional.

Boys need the influence of a good home and sympathetic parents. Lacking these, they need a friend who will show enough interest to guide them along the right paths until they reach the age of discretion.

A reformed tramp and convict, writing in a magazine, adds further testimony that boys who run away from home or are left orphans have little chance if they ever have this misfortune to be sent to an "institution."

Not long ago a man of sixty-four years old was sentenced in an eastern city for pocket-picking. He had already spent over forty years in jail. Another one, twenty-three years old, got a long term for robbery. He was put in an orphan's asylum at four and has been out of "institutions" only two years since.

Multipled evidence can be found that boys, once they become "institutionalized" and "standardized" according to the rules and regulations, have little chance of becoming good citizens.

Regardless of whether you have a boy, you are in a measure responsible for the future of the boys with whom you come in contact. If you are not an influence for good in their lives, you are not meeting your responsibility.

We need to give some attention to the boy of today because of his possibilities. From a purely selfish standpoint, we must try to make certain that he is being reared right, else how can we expect much of the next generation?

Let's try to devise ways of making every boy a better boy for the benefit of the boy and for the benefit of those who will carry on where we leave off.

The American Cotton Growers' Exchange, a federation composed of 12 state associations, members, is planning for largely increased business for the coming year. The exchange, organized in 1922, has grown from 50,000 members to 250,000.

BIG TIME AT HEBRON.

Last Friday evening Hebron Masonic Lodge entertained one of the largest crowds that ever attended a Masonic meeting in this town. Masons attended from Ludlow, Covington, Newport, Cincinnati and from all of the lodges in Boone county. The work was in charge of the team from Ludlow who are past masters in exemplifying the work in the masters degree, they were accompanied by the Masonic Band who gave a concert both before and after the work for the benefit of not only the Masons but for all. This band is one of the best in the three cities and Radio fans have heard concerts rendered by this band broadcasted from one of the Cincinnati stations. After the work everyone enjoyed the fine fried fish and trimmings that had been prepared for them by the Hebron brethren. The members of Hebron Masonic lodge are past masters at the art of entertaining.

STREET TREES.

There are several things that must be done by the city as a whole or possibly by voluntary effort of property owners, in order to brighten up one's home city. And one is adequate tree planting in the streets. If a street has handsome homes and no trees, it will not present so winning an appearance as a street with many less expensive homes, but which has softened its angles and brought in a bit of romantic nature by planting trees.

The taxpayers must be willing to stand a reasonable expense for tree planting on every street. And if it comes hard to get the necessary public funds, then real estate owners should hustle around and unite to plant them themselves. A new street begins to look like a homey neighborhood as soon as it gets some young growing trees, perking up their feathery heads with promise of future shade and comfort and charm.

TABERNACLE DEDICATED

Quite a number of Boone county people attended the dedication of the new Baptist Tabernacle at St. Mitchell, last Sunday afternoon.

A number of Baptist ministers took part in the dedication and the occasion was featured by a special program of music. Rev. O. J. Steger pronounced the invocation; Rev. J. A. Davis read the Scripture lesson; Rev. W. A. M. Wood of Erlanger, field worker of North Bend Baptist Association, made a number of announcements incident to Baptist work in this field; Dr. H. D. Allen, dedicatory prayer, and Rev. J. W. Campbell benediction.

The opening of the new tabernacle in St. Mitchell marks the efforts of several years on the part of Kenton County Baptist churches.

HIGH TAXATION

High taxation is one of the heavy burdens that farmers and other co-operative industries have to meet. To some extent the people are to blame for such conditions. When so many voters fail to attend primaries and elections, it is not strange that the wrong people often get elected.

If intelligent voters will make it a point to take part in all political contests, and take some pains to see that people of good common sense judgment are put into all offices, something could be done to cut down the burden of taxation. The time spent in reading the political news in the newspapers, and in attending political meetings, is not lost. It is in such ways that the voters get ideas as to which party and what candidates will handle public affairs for the best interests of the people.

KENTUCKY SENDS DELEGATE TO NATIONAL HOLSTEIN CONVENTION.

Kentucky breeders of Holstein cattle will be represented at the 39th annual convention of The Holstein-Friesian Association of America at Richmond, Virginia, June 4th, by Hubert Conner, of Burlington. Thirty-eight states and one Canadian province have elected 148 delegates to attend this meeting, the first held in "Dixie" by the national Holstein Association.

The Dine-Schabell Furniture Co., of Covington, is advertising a sale of the Detroit Vapor Oil Store, and will have a special demonstration week beginning Saturday May 31, and ending Saturday, June 7th. During the week a special factory representative will be present who will explain fully the operation of the stove. One car load of the stoves has been sold by the Dine-Schabell Co., and they are now selling the stoves at a low price. The manufacturers say that the Red Star Detroit Vapor is the best stove on the market. As a special inducement a valuable present will be given with each stove sold during demonstration week. Anyone who desires to purchase an oil stove should call at the Dine-Schabell Furniture Co., 521 Madison Ave., Covington, during demonstration week and meet the factory representative.

SUM -ING OUT

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

ANNOUNCEMENT

Beginning with the next issue of the RECORDER the Editorial and business management will be under the control and supervision of the owners Mr. R. E. Berkshire and the present Editor, Mr. Berkshire will be the General Manager and Mr. Riddell the Editor. No change in the policies of the RECORDER are contemplated.

The RECORDER should be in every home in Boone county and it will be the desire of the management to make the columns so attractive that it will be a welcome weekly visitor in your home.

Mrs. W. L. Riddell is at Dillsboro, Ind., for two weeks.

Miss Hester Kelly, of Bellevue, is visiting relatives in Burlington.

Tomorrow, (Friday) being a holiday, both local banks will be closed.

Farmers have been a busy set this week getting their ground ready for planting corn.

Many flocks of sheep in the county have lost their coat of wool in the last few days.

Mrs. A. L. Stephens, of Petersburg, was the guest of her mother, Mrs. Bess Kelly, Monday.

Work of painting and papering the interior of the Baptist church was begun Monday morning.

The people who are seen laboring under deep emotion may merely have been partaking of home brew.

Rev. Garber, of Union, was a Burlington visitor, Monday. He made the RECORDER office a pleasant call.

Charles Youell, A. B. Renaker and Judge J. M. Lassing attended a wool meeting in Louisville, Wednesday.

Boone county automobile and truck owners have paid into the State Treasury for licenses the sum of $22,413.83.

The poultry situation is being carefully studied by the thieves who are investigating the location of the chicken houses.

Mrs. John Cave, Sr., died at the home of her son near Francesville, last Sunday. Funeral was held Tuesday afternoon.

People used to be urged to oil the wheels of progress, but oiling the wheels of congress has not promoted much new legislation so far.

Don't forget to attend W. L. Kirkpatrick's auction sale Monday June 2nd, at his store in Burlington. This is a good place to get some bargains.

W. O. Davis, 62 years old, who managed the Kentucky campaign for Senator Oscar W. Underwood, died of apoplexy at his home in Versailles last Saturday morning.

Mr. Ketchum, President of the Dixie Electric Light Co., says that he expects to turn on the current in Burlington June 1st. A large force is now stringing the wires.

From present indications of lack of excitement at the Cleveland convention, an old fashioned tithing man will be needed to go around occasionally and wake up the delegates.

E. G. Cox, Ed. Witham and Chas. Wells, of Petersburg, were transacting business at the court house Monday—Mr. Wells making a transfer of the Lawrenceburg ferry to Mr. Witham.

J. H. Latham, formerly of Florence, but who for many years has made his home in Covington, was a Burlington visitor last Friday. While in town "Harve" called at our office and enlisted as one of our large circle of readers.

Rev. Gillespie preached at the M. E. church last Sunday morning. On account of the exercises at the Baptist church there were no evening services. Rev. Gillespie will be absent from his charges at Burlington and Florence for the next two weeks.

Oscar Hanna, aged 70 years, and owner of the G. W. Sandford farm about one mile from Burlington on the East Bend pike, died at his home in Bellevue, Campbell county, Sunday, May 26th. He was a well known contractor of Campbell county. The remains were buried at 10 A. M., Tuesday, May 27th.

Memorial Day

"Don't give up the ship!"

Friends of education, disappointed and disturbed because of failure to gain immediate consideration by Congress for the Education Bill, creating a department of Education with a Secretary in the President's cabinet, must not be discouraged because of lack of immediate action. No great reform was ever accomplished permanently and peacefully, in a hurry. Great bodies move slowly.

There is no question but that the Education Bill will eventually be passed, if its millions of friends stick to it and do not become disheartened because success is not immediate. Congress invariably responds to the will of the majority, given time enough to make it plain that it is the will of the majority. After all, Congress is the servant, not the master, of the free people of this nation. What we really want, we will eventually get.

The proposed legislation, is in some ways, revolutionary, since it gives governmental recognition to the fundamental character of education, which recognition is now withheld. We have a great department devoted to Agriculture; a great department devoted to Labor, to Commerce, to Education. Yet without proper education the farmer may not prosper, the laborer receives small reward and commerce languishes. Without education there is neither patriotism nor progress. That this government shall foster and further education, and make of it officially what is already in actuality, the most important development of the body and soul of the nation, is absolutely inevitable.

"Don't give up the ship!" Immortal words spoken when all was ended for the speaker. Let us not give up the ship of education, the hope of knowledge, the intention to make this great nation governmentally responsible for the aid and spread of knowledge among its people. The Education Bill will pass; sooner or later it must be law. Its friends can afford to be patient, to hold their enthusiasm and to keep up their courage in the fight waged against it and true progress, by those implacable enemies who have so far delayed its passage.

Extremely cold and wet weather continues and farmers are getting far behind with their work. At this time of year there is usually a good acreage of early tobacco set and much of the corn planted. The little corn that was planted early is yellow and sickly looking and reports say that no tobacco has yet been transplanted. Plants are making little growth and do not seem to be healthy. Grass is growing slow.

Don't forget to visit the cemetery tomorrow, Friday, and place a little flower on the green mound under which some loved one sleeps. It is a duty you owe to yourself and to the ones gone before. This year on Memorial Day there will be more graves to cover with blossoms, as during the past year many new graves have been made in the cemeteries throughout the county.

Factories are shutting down every day in our large cities, stocks and bonds are growing weaker each day, everything points to closer times and yet our roads and streets are crowded so badly that one has to watch to keep from being run over by the gay giddy throng and to collect old accounts.

Mrs. Howard Huey and children, of Petersburg, visited relatives here this week-end.

Mr. Smith Seale and Mr. Oscar Ely, of Rose Hill, Va., are visiting friends in Burlington.

KENTUCKY PULLET HOLDING HER OWN

Reports just received here by J. Holme Martin of the poultry department, Kentucky College of Agriculture show that the Barred Plymouth Rock Pullet entered in the Western Washington Egg laying Contest last November, by the Experiment Station is still holding her own with a record of 160 eggs in six months.

The pullet ranks fifth in the contest and tied for second place in April with 28 eggs. It is expected that the pullet will make an exceptional record for she has shown no signs of broodiness thus far, and Lady Jewel the world's record Leghorn who laid 335 eggs last year had laid only 156 eggs in her first six months of laying. The Kentucky Experiment Station pullet is the leading hen entered by any experiment station in a contest since the U. S.

The pen of five is the leading general purpose pen in the contest with a record of 628 eggs, brought down somewhat when one pullet went broody, but still leading its nearest competitor by 44 eggs.

The birth average on the farm is 40 per cent greater than it is in the city, but the child born on the land will bring up in a city apartment before he dies. As long as the country holds out, the city will have population. Since the dawn of time the drift has been from country to city. It looks as if this would keep up.

Corbett Clifton and Hubert Rayman, who were arrested for breaking into the store of Wm. Tewell, last week, waived their examining trial, and their bond for their appearance before the grand jury was given and they were released last Saturday.

J. O. Bonta and Howard Kirkpatrick spent last Saturday and Sunday in Bourbon county, Mr. Bonta going after his father, who will spend the summer with him. His father being an aged man—will be 90 years old in October.

Over 1,000 acres of wheat in Boone county this year according to county agent C. L. Hill means more prosperity for that county.

BABY BEEF CLUBS

TOUR MERCER AND BOYLE.

Baby beef clubs in Mercer and Boyle counties recently made a tour of the county inspecting the work done and gathering information on feeding methods. In Boyle county 14 club members are fitting calves, and in Mercer county 24 club members are fitting 84 calves.

Two boys and one girl in Boyle county are each feeding six calves each and are making excellent gains with their animals. Some of the boys report gains of 45 and 60 lbs. in sixteen days on corn, bran and grass. Excellent results thus far are obtained with corn and pasture alone, the calves fed on mixed feeds and grass showing a smaller gain than those where less concentrates are being fed.

Being told that they should study local geography, the boys all know where the girls' homes are located.

Mexican Indians Surrender Homes to Establish Schools.

The Department of Education, Mexico, is sending as many rural teachers as possible to the State of Chihuahua to meet the call for education among the Tarahumara Indians, the Bulletin of the Pan American Union states. These Indians formerly fled to the mountains at the sight of a white man, but were won over through an educational campaign conducted by the Mexican Government. So eager were the Indians for enlightenment that one of their number offered his hut as the first "People's House," leaving only a tree as shelter for himself and his family. Six other Tarahumaras followed his example. These "people's houses" are made centers of activity against drunkenness and other vices.

Some few farmers have set tobacco plants.

All obituaries, card of thanks and all other matter, got news, must be paid for at $5 cents per line.

FORGET THE YESTERDAYS—SMILE ON.

The acme of all philosophy is confidence in today, for it is the best day—and tomorrow will be better if God is good. It is this thought which makes the bird sing and the sun to shine, which ennobles labor and defines duty, which cures disappointment and heart-hurt, banishes sorrow and fashions fate. Discontent and self-pity breeds pettiness, paranoias and paralysis. How much better to smile. Don't face the wrong way. Let yesterday alone. If you have made a mistake forget it—nothing worth while was ever built upon useless regret. To err is human, and with every error safely under yesterday's sod, the wise man and woman wipe away the tear bravely and face front. It is only the mentally deficient who eat his heart out for what cannot now be undone.

Forget it—what a saving sanctuary is expressed in this floatam of the street. Through forgetfulness hearts are healed, horrors are softened, crimes absolved. Sorrow comes into every life with hurrying years—none can hope to escape its be-reavements and its blights—but forget it.

Meanwhile do not fail to learn or forgive. What does all this fighting and hating one another amount to anyway? Don't be an Indian, whose gross instincts and cold-blooded brutality are characteristics of his class—never forget because they will not forgive. Let go of the depressing and weakening grievance—wipe the slate clean each day—see to it that no hatred poisons the mind or clouds the mirror of memory. Forgive, forget—smile on—and let the yesterday's alone.

RED CROSS NEWS.

At the request of the War Department, the Red Cross will assist in distributing the bonus application blanks and seeing that they are properly filled out. Approximately 5,000,000 will be allotted to the Red Cross. This new duty will be in line with the work already familiar to chapter executives.

The Boone County Chapter is to help supply the bath robes and pajamas required for this winter at the Veteran's Hospital in Newport, Ky.

Every school room in the Wahpeton, N. Dakota, Indian school is enrolled in the Junior Red Cross and most of the pupils have turned in individual membership through service.

The National Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Associations recently held in St. Paul adopted a resolution in which they praised the Junior Red Cross movement throughout the schools of the nation and pledged their support, as individuals and as an organization.

According to announcement from Frankfort, stock in corporations, less than 75 per cent of the property of which is tangible, will not be taxed as in tangibles by the State Tax Commission on the current assessment. The old law exempting stock in concerns which pay 25 per cent of their taxes in the State will be adhered to. The new law will be applied to the assessment of July 1 on which taxes are paid in December, 1925.

W. M. S. NOTES.

The Quarterly meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of North Bend Association was held Friday at that historic old edifice, Big Bone Baptist church.

Nearly every society in the Association was represented, by delegates. The meeting was opened at 10 a. m. by the Supt., Mrs. Sayers. The following program was rendered in the morning:

Union Watchword All Devotional Mrs. Maxfield Welcome Mrs. Clara Hamilton Response Mrs. N. S. Bristow. Reading of W. M. S. reports Mrs. E. C. Smith, and Mrs. Rouse (alternating). Explanation of Standard of Excellence Mrs. Maxfield. (Illustrated with Sunbonnet Sue.) Report on Finance Mrs. Sayers. Report from Young People's Leaders, Mrs. Maxfield.

At the noon hour a bountiful lunch was served in the grove by the hostesses—the Big Bone W. M. S. ladies. Bro. W. A. M. Wood was toastmaster, and reduced everyone to a state of hilarity.

In the afternoon the meeting was again called to order, and the Reports from the committees were heard as follows:

Devotional Address on Evangelism—Mrs. Romanovitz. Song—Four little girls. Constitution Committee appointed Round Table Discussion. Resolutions read by Mrs. B. S. Bush.

Address by Personal Service Chairman Mrs. Ida Sleet.

Offering. Report on Convention—Rev. W. A. M. Wood. Benediction—Rev. Bush. The meeting adjourned to gather at Bellevue for the Quarterly meeting in August.

On Thursday, May 22nd, the Bellevue Woman's Missionary Society met at the Baptist church to render the regular program for May. Mrs. Loulah Walton, as President, led the meeting, and all present report a pleasant, helpful day.

MRE. E. W. RICE, Publicity Chairman Bellevue W. M. S.

HOUSEHOLD WORK DONE UNDER PRACTICAL CONDITIONS

A practice house or model cottage is a part of the general equipment of home economics in all vocational schools of Oregon. Each girl has experience in all the fundamentals of the household—food preparation, house cleaning, laundry, and sewing. The food preparation classes give the actual experience of buying and preparing for a number of persons. The girls are taught the spending value of the dollar, principles of house decoration, child care, and home nursing.

Tax Commissioners Cason, County Attorney B. H. Riley and County Judge N. E. Riddell were in Frankfort last Friday before the State Tax Commission protesting against the contemplated raise of 20 per cent on tangible personal property and 5 per cent on live stock. Under the tax law passed by the last Legislature and the assessments and contemplated raises very few counties in the State will pay as much tax as under the old law. Several counties will pay more tax if the contemplated raise in the assessment is made by the State Tax Commission.

The Ladies of the Union Baptist church will serve a supper consisting of waffles, coffee, ice cream, strawberries, cake and lemonade at the school house Saturday May 31st, beginning at 5 p. m.

Tobacco plants are said never to have been more plentiful, and some are large enough to set.

Our little town is filled every evening and night with horseless carriages in which have come both young and old to participate in gay and festive scenes of our little city. These good folks are a goodly sight to see in this happy state and yet we know that the old adage of "early to bed and early to rise" is not a bad one and that gasoline and tires cost money and again where do we go from here.

COOLIDGE MAY go down in history as the "vetoing President." At this writing, he already has axed two aiders bonus bills, and the tax reduction bill, the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill, and several others are yet to come. The President insists that reduction of federal expenditures is the most important thing he has to accomplish and he is determined to "fight it out on that one" whatever the cost, just so it is not in cash.

THE POLITICAL grins that have knocked two Cabinet members into private life have been turned on John W. Weeks, Secretary of War, but with little effect thus far. A powerful country-wide chain of news papers is heading the assault, charging Weeks with improper connections with large financial organizations which have relations with the Government. Secretary of State Hughes, likewise, has been involved in the Shipping Board investigation. It is alleged that he influenced the board to sell a big passenger ship to a foreign firm for a small amount when American companies offered much more. Hughes denies it.

THERE ARE a lot of women in Washington who give almost anything to know where Mrs. Coolidge keeps her hats. The word has got around that the first lady has turned down the fashionable stores on F. Street, to a Capital's Fifth Avenue, and has chosen a little shop in Mt. Pleasant, formerly a suburb, and now a part of north-west Washington. It is reported that Mrs. Coolidge bought six spring hats there. But the location of the shop and the identity of the owner are secrets which Mrs. Coolidge is keeping as steadfastly as her husband keeps his counsel on matters of state importance.

MISERY LOVES company, says the old proverb; and the truth of the adage has been demonstrated here. Hiram W. Johnson, whose presidential aspirations fell as flat as a pancake, and Burton K. Wheeler, under a criminal indictment in his home state of Montana, have become fast friends. Finding the members of his own party in the senate not so friendly to him, Johnson has turned to other fields for companionship. The pair were seen in arm at a circus recently and they are often in close conversation at the Capitol.

WITH THE CONVENTION only a month away, the Democratic political situation, so far as the selection of a presidential candidate is concerned, does NOT clear up. Every one of the 30 odd aspirants has an chance, and one man's guess is as good as another's, if NOT better. McAdoo will go into the convention with the most votes to start with, but the big question revolves about his ability to increase that lead in the Republican convention in 1920. Gen. Wood had more votes than anyone else at the start, but he was unable to increase his total by as much as ten per cent during all the balloting.

THE ENDING of the preferential primaries finds President Coolidge with approximately a thousand votes to his credit for the GOP convention on June 10. Coolidge headquarters have been opened in Cleveland, to remain in operation until the business there is wound up. In indications are that a free-for-all fight both Sinclair and Debsy have plenty of money and they will fight to the limit, both against losing their properties and to keep from going to prison in the event criminal indictments are returned against them.

MANY MONTHS WILL elapse before the last is heard of the great scandal. The Senate investigation has been concluded, but the fight will go on indefinitely. The United States Supreme Court will have to make the final decision in the cases, both criminal and civil, as much as two years may elapse before the litigation is finally ended. Both Sinclair and Debsy have plenty of money and they will fight to the limit, both against losing their properties and to keep from going to prison in the event criminal indictments are returned against them.

It is stated that more than 5,000 Japanese, residents of America and temporarily in Japan, have booked passage for the United States before July 1, when the exclusion law will go into effect. Over 1,000 more with passports, will not be able to secure passage. One ship which just sailed from the Pacific coast carried 400 Japs who expect to obtain visas and return before July 1.

The man who needs a pull seldom has any push.

GOVERNMENT WASTE

Not many of us will ever be able to understand why there is a constant agitation for political source not from consumers—for government control or ownership of private business, which has been alone responsible for the remarkable growth and development of this country.

Government control and ownership has not meant up whenever it has been put to the test, but so many people have short memories that advocates of a system, which would fasten millions of political employees on us, cling to the view that they will eventually succeed. Reports just published show that it costs $14,000 to rehabilitate every disabled war veteran. It seems that "compensating" each soldier in the sum of $10, it cost $10,000. In other words, the overhead ate up hundred times as much of the people's money as the soldier actually received.

Inefficiency and waste in government departments should provide evidence enough to convince the dubious that business should remain in private hands. None can realize that better than the average newspaper editor who is deluged with government bulletins on almost every subject imaginable, ranging from "The Windbreak as a Farm Asset" to the "Fluid Milk Market Report for the United States."

Going through a sample day's mail the editor finds that most of it came postage-free from government departments. It consists of bulletins, and that are prepared by some high-priced government employee who could very well be dispensed with and put at some productive occupation.

The editor finds, for example, "Many Farmers Saved by Pigs, Hens, Cows, and Legumes." That's the subject of a long article of five typewritten pages. Then he comes to a fifteen-page typewritten summary of crop conditions. He also learns from another bulletin that the "Early Crop is Short." "Crows are not so Black as They Are Painted," says another bulletin, throwing little light on a dark subject.

What is true of the government department that comes to the defense of the crow is true of every other department.

Yet we are asked to permit private business to be conducted on the same wasteful scale as government departments are operated.

WARS AND MOTHERHOOD

Miss Carolyn Conant Van Blarcom, R. N., who is a delegate to the English-speaking Conference for Maternal and Infant Welfare to be held at London in July, declares that in London in July, declares that more women have died in childbirth than ever were killed in war.

"Since the beginning of the war, one occupation which has been exclusively man's has been the business of warfare; that of women the business of motherhood," asserts Miss Van Blarcom. "Both these functions are fraught with equal danger for man and woman. But there is this difference. In the case of the soldier, the consciousness of his duty to defend his country is so acute, so well defined that all other considerations are dwarfed beside the emotional and practical desire to safeguard the peace of mind, happiness and bodily welfare of our fighters."

"In the case of a woman's most dangerous period—when she is looking forward to what Sir Arthur Newsholme, the eminent English authority calls 'the recurring romance of new life,' the very same life that makes for the progress of the race comparatively little is done to insure the life, health and well-being of herself and young."

WHERE YOUR HEART IS

Where your heart is, there are your thoughts also.

Where your heart is, your pocket-book may generally be found open. Where your heart is, you have nothing but an optimistic viewpoint. The plain cause for every loyal citizen, then, is to place his heart in his home community and work for it and to boost for it with all of his energy and ability.

You can't be loyal to home and still think that some other place is a better place to live. You can't be loyal to the interests of Burlington and have your heart elsewhere.

You must be convinced in your own mind that the place where you live is the best place on earth to live else you will never be able to convince anyone else of the fact. You must be convinced of the superiority of the place you call home, you must know all of its good points and all of its advantages.

Only well-informed citizens are good citizens and you can't honestly place yourself in that class until you get all of the knowledge that it is possible to acquire about Burlington.

First get the facts. Then go out and tell others.

Most real estate for business purposes is leased for 99 years. Why wouldn't it be a good idea to put marriage on the same basis.

School officials who engage teachers because of their ability and not because they wear hair long will have the best schools.

RETAIL MERCHANTS FIGHTING FOR LIFE

The average retail merchant is today having a fierce fight for existence. Whether he "passes on" or survives rests with the community of which he is a part and to which he liberally contributes for all civic enterprises and pays taxes. The merchant in the average sized town can't carry in stock everything that all of the people in his town may want at all times. It would require a capital many times larger than the average merchant can command to do this, but he does the best he can. He ordinarily does carry in stock at all times many things for which there is no general demand, in order that he may meet the needs of his customers to the greatest possible degree, but there is a limit to his purchasing ability. He is always ready and willing, however, to make every effort to meet the demands of the community. Why not then, give him the preference over the far distant mail order man if you must have something which is not to be found in the local stores? He will do the business in a satisfactory manner, give you as quick if not quicker service, and the chances are that he will give you better values for the money. Finally whatever profit is to be made off the transaction will stay at home and do its bit toward making the merchant and his town and, incidentally, yourself, more prosperous.

If you are interested in your community you must make an effort to sustain and support your merchants—otherwise your town will soon be enumerated among "the dead ones."

THE FALL

The speeding automobile has been condemned without cause. Everyone who ever said anything about the life-destructive qualities of an automobile owe this vehicle of pleasure and business an apology.

D. M. Brupker, building inspector of Louisville, Ky., is authority for that statement. In directing attention to the annual meeting of the National City Building Officials conference in Louisville he made the startling statement that nearly 15,000 persons are killed annually in the United States by falls of various sorts, and that most of these falls result from slipping on floors, and stumbling on stairs of buildings.

And the state of the public mind has been such as to credit the automobile with being the leading factor in the life-destructing business.

Looks like now, that down on our knees, we will have to beg the most humble pardon of the unjustly accused automobile.

Falling out of the cherry tree has always been regarded as the prerogative of every healthy boy. None of us ever looked upon a fall as anything serious—just as an everyday occurrence.

But one-fifth of the total number of accidental deaths from all causes is due to falls.

Of course, that refers to falls in which gravity figures.

There are all sorts of falls. Merely falling from their high estate sometimes. It is not necessary fatal, but frequently is.

Men fall in their own estimation and often try self-destruction. Men fall in the estimation of others and it is not always due to an accident.

Viewed from every angle, the fall is a much more dangerous element in society than most of us ever imagined.

A NEW DEAL IN FRANCE

The significance of the French election last Sunday exceeds, indeed, anything that has happened in the European political world since the Treaty of Versailles was signed. In brief, the French National Bloc has been smashed, but the acceptance of a new republic has been made doubly certain. The chief Royalists and Militarists have all been overwhelmingly defeated with the exception of Poincaré, and men who favor international reconciliation, peace and a reduction of the military burdens, have been elected, including pronounced pacifists.

The other side has spoken and it means a complete overturn of the political situation in France. The Socialist Party, which five years ago was badly cut up, has now exceeded its pre-war strength, partly because of drift toward Communism was not so heavy in France as in Germany. But this does not mean that Germany will escape from paying damages, and then some. The main change lies in the spirit which will henceforth animate French government action. It will be a spirit of co-operation, of seeking for friendships, instead of defiance of world sentiment and self-assertion.

Countess de la Porta

Countess de la Porta, wife of Count G. F. de la Porta, new secretary of the Italian embassy in Washington, is a woman of exquisite beauty, being a true Italian type. As the wife of one of the most important diplomats in Washington, Countess de la Porta will be one of the most prominent members of the diplomatic set.

"Men that hazard all Do it in hope of fair advantages."

—Merchant of Venice.

When a man invests his money in government bonds, he is assured of both interest and capital. When he invests his money in a business enterprise, he is assured of neither. Statistics are said to show that 95 per cent of all business ventures fail within a few years of their launching. It is certain that far more men fail in business than succeed.

The economists speak of the man who takes the risk in a business as an entrepreneur; and they acknowledge that he should be allowed not only a fair interest on the money he has invested in an enterprise, but also a fair gain to pay him for the risks he has taken—the greater the risks the greater the gain. People who figure that investors should be satisfied with the interest alone, and there are many of them, show themselves ignorant of the fact that Shakespeare here points out—that men will not risk all they possess without the hope of advantage.

It is of importance to us that men should be willing to risk their money in industrial ventures. We have our railroads, our telephones, our automobiles, and our moving pictures as the result of men's willingness to risk their private fortunes. Those who advocate state ownership for all industries rarely stop to consider who would bear the risk of undertaking new enterprises if the state owned the industries. Certainly the government is not supposed to take risks with the money of its taxpayers. It is equally certain that new enterprises cannot be undertaken unless some one bears the risk. A man with an individual fortune may risk it as he sees fit; here it lies the great value of private wealth.

Just now there is an ever-growing tendency to limit the advantages that a man may gain by taking great hazards. Such limitation is folly when carried far enough to keep men from taking the risk in new ventures—the acme of state ownership is to determine the largest rate of gain that will induce private capital to assume the risk in new enterprises.

THIS FREEDOM

By THOMAS A. CLARK
Dean of Mines, University of Illinois.

The room in which Aunt Sarah was born was heated with an open fireplace, dirty, cavernous and inadequate, requiring constant feeding and hourly attention.

When she was married the family had progressed through the "cannon" stove stage to the base-burner which promised almost perfect freedom from the annoyances incident to the other means of heating the little house in which Aunt Sarah was living. But even the base-burner was to be discarded a day, and the male members of the household were often busy and to more often thoughtful and the trip to the coal house was long and the coal scuttle heavy when Aunt Sarah was the purveyor. The ashes, which had to be taken out twice a day were light and messy, and if one damped the stove too heavily in an attempt to regulate the heat, gas, it was a relief when she moved into a new house and the furnace came into vogue.

But even the furnace had its drawbacks. It ate up coal like a ravenous flapper eating chocolate candy—soft coal, too, that clogged the chimney with soot. Sometimes the chimney burned out, scattering flames and hot ashes over the roof to the imminent danger of the house, and to the utter terror of poor Aunt Sarah who hourly expected to be burned out of house and home, and who woke at night smelling fire. The soot penetrating soot found its way everywhere, laid a dark hand upon all of Aunt Sarah's household treasures, and held her like a slave to her household duties.

And then came the "Nocol" innovation promising relief from shoveling coal, from ashes, from soot, from responsibility of all sorts, and Aunt Sarah willingly paid her money for the invention and had one installed. But she still found difficulties. The workman filling the oil tank went to sleep at the switch and wasted a barrel or two of oil, the critter needed intelligent regulating at least three times a day, and once Aunt Sarah failed carefully to read the directions for managing the pilot light, and while she was investigating with a lighted match the infernal machine exploded and nearly killed her.

"There ain't no such thing as freedom anywhere," Aunt Sarah averred feelingly, and she was right.

We struggle to evade responsibility, to find the short cut or the easy job, but there aren't any. We might better face the task that is before us bravely and make the best of it. Whatever freedom from work or responsibility or effort we seem to attain we pay for usually more than it is worth. (© 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

Morning Frocks in Striped Flannel

A simple frock that has daintiness and sprightliness to recommend it, is sure to spend its life in the company of the ladies—it embodies the points they love. Such are this season's morning frocks of silk or wool fabric. Striped flannels, showing color with white, are immensely popular for these frocks and one of them with collar and cuffs of fine batiste, is shown here.

SENATE

Books on political science tell us that the senate is a legislative body composed of two houses. The word "senate" is derived from the Latin, "senex," meaning "old man." In city fathers in ancient Rome were old men selected for their wisdom.

Memorial to Victims of R-38 Unveiled

A handsome memorial to the British and American officers and men who lost their lives aboard the ship R-38 on Aug. 24, 1921, was unveiled the other day in the Western cemetery at Hull, England. The monument was subscribed for by officers and men of the Royal Air Force and relatives of the dead airmen.

In Calcutta, India, eight hundred telephones went out of commission with one stroke of the ax, as an ignorant coolie, making an excavation, mistook a telephone cable for the root of a tree.

The telephone lines were immediately repaired, of course. It took the services of many skilled men for many hours, patiently to sort out the wires and match each with each. Meanwhile, eight hundred telephone users went without the easy intercommunication which the telephone affords. What tragedies were thus caused will never be known. All that is reported is that in one instance, ignorance undid the work of man's hands, and that many more were required to repair the damage.

In the long run, ignorance never wins over knowledge. But it is the greatest weapon of ignorance that it may strike swiftly and do much damage in a little time. One ignorant today will stop the wheels of progress for months; one ignorant school teacher may retard for years the development of the minds of 50 pupils; one ignorant action may undo the careful plans of philanthropy.

Had the coolie known what a telephone cable was he would not have cut through it. Did the ignorant teacher know better he would not hurt the little minds in his charge. Had the ignorant law maker been educated or had another and wiser choice been made at election, necessary legislation would not have been blocked.

Education, knowledge, information, power to understand, and once again, education, are our needs! The children of today are the citizens of tomorrow. The knowledge they gain today will be used in governing themselves tomorrow. Let us, all of us who claim some small measure of wisdom as our part of life's winnings, see to it that the most precious gift of man to man, of father to child, of government to citizen, be given in full measure, pressed down and running over; let us give our children the best of schools, the best of teachers, the best of knowledge, that when they, too, become men and women, they be among those who repair the telephones, not those who cut communication.

IS THE AVERAGE MAN BETTER OFF?

It is sometimes stated that the wonderful progress of business and science does not help the average run of people very much. It adds to the number of the wealthy, but it is claimed that the wage earners and the less successful business and professional men are pretty much where they were 25 or 50 years ago.

Let the average man consider his own condition compared with the way his parents lived. In the great majority of cases, he is living in a better home. The majority of people have modern sanitary equipment that removes disease dangers. They have improved medical and health service, and avoid many illnesses.

Labor saving devices have greatly reduced work. The majority of people used to have to lug water from wells, today the majority have running water in their homes. A great deal of work has been saved by improved lighting, heating, and cooking systems, and other conveniences.

A multitude of people whose parents could never afford to own the most decrepit kind of a horse, are now riding in automobiles. Toil is lightened by amusements and diversions within reach of the masses. The people who used to wear themselves out by the monotony and drudgery of their lives, are now kept cheerful by movie and other shows, and by phonographs, radio music, etc.

The educational opportunities have broadened. The fairly high in forty years could not have read and wrote, probably only had young people in high school or college, going on to lift the family to prosperity.

GOVERNMENT IS AHEAD

Col. Walter C. Kolt, medical director of the National Soldier's Home sanatorium at Johnson City, Tenn., told the National Tuberculosis Association in an address at Atlanta that compensation at the rate of $80 per month "is a very definite inducement for the ex-service men to have tuberculosis discovered."

Those are words that should have been left unuttered. If any ex-service man should seek to have tuberculosis "discovered" so he could draw $80 a month, he needs mental treatment.

The diagnosis of tuberculosis is not regarded as very difficult in the medical profession. Certainly physicians should have no difficulty in excluding it.

If any ex-service men are able to "put it over" on the government, they will earn all that they receive in the way of compensation.

On the other hand, there were thousands of lives wrecked by experiences in the war, that have never received one bit of assistance from the government.

On the whole, the odds are very much in favor of the government.

Trade Where They All Trade

This flour has made its reputation on its merits only. Every user is a booster. The first cost may be a little more, but it makes more and better bread and therefore is economical to use. The satisfaction of always having good bread is remembered long after the price is forgotten. The lowest priced flour is not always the cheapest.

This flour is made from the choicest selected Turkey Red Hard Winter Wheat grown in a small section of Kansas where it produces to perfection. There is no other flour equal to it.

Mr. T. Goodyear of Rickmansworth, England, is in his seventy-fifth year, but you'd never know it to see him handle a horse with the skill and the nerve of a youngster who makes a business of riding on racetracks. On the most aristocratic of blue-blooded steeds. This photograph shows Mr. Goodyear, mounted on his "Royal Star," taking a hurdle easily and fearlessly.

Burns Oil---Cooks With Gas Heat

12 features that make cooking a joy with the new-type, SANITARY

RED STAR
Detroit Vapor
OIL STOVE

Your conception of the oil stove will be entirely changed five minutes after you see this beautiful model of the Red Star.

It is unlike any oil stove you have ever seen. Indeed, we doubt if even your most vivid imagination has ever pictured an OIL STOVE so completely satisfying—so modern—so efficient.

Twelve patented features produce a construction that places the Red Star among the highest developments in cooking devices. Though it uses common kerosene, gasoline or distillate fuel, this perfected oil stove offers a cooking service heretofore expected only of the modern gas range. If you use oil for fuel, don't fail to see this beautiful Red Star.

There are types and sizes of Red Star Oil Stoves for every home, and a price for every purse.

FLOORS AND WALLS NEED RIGHT COLORS.

As the floor is the foundation of a room while the walls are the background for pictures and furnishings the colors or designs used should not be conspicuous says Miss Mary May Miller, field agent in home economics of the Kentucky College of Agriculture.

"The floor is the foundation of a room if stained in browns, grays or greens will not be conspicuous," Miss Miller continues. "Floor coverings are used to protect the floor, give warmth, fessan and contribute to the decorative scheme of the room. Rugs are usually the most satisfactory and should be placed where wear is the greatest and parallel with the lines of the room. A rug should be about the same color value as the floor and a rug with small, all-over pattern will not show wear as soon as the plain. In a bare kitchen the outside edges should be secured by quarter round or cement. Further information may be obtained in Farmers' Bulletin 1219, Floors and Floor Coverings published by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C."

"Walls serve as the back ground for the pictures and furnishings of a room and should be inconspicuous in design and color. Wall paper of small, all-over design in soft color is restful and will not show soil easily. Avoid papers with "crawling" figures and design. Paper with the suggestion of a stripe running up and down will add height in rooms with low ceilings while a paper with a large pattern and dark in color tends to decrease the size of a room. Plain paper or vaint that is light in color will make a room appear larger than it really is. Uniform coloring for connecting rooms gives an effect of unity and distance. It is possible to kalsomine over soiled wall paper although water stains on the paper should be shellacked before using the kalsomine. If it is necessary to use a border, one that is narrow and simple in design should be used and is best placed at the wall angle unless the ceiling is unusually high; a dropped ceiling may be used in rooms and appear to be too high. Flat paint in light tones of gray, blue, green and tan give kitchen walls a better appearance."

EMERSON SAYS

"If a man writes a better book, preaches a better sermon, makes a better mouse trap than his neighbor, though he builds his house in the woods the world will make beaten paths to his door."

There is a beaten path to James Riddle's Horse Farm, Hebron, Ky., to breed to Norris' noted Saddle Stealion RIXY CHIEF.

GET READY FOR BERRIES SAYS MARKETS EXPERT.

The memory of a very short season in 1923 with an unusually high percentage of soft berries should forcibly bring to the minds of Kentucky strawberry growers the importance of careful handling, picking, grading and packing, says D. G. Card, department of markets, of Kentucky College of Agriculture. A late season is usually a short season which means a rush of berries; last year about seven hundred cars of berries were shipped from Kentucky's thirteen shipping points during the three weeks season.

"An extra help is always imported for berry picking and often many of the pickers are inexperienced, it is, therefore, necessary to have all equipment in readiness before the berries ripen in order that time may be given over to careful supervision of the picking and handling of the berries," Mr. Card continues. "A late, cool spring this year has retarded development until the season in Kentucky will be slightly later than it was in 1922 when it was a week or ten days later than usual."

"The season has been late in southern states also, carlot movements from Louisiana and Florida being well behind that of last year. Consequently, the early market for berries was good but recently prices have been dropping to lower figures than on corresponding dates last season. The West Tennessee section is not quite so late this year as in 1923 and berries are of a better quality than last season. Prices of West Tennessee Klondikes in central markets, however, are no higher and in some cases somewhat lower per 24 quart crate than on corresponding dates last year."

"Kentucky shipment will start about May 25 this year, when the peak of Tennessee shipments should be past. Kentucky Aromas invariably sell to better advantage than Tennessee Klondikes, which they follow on the market. They are larger and present a finer appearance. Care in handling, packing and refrigeration is necessary, however, if berries are to reach the central markets in satisfactory condition."

"When berries are ripening rapidly they must be picked more closely than otherwise and unusually supervision of the picking, grading and packing is necessary. The utmost care in handling strawberries, coupled with a sincere desire on the part of growers and handlers to place berries on the market in the very best possible condition, can largely obviate the disaster of 'soft berries' in Kentucky."

What has become of the old-fashioned agrarian who thought he couldn't grow anything from government seed?

Game Called at 3 P. M.

Burlington made their initial appearance at Hebron last Saturday and the result was the best played game of the season to date. Errors were few and far between which is a certain indication of a well played game. Bullock in the box for Hebron was the master of Burlington at all stages, being in serious trouble but once, and that in the 7th, when the first two men up singled in rapid fire order. He extricated himself however by getting the next three men easily without a run being scored. Shinkle deserves great credit for the game he pitched for Burlington. There was a chance several times for the Burlington team to upset the old adage "youth must be served," but Shinkle's younger adversary less half his age, would not be denied. Both teams should be complimented for their clean play under the existing weather conditions. The final score was 5-2 in favor of Hebron.

Summary—Hits Hebron 11; Burlington 7; Struck out by Shinkle 4; by Bullock 7. Two base hits—Aylor, Riley, Nixon.

Bellevue journeyed to Petersburg last Saturday and trimmed them to the tune of 6 to 2. Petersburg trotted out Ruth and Bellevue Joseph Brady. Brady was invincible, allowing only two hits and fanning nine men. He would have put Petersburg out but for a couple of errors by his older brother Hobbie. Ruth pitched a nice ball until his center fielder misjudged a liner that put three runs over for the visitors. The outstanding features of the game was a sensational catch by Ruth after going to center field, Cox and Keim also felled nicely. McCarthy and Mathews pitched well after relieving Ruth.

Final Summary—Hits Bellevue 11; Petersburg 2; Two base hits Black and Klopp; Williamson. Three base hits—Berkshire. Umpires—Mahan, Smith and Clore.

SPENDING, NOT SAVING

In addition to the carefully compiled national budget, members of Congress have introduced bill requiring further outlay of $3,500,000, which figures include $160,000,000 estimated as cost of administration of the bonus for the first year under act recently passed.

Most of this money which Congress is seeking to withdraw from the treasury would be expended in pursuits entirely apart from the authorized activities of the government.

If enacted, these measures would more than double governmental activities and require services of approximately 1,000,000 new employees.

Taxes would increase to three times their wartime volume.

The public is grasping the fact that Congress is spending and not saving organization.

Financial Statistics of the State Government of Kentucky, 1923.

Expenditures

The Department of Commerce announces that the total payments for the state government of Kentucky for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, amounted to $19,338,545, or $7.87 per capita. Of this total $13,486,267 represents the expenses of operating the general departments of the state government; $407,202, interest on debt; and $5,445,076, outlays for permanent improvements. In 1922 the total payments for the state were $18,366,479 and in 1918 $10,879,539 a per capita of $7.71 and $4.55, respectively. The totals include all payments for the year, whether made from current revenues or from the proceeds of bond issues.

Revenues

The total revenue receipts of Kentucky for 1923 were $22,211,326 or $9.04 per capita. This was $8,317,857 more than the total payments of the year exclusive of the payments for permanent improvements, and $2,872,781 more than the total payments including those for permanent improvements.

In Kentucky property ad special taxes represented 52.1 per cent of the total revenue for 1923 63.2 per cent for 1922 and 64.5 per cent for 1918. The increase in the amount of property and special taxes collected was 61.7 per cent from 1918 to 1922 and 2.1 per cent from 1922 to 1923. The per capita property and special taxes were $4.71 in 1923 $4.64 in 1922 and $2.93 in 1918.

Earnings of general departments, compensation for services rendered by state officials, represented 8.5 per cent of the total revenue for 1923, 8.3 per cent for 1922, and 10.8 per cent for 1918.

Business and nonbusiness licenses constituted 22.5 per cent of the total revenue for 1923, 23.6 per cent for 1922, and 18.6 per cent for 1918. Receipts from business licenses consist chiefly of taxes exacted from insurance and other incorporated companies, while those from nonbusiness licenses comprise taxes on motor vehicles and amounts paid for hunting and fishing privileges.

The net indebtedness (funded and floating debt less sinking fund assets) of Kentucky was $1.02 per capita for 1923, $1.01 for 1922 and $1.08 for 1918.

Assessed Valuations and Tax Levies

For 1923 the assessed valuations of property in Kentucky subject to ad valorem taxation was $2,448,453,936; the amount of State taxes levied was $9,883,906; and the per capita levy $3.62.

Modern Woodmen.

Abbey Finn was adopted as a Woodman by Patriarch Camp last week.

Weather permitting, we expect the Woodmen and their families to witness the first game of ball on their home grounds next Saturday afternoon, when Bellevue visits Burlington.

Woodmen of the World lodge, at Gonvick, Minnesota, with a membership of nearly 100, in a town of 300 inhabitants, contemplates building a $7,000 home and public hall building. It will serve as a meeting place for the entire town. Funds are being raised through sale of Certificates of indebtedness which bear five per cent interest, and material and work will be furnished at cost. This improvement is an example of what community enterprise and co-operation can do in bettering conditions in a small town and is an example worthy of recognition.

District Deputy J. H. Latham and Special Deputy J. W. Grant are in Louisville, Ky., this week in the interest of the Modern Woodmen Camps of Boone county.

Are you going to remember those dear to you Tomorrow (Decoration Day) May 30th?

If so, send your military or society emblems, flags and floral designs, marked plainly with your name, and for family lots designed for, in either of the Burlington, Ky., cemeteries to me, and they will be placed and watched carefully through the day, by special assistants. So let us unite and spend the day in this bond of sympathetic friendship, forgetting all our petty grievance and ill-feeling we have for one another, knowing that, we too, will be counted in the number in the "City of the Dead" shortly, for our friends to remember on this day in the sacred and beautiful custom of flowers, as an emblem of purity, of our thought for our dear ones—please dampen the decorations well before sending them to me.

KIRTLEY L. RICE,
Private Family Lot Caretaker.

There is a deficit of over $3,000 in the sheep fund. The County Clerk has issued 309 dog licenses and the assessor listed over 1800 dogs. This next grand jury may return indictments against those dog owners who have failed to take out their licenses. If the dog owner would pay the license tax due there would be no deficit but there would be a surplus in this fund.

The best living any man has is that which he works hard for.

RADIO

(Edited by J. Douglas Wardrop, Editor of Radio Merchandising)

By BYRT C. CALDWELL

Many of the thousands who last year had radio sets and who were satisfied with reception of means of ear-phones, want to discard the phones for local reception, and employ a loud speaker instead. In many cases, the price of the loud speakers on the market makes this prohibitive, and in other cases the person has been disgusted with loud speaker reception by the grinding roars that come from some radio store loud speakers.

Of all the horns used, the phonograph horn is undoubtedly the best. The phonograph horn was developed by means of long years of painstaking research and experiment by highly paid acoustical experts. The writer has planned the horn, the description of which follows, by taking the measurements of the sound-reproducing chamber of one of the most famous phonographs. This loud speaker is a revelation to those who have heard only the tremendous bursts of sound from the loud speakers placed in stores to sell radio. This reproducer, while it does not take a field current, employs a large magneto magnet, which greatly increases the volume of sound.

It is said that a loud speaker does not increase the volume of sound from a given set. While this is correct, the loud speaker does not actually add to the volume, it prevents large losses from occurring, and so the volume is greater than it would be without the horn. It also directs the sound out the horn. It is in this change that adds to the volume. When the sound waves leave the receiver, they have a very great amplitude, but they cover a very small area. When they have traveled for some distance, they cover a great area, but they have a very small amplitude. It is in this change that great losses occur if no horn, or a horn of incorrect design is used.

To give best results, the horn should spread the sound waves out gradually, so that these losses are eliminated. It should also be large enough so that the fundamental of the horn is lower than any of the sounds which are liable to be reproduced. It has been found that extremely large horns, with the dimensions at the mouth approximating 8 by 8 feet, give wonderful quality results. Another requisite of the loud speaker is that the horn should be made of some non-magnetic material. Thin sheet metal is unsatisfactory. The inside surface of the horn should be roughened, so as to absorb some of the scratchy sounds.

The loud speaker described here with covers all these points and gives a wonderful quality of music and speech. It is also a beautiful instrument, as contrasted with most of the horns which we see on the market today. It is very easy to make and costs very little. These two last points perhaps are the most important to the average fan.

The container is a cabinet made with a mahogany, walnut or oak finish. It is size 16 by 12 by 10 inches and is made with a hinged cover. The front piece may have a circular, oval or square opening cut in it. This opening is covered with silk cloth of a color to harmonize with the finish of the cabinet. The horn is made in four pieces. As it is a difficult matter to cut wood into the shapes given, the pieces are cut from medium-thick, rough cardboard. This cardboard would not give satisfactory results directly, but this is taken care of when the pieces are cut out, fit them together in the shape shown, and fasten them the entire length of all the edges with sticky paper. This is then placed inside the cabinet, and glued in place. A piece of rubber tubing, with an inside diameter of one-half inch, and two feet long is fastened in the small end of the horn by pushing some paper around it, and melting sealing wax over the paper. This rubber tubing can be purchased at any chemical supply store for 30 cents a foot. It is coiled up as shown, and the end is supported about three inches from the top of the cabinet, and pointing up. Cement, plaster or some other such substance is now poured in to cover the horn. It should fill up all the little crevices. This is to make up for the cardboard horn, and renders it non-magnetic, or practically so. The receiver should be fastened to the rubber tubing in the position shown and should preferably be of the type used for loud-speaker units. It should have a large diaphragm diameter. Directly over the receiver, a strong magnet from a magneto should be fastened to the hinge cover of the cabinet. When operating, revolve the receiver until the volume is greatest. This magnet is not absolutely necessary, but it adds greatly to the volume.

This instrument may be placed in one room, and the set in another. When tuning the set this way, if you first tune in with the headphones, and then attach the loud speaker, you will be able to slightly reduce the condenser setting, as the tuning is changed when the set is at a distance from the re-producer. Also, if you do operate the set at a distance, use two well-insulated wires to connect the set to the speaker, as it is impossible to use a gas or water pipe, and if poorly insulated wires are used, a great deal of energy is lost.—Radio World.

Material Needed to Make Compact Rheostat

The materials needed to make this rheostat are a composition disk, some resistance wire, a small strip of brass, and some screws and mica disk. Wind the resistance wire on a 3-16 inch rod; when the coil is wound on, connect one end to the brass backing inside of the dial and cut the other end off about 1/4 inch from the set-screw that runs from the top of the dial to the bushing. Cut out a round piece of thick mica large enough so that the wire will fit tightly on it, and then groove the mica. Cut out a hole in the center of the disk so it will fit snugly over the bushing, and drill a hole the size of this set-screw parallel with the disk. Put the set-screw in and this will hold the disk on the dial. Punch two holes in the disk where the two ends of the wire connect one end to the bushing. This serves as one contact and the other contact is made by the small brass strip that is fixed on the panel.

Some Tube Problems Amateurs Will Have

Have you been confronted with a problem like this? A receiving set consists of a detector and two stages of audio frequency amplification. A UV-200 radiotron is used for the detector and two UV-201 radiotrons for the amplifier. Now, one of the radiotrons burns out and it is replaced by a UV-201A. Which stage of the amplifier is best suited to be equipped with the latter tube? The usual practice would be to insert the new tube in the socket formerly occupied by the old tube. However, better results are obtained by placing the UV-201A in the first stage of the amplifier and the UV-201 in the second or last stage.

Increase Audibility of Signals Forty Per Cent

A new antenna cable recently developed has shown that by its use the audibility of signals can be increased by nearly 40 per cent, says the Scientific American. The conductor is composed of ten strands of No. 18 bare copper wire braided closely on a special machine to give it a ribbon-like appearance, one-half inch wide by one-eighth inch thick. With an antenna 50 feet long of this type, situated in a basement at a level about one foot below the surface of the earth, better results were obtained than with an antenna set of down at an elevation of 40 feet.

CARE OF THE BABY

Where should the baby sleep? In his own bed both night and day? What sort of a bed should he have? A clothes basket or a soap box with a pillow makes a good bed. Cover the pillow with rubber sheeting or oilcloth, and use light weight bed covers.

When should he have his bath? Every day at 8:30 o'clock.

Should I wash the baby's mouth? No, let it alone.

How many stools a day should a baby have? From one to three.

What should they be like? Smooth, soft, and yellow.

Is it necessary to keep the baby clean after each stool? Very necessary. The parts must always be kept clean and dry. He must be changed at once when he is wet or soiled, diapers washed and well rinsed.

How long should a well baby sleep each day? For the first month, almost all the time except when eating.

Does it injure the baby for him to cry? No, a well trained baby, who is properly fed, sometimes cries before feeding.

How shall he get fresh air in winter? It is not necessary to take baby out of the house, in very cold weather he can get fresh air by having a window open for an hour or so a day where he is sleeping, but special care must be taken to protect him from a draught and keep him well covered. In moderate or warm weather, his crib or cradle can be placed in the yard or on the porch.

Is water necessary for baby to drink? Yes, just as necessary as it is for plants and animals. Offer it often during the day.

SIXTY-SEVEN COUNTIES SEND DELEGATES TO U. O. F. K.

Sixty-seven counties will send delegates to Junior Week, June 9 to 14 at the University of Kentucky this year according to an announcement made by J. W. Whitehouse, state leader of boys and girls clubs. County agents and home demonstration agents from forty counties have already made arrangements for 383 boys and girls and over 41 club leaders to take the short course of instruction given at the University during Junior Week.

Practically all of the boys and girls will arrive here with expenses paid either through the efforts of their local clubs in giving parties, suppers, lunches, or through the assistance of local business men's organizations and the Louisville and Nashville, and Louisville, Henderson and St. Louis railroad companies. Rooms in the students dormitories and board at the University cafeteria and at Patterson Hall will be furnished at seven dollars for the week. The large number interested in Junior Week this year officials declare make it necessary to rent nearly 200 cots in order to accommodate everyone, but cots will be placed in the reception rooms and other large rooms of the dormitories and no crowding will be necessary.

This demonstration teams will meet during the week in the contests for the state championship of boys and girls clubs. Demonstrations are one of the most valuable parts of club work according to officials because through them the members learn better farm and home practices of especial importance, in improving agriculture and country living in their respective sections. When the teams return they tour their counties, giving these demonstrations. The champion boys' team last year showed the work so effectively that seven new poultry houses were erected in the county as a result. The thirty teams will compete for six hundred dollars in prizes, the winning boys' team and the winning girls' team to receive thirty dollars each as first prize in addition to a silver cup.

BIBLE READING REQUIRED IN KENTUCKY SCHOOLS.

That "the teacher in charge shall read, or cause to be read, a portion of the Bible daily in every class room or session room of the common schools of the State of Kentucky in the presence of the pupils therein assembled," is the gist of a bill recently signed by the Governor of Kentucky. No pupil will be required to read the Bible against the wish of his parents or guardians. Failure of any teacher to carry out the provisions of this bill will be cause for revoking his certificate.

TAKING BOYS OUT OF SCHOOL.

Early in spring when farm work begins, some families will take their boys out of school to help around the place. It is a costly thing to do. If it is planned to give the boy a certain amount of education, his schooling will cost him more if it is irregular. He will have to attend a longer time than if he stuck to his books through the whole term.

Better leave him in school as long as school keeps, so that he can get the full benefit of the public money that is being spent to give him an education. Otherwise his father will be paying to have the other children of the community educated, but will not be getting his share of the education for his own family. Farm work done by neglecting schooling costs high.

GETTING OUT OF THE MUCK.

Some people, if they get into some situation of danger where courage and resolution are needed, will become so rattled and excited as to greatly lower their chances of successful escape. Such a situation confronted the two heroic aviators of the world encircling trip, when their plane crashed in the wilds of Alaska leaving them to make their way out of the wilderness.

The story of the settlement of this country, from the days of the early colonies, back to recent times, in building up the west, has been full of just such experiences. Hundreds of thousands of old-time living could tell how they have faced many tight places, and came out as a result of stout hearts and resourcefulness under dangerous conditions.

The country rejoices that these two brave men escaped unhurt, and that it felt confident, considering the way so many Americans have acted in such situations, that they would be equal to the emergency.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

THE RAINY DAY.

Once upon a time many moons ago the rainy days were ones used in the performance of the odd jobs which had been set aside for such occasions, of course this was in the good old days of yore when the chores made up the training for the successful man. These were days when the parents were the sources of authority much of which has long since been delegated to the young Americans of the present age.

In these modern days the rain hardly begins hitting the roof before the tin Lizzie is run out and the youngsters, and often the whole family, are soon pressing brick in the county seat and doing jobs are numbered with things that might have been.

Cigarette smoking will kill a young man quicker than any other bad habit. Notice one that is constantly smoking and you will see a young man without energy, one that never reads books, and is better satisfied when he is asleep. Furthermore he is never called upon to take a responsible position. If this fits any young man in Burlington they should quit the coffin nails and quit them now.

OUR COMING CITIZENS.

About this time a great army—greater than that drafted for the World War—composed of the most progressive youth of the nation, is going forth from the schools and colleges into the higher duties of life—going somewhere.

Among these young people who are destined to fill the most important positions of trust within the gift of the people—leaders of men and leaders of women. Then there are some who will stumble by the wayside—who are deficient in vision in incentive, in desire.

Schooling doesn't give to you new or other talents, only increased facilities for using them. Having been trained and disciplined to think and to act along definite lines, you can when you get into the world follow lines of action as you were taught to follow lines of thought.

All the schooling a man may get in a University will not make him master of a trade or profession. No matter what his name, his wealth or social standing he must get into the push and push—push hard and persistently. If there is anything you really want to know the only thing you have to do is to get after it and chase it hotly and persistently, even relentlessly, and you will drive it to cover in due time.

What the world wants is a man who has principle underlying their expertness, principle under their law, their medicine, their business, men who stand for something outside of their offices and stores, who stand for something in their community, whose presence carries weight. No substitute has ever yet been discovered for honesty. Multitudes of people have gone to the wall trying to find one.

Let the Youth of today set before himself high ideals of honor of integrity, of true manhood and womanhood, and then patiently set to work confident in his ability to face the world, to extract success even from apparent failure.

CRIME WITHIN THE LAW

Dr. J. H. Banton, district attorney New York Society of Certified Public Accountants, during which he declared that the people of this nation have lost more than three billion dollars through the sale of worthless securities. He characterized as a "joke" the present law which provides that the Attorney General may employ a promoter or broker in fake securities.

Just why our legislators, state and national, are apparently controlled by stock gamblers and speculators is more or less a mystery. There is no reason why the stock brokerage business should not be as safe and sound as any other business and it seems to be worse than racing or the cheapest lottery.

It is difficult to understand why the standard of honor of the investment banker or broker should be so much lower than that of the grocer or of goods merchant. If one were to purchase a rug and found it defective, the merchant would provide another and apologize for the discomfort. If a grocer sells a dozen eggs and some of them are unfit, he will replace them. But buy fresh eggs from a stock broker and he will laugh at your complaint over rottenness. Its within the law. Bucket-ers and crooked brokers should be put out of business, and "rigging the market" should be made a prison offense. Crime is crime, whether stealing, whether it be done with a black-jack or an attractive booklet and the whole business should be outlawed.

WHAT WOMEN ARE DOING IN POLITICS.

Charges that the women have only a negligible influence in American politics are refuted in the New Republic, which asserts that the National League of Women Voters is infinitely better in purposes, activities and results than any masculine organization of similar character. Mrs. M. A. C. retires president, pointed out in her annual report at the recent convention that of the thirteen planks in the League program in 1920, two-thirds have already been enacted into federal statutes. In the individual states the league has secured the passage of 420 bills and has defeated sixty-four it is organized in 346 or 433 congressional districts; twenty-three of its state-wide and fifteen of its city-wide organizations maintain regular headquarters. Thirty-two publications appear under the league imprint, practically all of which make a feature of carrying authoritative matter on all sides of every important question.

Politicians are waking up to the fact that such women's organizations as this represent a considerable power in public affairs.

Plans are afoot for the erection of at least 14 new Class B radio-stations, and seven are already under construction, according to the Department of Commerce. To date, there are 49 of these high-class and high-powered stations.

George G. Hughes, Prominent Citizen and Attorney, Passes to His Reward After Having Reached Nearly Eighty Years.

George G. Hughes, aged 79 years, 8 months and 15 days, one of the county's best known and highly beloved citizens has closed his eyes in that sleep that knows no awakening on this side of the impassable gulf. The sad end came peacefully at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Earl Walton, Petersburg, Ky., Saturday afternoon, May 31, 1924, at three o'clock. He had been in declining health for two years or more and had been confined to his home, and bed for the past month.

He accompanied his nephew G. W. Sanford to Glendale, Arizona, last fall, hoping that the climate out there might improve his failing health, but after a losing fight of about six months decided to come back to Kentucky, which he did but a few weeks ago. Since then it has been but a question of time until he passed out.

George Hughes was born in Burlington Sept. 16th, 1844, where he spent his entire life until about five years ago, when he went to Petersburg to make his home with his daughter. He was a son of Ethan A. and Nancy (Crisler) Hughes. He received an academic education and read law under J. W. Calvert, beginning in 1863; he then entered the Ohio State and Union Law College from which he graduated in 1867, and at once commenced the

KEEPING YOUNG FOLKS HOME.

How to keep the young folks at home in the evening is a problem that has confronted many parents, because of the counter attractions that take them away.

Some parents think they have solved it by installing a radio. There are few young people, especially boys who are not attracted by a radio receiving set.

It brings to their ears concerts, news, results of athletic events, lectures and sermons. They can travel from coast to coast in one evening, picking up the strains of a famous piece of classical music one minute and casting it aside in a few minutes for one of their favorite jazz numbers by an orchestra in a city perhaps one thousand miles away. The boy who last year was standing on the curbstone smoking, or wasting his hours away in a pool room, may now be spending his time at home, roaming over the universe with his mind tuning in here and there, constantly striving to find something new that the air is willing to give up.

It is a new and thrilling pleasure for a boy and has a peculiar fascination that attracts him, and mother too, but the wise parents will sit back and allow the youngsters to manipulate the dial, realizing full well what it means to have them at home. The radio provides a peculiarly useful interest for boys, stimulating their ingenuity and encouraging them to do things themselves instead of watching someone else do them. The boy who acquires skill in handling the instruments is the one who has patiently figured it all out, and he is the boy who will apply himself with the same care to the big job out in the world when he gets to it.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks to all our friends and neighbors for their aid and kindness shown us during the sickness and death of our mother and grandmother. We thank Mr. Bullock for the way he conducted the funeral; also Rev. O. J. Chastain for his consoling words.

John Cave and Family.

A radical is one who has none; a progressive one who is getting it, and a conservative one who has it.

IT WAS EVER THUS

It's very much the habit of men as a rule to be critical of women's dress. No doubt Adam criticized Eve's first costume as immodest, for ever since that time the dress of woman has come under masculine displeasure.

It seems strange to the male mind with the incessant change in feminine dress, that it does not by accident some time strike a mode which should meet with the approval of those for whom women are generally believed to aim to please in their dress.

But if fashion decrees that skirts shall be longer, the woman who does not promptly lengthen her skirts has little of the eternal feminine about her.

But it was ever thus. Though some men may think that the present generation of women has gone to greater extremes than ever before they should reflect that the feminine sex has not changed one whit since the days of the first woman.

In the early eighties, the enterprise and progressiveness of a New York department store, in installing the newly invented electric light nearly caused a strike and aroused much public discussion all because some young woman—probably the forerunner of the modern flapper—inquired, "Does Electric light cause freckles?"

The young sales women threatened to leave in a body and this was prevented only by the pleading of the manager to give the light one month's trial to convince them that it was harmless.

But times have changed and their grand laughter use electricity to beautify themselves.

SERVICE ON THE JURY

Jury service is one of the first duties of citizenship, but it is one of the last duties the average citizen is willing to perform. Men of character and ability who possess the natural qualifications necessary to the rendering of fair and intelligent verdicts will go to great lengths in order to evade service on a jury.

Yet they will criticize the judgment of those who are willing to serve. Mr. Average Citizen feels that he can not afford to neglect his business interests in order to spend two or three days, or perhaps a week, in a jury box at small pay.

The financial sacrifice such service entails as a barrier between him and his duty to his community. He shirks duty in his attempts to evade making the sacrifice.

In far too many cases this attitude fills the jury box with men who are not fitted morally or intellectually to perform their duties without fear or favor.

The result is spread broadcast over the country is the form of criminality that is difficult to check and that increases the tax burden.

The law of nature requires that we reap as we sow, and even now we can hear the hum of the reaper.

IN THOSE GOOD OLD DAYS

In looking over an old record at the County Clerk's office one day last week, we found the following order made by the County Court on the 1st day of January 1852. Lewis L. Youell, Judge.

The court established and fixed the following rates and prices to be paid to the Tavern keepers in this county for the next six months to wit:

Peach Brandy half pint.....	12½¢
Whisky per half pint.....	6½¢
Wine per half pint.....	37½¢
French Brandy half pint.....	18½¢
Cherry Brandy half pint.....	12½¢
Porter half pint.....	12½¢
Corn or oats per gallon.....	12½¢
Stallage per horse 12 hrs.....	18½¢
Pasturage for horse 12 hrs.....	12½¢
Breakfast, Dinner or Supper.....	25¢
Lodging per night.....	12½¢

That was seventy-two years ago, and those good old days have gone to return.

May, 1924, has gone and will be remembered as one of the coldest and wettest in the memory of the oldest inhabitant. While no weather records were broken, the weather during the month was unusual both with respect to the number of days of rain and temperature deficiency, according to the weather forecaster. During the month there were but five "clear days." Partly cloudy weather prevailed on 12 and cloudy weather on 14 of the days. The temperature on May 22 and 26 was 39 degrees. This is the lowest ever recorded in May and was duplicated only on June 1, 1889.

CARD OF THANKS

I want to express my thanks to all who so kindly assisted us during the illness and death of our husband and father.

LEARNING AND BOOZE.

Young college men are condemned when they drink intoxicating liquor, but Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, was allowed to go scot free of criticism for several days when he made the extraordinary statement—extraordinary for a university president—that the liquor business should be licensed and permitted again legally to take up its trade of producing human devils.

It is little wonder that the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act are flaunted by supposedly self-respecting people when men of the standing of Dr. Butler publicly proclaim that they are in favor of the open saloon.

Dr. Charles W. Elliott of Harvard took up the gauntlet against Dr. Butler, but it remained for the virile, rugged educational leaders of the middlewest to leap into the controversy and take a militant stand in favor of prohibition.

"The prohibition law can be enforced," said one. "The more rigid it is enforced, the fewer infractions there will be."

To say that it can not be enforced is equivalent to admitting that the American people are morally incapable of enacting laws for their own government and lack the moral stamina necessary for enforcement of the laws which they have enacted.

It would have been a great disappointment to millions of drys throughout the United States if college and university presidents had permitted Dr. Butler's aspirations cast at the eighteenth amendment, to have gone unchallenged.

They deserve challenging and Dr. Butler deserves a rebuke. No man who believes that a law, enacted in accordance with the restrictions laid down by the constitution of the U. S. should not be obeyed and enforced, should be in a position which gives weight to his opinions and which may influence college men and women.

JUNIORS TO GET INSIDE DOPE ON UNIVERSITY.

Inside dope on the University of Kentucky will be obtained by more than five hundred boys and girls who are coming here for Junior Week, June 7. Two of the main buildings of the university will be examined each day among those designated are the Experiment Station or Sovell Hall, White Hall, Mechanical Hall, Natural Science Hall, Neville Hall, the New Chemistry Building, Mining Engineering and the Library.

Plans announced by state leader of boys and girls clubs J. W. Whitehouse makes a special point of introducing the boys and girls to the professors, the instructional work, and the methods of the university. Every boy and girl will not only become a student at the university but will become a sleuth ferreting out information to take back home with him. All the facilities of the institution are being turned over to the juniors and for five days they will play the part of university students.

JUNIORS SHOW SPRING LAMBS ON JULY 15.

The first annual Spring Lamb Show for Junior Agricultural Clubs will be held at the Bourbon Stock Yards in Louisville on July 15, according to an announcement just made by G. J. McKenney, field agent in club work of the Kentucky College of Agriculture. The competition open not only to young sheep growers of Kentucky but to junior clubs in Alabama, Georgia, Indiana, Tennessee, Mississippi, the Carolinas, Florida, Virginia and West Virginia.

NOTICE.

Beginning Tuesday June 17th, all feature pictures shown at Florence Theatre will be Paramount pictures. These are the best pictures made and have been obtained at an added expense, but believing that the people will appreciate these pictures sufficient to justify it we are still keeping the admission at 22 and 10 cents.

On Sunday June 8th an all day meeting will be held at Big Bone Baptist church. This meeting will terminate a revival of one week's duration. On Sunday June 9th an all day meeting will be held at the Burlington Baptist church. Rev. Adams last Sunday night announced that this meeting would not be a financial one in any respect, but would be for the educational and spiritual uplift of the church. Everyone is invited and urged to be present at these meetings.

In last week's issue an item stated that A. B. Benker, C. H. Youell and Judge J. M. Lassing were in Louisville attending a "wool" meeting, it should have been a "wool" meeting and the RECORDER now makes the correction with apologies.

When we get a mean, anonymous letter for publication, we always recall that some great American said: "An anonymous critic has the kindness of a snake." But we wonder just what he had against the poor snake.

RICHWOOD.

Shelby Conner left one day last week for Idaho, where he owns a farm.

Russell Tewell, who was hit by a machine while driving on the Dixie near Erlanger, has about recovered. Frank Youell's children have had measles.

Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Youell and Miss Rachel of Covington, spent Memorial Day with Frank Youell and family.

Rev. Bedinger and an evangelist have been holding a very good meeting at the school house here the past two weeks.

Yeggs and stick-ups have always given us rubes credit for handling small caliber guns, but the Richwood store crooks were against two 45-caliber automatics and know there are more hereabouts. Guns change with the times, so all bold highwaymen take notice.

A great many of our folks attended the J. C. Conrad funeral Monday. Jerry was reared on a farm just below this town.

Chas. Griffith has started an ice cream parlor and soft drink place in the late L. D. Jackson stand.

Foxes are still numerous near here and the Erlanger and Union fox hunters are getting good practice for their dogs, and they will be fit for the Fox Derby when it is due.

Our motor cops are keeping good order on the Dixie, especially at night. A great many of the autoists are so fearful of them they park along the highway without lights for fear of getting beyond the speed limit. Q. E. D.

Shelby Cowen, of Covington, spent Monday night with relatives in Burlington.

The Fiscal Court was in session, Tuesday, all the members being present.

President Coolidge is reported to have greatly enjoyed the circus, the Congress is supposed to give him considerable entertainment along that line.

Those Round the World aviators who crashed against an Alaskan mountain peak, have come out better than some automobile drivers when a tire moves out into the roads and hits them.

Continued progress in the work of eradicating bovine tuberculosis from the United States is noted in a recent report by the United States Department of Agriculture. During March, 1924, veterinarians under the supervision of the State and Federal Governments tested 448,642 head of cattle for tuberculous infection. Of this number 13,389 reacted to the test, indicating that they were infected with this disease which annually exacts such a heavy toll of our livestock industry. Cattle reacting to the tuberculin test are disposed of generally by slaughter under supervision of the Federal meat-inspection service.

After the railroads were returned to their owners at the close of the war, the government paid to them several hundred millions of dollars based on valuation, claims that were made the railroads. Since that date the Interstate Commerce Commission expended many millions of dollars in trying to ascertain just how much the railroads were overpaid. Senator Cummings of Iowa, believes the government is entitled to the return of nearly $400,000,000. Senator LaFollette declares it is two or three times that figure. In any event the railroads have the money and the burden of proof is on the government. The Interstate Commerce Commission claims that at least $600,000 more will be needed to complete the valuation of the properties, and Congress will be asked to appropriate this amount.

EARTH FURNISHES MATERIAL FOR ITS OWN CONQUEST.

Ask a friend what the fourth most valuable American mineral product is in terms of total production. Ask him where gold stands on the list. He is likely to put gold first and silver second. He may get coal, iron and petroleum in their right order if he is pretty well read up on such things, but chances are he will fall down on the fourth article in Uncle Sam's list recently made available as of the year 1920.

The saying that our wealth comes out of the earth is well known, but not so well understood. It is one of those things we hear, take for granted, and think very little about.

For instance, little do we think when riding over a brick street or highway, or watching the erection of a brick building, or a brick sewer, that clay products from a standpoint of production. Thus it is, in the case of brick pavements, that earth furnishes the material which helps us conquer the mud and speed up transportation.

Try this list on your friends. Here it is as officially compiled:

Coal (soft)	$1,950,000,000
Iron (pig)	$1,137,926,000
Petroleum	$1,360,000,000
Clay Products	$364,220,000
Copper	$222,467,000
Stone	$120,500,000
Lead (refined)	$76,296,000
Sand	$62,694,000
Silver	$7,600,000
Gold	$49,609,000

Figures for 1923 in the brick and paving brick branch of the clay products industries indicate that the total production for that year was about 500,000,000 brick, enough to lay 1,250 miles of 18-foot roadway. In addition to this specialized branch of the industry, there is the common brick, face brick, fire brick, hollow tile and other clay products.

THE STRAW HAT.

It is in accordance with nature that along in May or June, when warm weather makes a warm hat uncomfortable, the vast majority of men discard their heavy headgear of winter and appear in light looking straw hats. Wearing a good comfortable straw is one of the pleasures of the season.

There is general gratitude among the men that the early tendency to make their hats highly ornate was long ago stopped.

During the reign of James I of England the brims of men's hats broadened out and feathers were placed fantastically at the back and sides of the high crown, and brims were often fastened up on one side with a jewel. But the men of today prefer simplicity, suited to people who must live by hard work, and do not want to be bothered by clothes meant for show rather than industry.

While men are said as a rule not to be governed by whims of fashion, yet the suddenness with which straw hats will appear on the street at certain dates, and soon spread to the heads of most of the men, show that the male sex is not so independent of style as it claims to be. A man will wear a straw hat on a cold day in June when a felt one would be more appropriate. Yet he would feel unsuitably dressed to be seen wearing one on a prematurely hot day in early spring, when a straw would be exceedingly comfortable, but somewhat conspicuous.

An American crowd at this time in early summer, with most of the men wearing new straw hats, has a most cheerful appearance. Unfortunately, the majority of hats fade like the mere and yellow leaf. The poets who write those depressing verses on the falling of the leaves, might get out some equally melancholy ones, on the fading of the straw hat. But you can find another at the same place for a sum, or perhaps the cleaner can do wonders with the old one.

The continued rains of the last week have still further delayed work on the farms, no tobacco setting has been done, and very little of any kind has been accomplished during the last week. There is quite a good deal of corn yet to be planted, while some say that the corn that was planted some time back has not come up and they fear that they may have to replant their entire crops.

The continued wet weather has kept the soil too wet for corn planting and it is thought that not more than half of the crop in Boone county has been put in. In fact there are quite a number of farmers who have not finished breaking their ground.

Assessment increases have been made by the Tax Commission at Frankfort in all but nine counties in the state.

NOW IS THE TIME

(Editorial Enquirer, Monday, May 12th)

Secretary of Commerce Hoover calls upon people to buy coal now, during the months of May, June and July. This sensible advice will be followed by the prudent. It is addressed to corporations and manufacturers as well as to householders.

Now is the time to buy coal. You must have it at any event. Why not wisely meet the issue under the most favorable circumstances. No one can tell what may happen overnight. The sensible plan is to follow the Secretary's advice and fill your coal bin now.

SURPRISE SHOWER.

Last Saturday night Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Weaver gave a surprise shower at their attractive home in Burlington in honor of A. H. (Pete) Jones and wife. By prearrangement on the part of Mrs. Weaver "Pete" and wife were present when their many friends began to arrive, and in the course of an hour two tables were stacked with presents. The outstanding feature of the evening according to those present was a speech by the groom, "Pete's" friends, who are numbered only by those who come in contact with him, are now of the unanimous opinion that he has exercised his usual sagacity in the selection of a bride. The people of Burlington and vicinity welcome them in their midst and join in wishing them many happy and prosperous years of married life. Following is the list of gifts and by whom presented:

Mr. and Mrs. Elijah Stephens percolator.

Holding that it was his opinion that a pardon issued by Gov. William J. Fields to Frank Hudspeh, 606 E. Twentieth street, Covington, had been obtained through misrepresentation, Judge Frank M. Tracy, in the Kenton Circuit Court Monday handed down an opinion overruling a motion to permit the filing of the pardon for the release of Hudspeh, who was fined $300 and costs and sentenced to 60 days in jail for a violation of the prohibition act.

Right to appeal from the decision of the court was given and Attorney John T. Murphy and Atty. Martin J. Brown announced that an appeal is to be taken immediately to the Kentucky Court of Appeals.

Mr. Wilford Rouse and Mrs. Marjorie Tanner sprang a surprise on their many friends, when they went to Newport, last Sunday, and were married. Mr. Rouse is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Karl Rouse, of near Burlington, and is a splendid young man; the bride is the daughter of Mr. Harvey S. Tanner, of the Hebron neighborhood, and was one of the graduates of the 1924 class of the Boone County High School, and was quite a favorite among her schoolmates. The Recorder joins with a host of friends in wishing these young people all the joys this life affords. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Harold Conner.

Next Sunday will be observed by the Lodges at Petersburg as Memorial Day. According to the annual custom the various lodges will form and march in regular procession to the cemetery below town where they will decorate the graves of departed brethren. They will be accompanied as usual by brass band. Rev. Duncan, of Aurora, will address the Odd-Fellows and Knights of Pythias, while Mr. DeHart, State Deputy, will address the Modern Woodmen. Everyone invited.

The ground is in fine condition for setting out tobacco, but few growers have plants big enough to set out any to amount to anything. A good many have set out from a thousand plants to half acre and quite a number have reset from one-half to two acres. There is some complaint that plants are scarce, but it is likely there will be enough for all. The greatest trouble will be the late setting.

Miss Dorothy Nell Furnish, who has been with her grandmother, Mrs. Laura Martin, since last fall and attended the Boone County Hi School at the last term, will leave for her home at Golden Pond today. Her many friends—both young and old, hate to see her leave. Her grandmother accompanied her home for a few months visit.

The weather is so bad that scarcely anything is being done in the farming line. Rain, almost every day, has put work back so far that most farmers are very much discouraged and are afraid that the crops will be so late that they will amount to little.

NOTICE.

East Bend Lodge No. 114, Knights of Pythias will hold Memorial services in their Hall at Rabbit Hash on Sunday afternoon, June 8th, 1924, at 2:30. Everybody is invited. A good speaker will make an address.

Special Correspondent of the RE
CORDER

EVERY UTTERANCE and move of public officials these days is being scanned for its possible political significance—and a great deal of time and money is being expended in determining what the political effect will be. The soldiers bonus was passed by the State over the President's veto, not so much in gratitude to the veterans, but to demonstrate to Mr. Coolidge that the Senate was still alive and kicking and would have something to say from time to time about party policies.

POLITICAL NEWS itself is not much. Hiram Johnson has released all his delegates—about a dozen. Senator LaFollette is back in town and the center of more third-party talk. William G. McAdoo stopped off in Washington long enough to shake hands around and then went on his way.

IT IS WITH considerable amusement that politicians in Washington are watching the political comedy being staged intermittently in Indiana by Senator James E. Watson and Postmaster General Harry S. New. Enemies of many years standing in matters where the favors of Hoosier voters are concerned, Watson and New both attended the recent Republican State convention at Indianapolis as spokesmen for President Coolidge and each vied to stand out as the real leader of the G. O. P. in their home state. Reports reaching here indicate that Watson is at the moment about two jumps ahead of the Postmaster General.

SENATOR FRANK L. Greene of Vermont, who voted against the soldiers bonus bill in the final test in Congress, is about to get a bonus himself, and a mighty substantial one, too. Greene was severely wounded in the head several months ago when he got between a bootlegger and a prohibition agent having a duel on Pennsylvania Avenue. Senator Lodge has put in a bill to grant Greene a bonus of $7,500—an extra year's salary—to pay for his medical expenses.

THE PRESENT SENATORIAL antics over the world court are an interesting example of what goes on in Congress every day. Determined to kill the world court idea as dead as a doornail, Republican leaders in the Senate have brought forth so many conflicting proposals for American participation in the tribunal that months and months would be required to agree on any one of them. The result is that there will be no vote on the proposition at this session and the issue can be dragged out again, a year or two years from now if a foreign relations issue is needed.

WHILE HER HUSBAND has been the center of an attack in the Senate, Mrs. Burton K. Wheeler has not wasted her time worrying. In addition to caring for her five children, she is a student at George Washington University, where she is learning to speak and write Spanish.

WITH THE SOLDIERS bonus and tax reduction bill out of the way, Congress is turning its attention to farm relief and railroad legislation during the remaining days of the session. The measures under consideration are the Howell-Barkley bill to abolish the Railroad Labor Board and the McNary-Haugen bill to set up a great Government corporation to stabilize domestic prices and export surplus farm products.

SOME DIFFICULTY is being found in selecting a new American Ambassador to Japan, following the resignation of Cyrus E. Woods. The man who takes the job must be possessed of a fairly large private fortune, because the Government salary is not enough to take care of the various social obligations. Among those in the running for the Tokyo post are former Senator Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana and Senator Lewis McCormick of Illinois.

There is something pathetic and sorrowful in the picture of the governor of a great state entering prison doors to serve a long sentence. Governor McCray has evidently been a candidate for that portal for a long time, and there is encouragement and cheer in the fact that no man is beyond the visitation of justice under our system of government.

Perhaps one reason why fewer politicians wear long tails coats nowadays, is that it would be no easy feat for some one to pull on the tails thereof to get them to sit down.

Hebron--Seventy Years Ago

The following was received from Lucy D. C. Newman, Carrollton, Ky. Seventy years ago this summer, the Hebron Lutheran church was built. At that time, the community was known as Briar Thicket. The residents of the surrounding country got their mail either at Florence or at Taylorsport, which was at that time a flourishing little town with a postoffice. When the folks of Briar Thicket concluded to ask the Government for a postoffice of their own, the question of a name for the new postoffice came up and it was unanimously decided that the name of the church would do quite well for the postoffice also. Hence Hebron.

In view of the fact that Kentucky is celebrating home-coming week in the near future, and knowing that the RECORDER goes to Boone county people in many different parts of the United States, among whom are several members of the Hebron church, I am sending you a little ballad about Hebron, which may be of interest to some of your readers.

Midst orchards and meadows and fields of grain,
Beneath the warm southern skies,
Girt round with abundance on every side
The village of Hebron lies.

When God made the world, He smiled on this spot
And covered with green its face;
And cons it lay till our forefathers came
And rested their feet in this place.

They built themselves houses and barns and roads,
Where only the Indian had trod;
They built for their daughters and sons a school
And a church where they might worship God.

The little brick church that our forefathers built
Has stood now for seventy years;
And over its door-step its builders all
Have been borne amidst flowers and tears.

And out in the world on the land and sea,
The sons of these men have passed
Some have earned name and some have not,
But many have come home at last.

For often the search for fame or for gold
Is a long and fruitless search;
The wanderer longs once more to be back
In the dear old village church.

And we who have stayed where we first saw light,
Contented from year to year
With the endless routine of husbandry,
Wait patiently for them here.

We know that the call of the brooks and trees
Go out to them where they roam;
The bell in the tower of the village church
Will summon the wanderers home.

Through seed time and harvest, in sun and rain,
Life quietly rolls along,
Tomorrow will be just like yesterday,
Some tears, some laughter, some song.

Our children are born here, our aged ones pass;
Our roses all bloom and wilt,
The unchanging corner-stone of our lives
Is the church that our forefathers built.

Midst orchards and meadows and fields of grain,
Beneath the warm southern skies,
Girt round with abundance on every side
The village of Hebron lies.

LUCY D. C. NEWMAN

Too Much Rural Pessimism.
At times when farm conditions are not favorable, discouragement and pessimism are apt to grow unchecked, and the most radical statements are heard as to what is going to happen to the rural districts.

It has been said in some places that most of the bright young people were leaving the country, and that before many years in the localities the rural population would consist of people of an inferior grade of intelligence.

It should be remembered that when bad conditions prevail in any respect, there is a strong tendency for people to concentrate their attention on the features of the situation that are bad, and to ignore the favorable aspects. The croakers may look at the one man who has had hard luck and failed to make good, and they may ignore the conditions of a number of others who are getting along fairly well.

The continued high price of manufactured products, at a time when farm product values remain relatively low, is a bad condition. But that does not prove that progressive folks are all going to leave the country. In any section, even those that have the greatest difficulties, you will find plenty of capable young people who have full faith in the future of the country towns, and are going ahead to plan for a country career.

When unfavorable factors exist, there are natural forces that tend to eliminate them. If too much wheat is raised for instance, many farmers will cut down their acreage of that staple and grow something else, and wheat will bring a normal price again. There have been many periods in the past when the farmers had to meet hard condition, and they always got out of them, and they will again.

ELECTRIC RAY POSSIBILITIES.

A British inventor claims that the electric ray which he can control could be used in warfare to put everything in its range absolutely out of existence. It creates an atmosphere, he says, in which nothing can live.

Scientific expectations are not always realized, yet it is evident that technical men are preparing for war on a scale and with weapons that had scarcely been dreamed of when the World War began. If they keep on it is quite conceivable that a fighting nation could sweep its enemies, including all non-combatants, of the earth. The progress of such weapons has to be written up, before or after, nations possessed of such powers will pay each other and make the globe uninhabitable.

The question of abolition of capital punishment was not down. It is talked about. It keeps cropping up in legislatures. Societies pass resolutions about it. Organizations hold debates about it. The newspapers print speeches about it.

Why? Because of a growing unbelief that the "eye for an eye" develops good twentieth century morals.

It is argued "but murder needs capital punishment as a deterrent." If it were true, everyone would be in favor of capital punishment. It isn't true. One of the reasons why it isn't true is that judges and juries are loath to inflict the extreme penalty. Death for murder is less and less frequent as a punishment, even when it is the law. For instance, during a period of eight years, from 1912 to 1919, in 12 of our states, there were 19,775 homicides, 467 supreme sentences and 336 executions. In New York State during the 10 years from 1912 to 1921, there were 4,626 homicides, 193 sentences to supreme penalty, 117 executions.

In England and Wales during the same period, there were 2,668 homicides, 231 sentences to supreme penalty and 125 executions. In the four years France had 5,719 homicides, 154 supreme sentences and 48 executions. These are not isolated instances. The same uncertainty everywhere prevails; and statistics show that it prevailed to the same degree 50 years ago.

That is the record; if capital punishment really prohibits murder by terrifying would-be murderers, why isn't it used as a reply to murder? But, if, as is here contended, capital punishment serves but to show the inability of society to do anything with its uneducated murderers but kill them, and yet is so loath to do so, that, in but a small proportion of cases where capital punishment is legal it is used, why continue it on the books?

The doctor says, "While there is life there is hope." While there is life, there is hope of a reformation; of a new vision a making over. To kill those who kill, is, after all, but a weakness; a saying "we don't know what else to do, and it's cheaper to kill them than to try to cure them."

A hundred years hence, the chair and the rope will be as much archaeological curiosities as are the rack and the thumbcrew today.

If then, why not now?—Exchange.

"JONAH" is the name of a Biblical character famous for his proverbial bad luck. Jonah's presence on board ship was believed in ancient times to have been responsible for a terrific storm at sea. When Jonah was tossed overboard the storm is supposed to have ceased. A Jonah today means a person who brings bad luck.

SEEING WHAT YOU LOOK FORBy THOMAS A. CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I DON'T believe I ever found a four-leaved clover in my life, though I lived for years in the midst of clover fields. I knew a girl once who could reach down into any stray bunch of grass and pick out a half-dozen four-leaved clovers with unerring accuracy. I suppose the explanation is that she was looking for them and I was not. The same thing is true with reference to other experiences in life. The man who is looking for trouble finds it at every street corner and at every cross roads. The sensitive soul who is watching out for slights and personal grievances is invariably rewarded by finding them at his elbow.

"You hurt my feelings by what you wrote the other day," an acquaintance said to me.

"How is that?" I asked.

"Because you used my follies as an illustration."

"But I did not," I replied. "I did not have the least idea that what I said would apply to you." She was simply looking for personal thrusts, and she found them.

A good deal of our unhappiness comes from grievances, or slights, or troubles, or disasters that we have looked for—that we have ferreted out and forced out of cover. If we had gone ahead cheerfully and happily we should have passed them by unobserved.

I know people who see no good in each other because they are constantly looking for evil; who turn every word and intonation and suggestion and unconscious act into something that is vindictive and calculating. Each finds a subtle irritating double meaning at every word or suggestion that the other utters, and all because he is looking for it.

The opposite of this is true. There is a sort of unphilosophical that does not see vulgarity or deceit or evil of any kind; that knows nothing of unfaithfulness, or dishonesty, or cause for depression and discouragement because it is not expecting them; it is not looking for them.

A young friend of mine had recently been with a crowd in which there had been considerable drinking. "I hope you were not too shocked by the drinking," I said to him. But he really had never seen it; he did not know about it; it had made no impression on him because his thoughts had been about it—he had not been looking for it.

The world in which we live is a very real world; it is full of pain and pleasure, of faithfulness and deceit, of truth and falsehood, of the sweet and the bitter, the vulgar and the refined, the beautiful and the ugly, but the reality is largely within us. We see what we're looking for.

Candler Loves Horses

Walter Candler, son of Asa G. Candler, the Atlanta (Ga.) millionaire, who is striving to develop the finest racing stable in the South, has just added 19 racing horses to his stable near Decatur, Ga., bringing the total of racing horses up to 60. Although many times a millionaire, Mr. Candler is a confirmed lover of horses. In the photograph is shown Mr. Candler driving "Bogalusa," one of his fine racing horses, on his own track at Decatur.

The Recorder Stands For BETTER FARMING, BETTER CITIZENS, BETTER HOMES

This and That.

Truths that cost us no money are very apt to have our warmest approval.

There's a vast difference between freedom of speech and freedom of speech.

Think only of yourself and sooner or later you'll have all every day to do it.

A man may earn his daily bread and still not be able to pay the milk man.

If farmers should get all that has been promised then they would all quit work.

What has become of the old-fashioned club woman who used to use a rolling pin?

Boys will be boys, but lots of people forget that they will be men in a few short years.

Music Week was celebrated in many back yards by beating the dust out of the rugs.

Be careful what you preach so that you will be able to practice it if the occasion arises.

Freshness is a fine quality in almost everything except people and imported cheese.

Perpetual knockers never find out, until it is too late, that the world has no uses for them.

Political circles are buzzing, which means that somebody is going to go along about next November.

Being advised not to worry, most people are at least able to avoid doing so about other people's troubles.

The woman who has beauty of character does not need to worry if her ears are exposed to the public gaze.

Better Homes Week is being celebrated, while the sports meet determined to celebrate Wetter Homes Week.

Both the man and his wife may desire a divorce, but it's up to the court who shall retain the custody of the dog.

And while many men can't tell whether the tax bill has passed or not, they know who is leading the major leagues.

Congress has not done much so far to help the farmers, but it is claimed that a lot of fine speeches have been made.

The consoling thing about reading the advertisements is that no one gets killed, divorced, sued or arrested for bootlegging.

The recent elections in Germany suggest that Kaiser Bill would better stick to his job of sawing wood for some time longer.

A headline says Germany claims victory in the dye fight. We very well remember another dye fight in which they claimed victory, too.

Some people who rarely vote at primaries and elections complain that politicians and public officials are managing affairs very badly.

The people are warned to keep their feet on the ground, but the aviators and fox trotters don't seem to heed this injunction very well.

We don't need new industries to make new money flow in half as much as we do community loyalty to keep the old money flowing out.

If the householder's grass grows slowly, he cusses the poor soil. And if it grows fast, he cusses the necessity of having to mow frequently.

A California woman had her hair bobbed on her hundredth birthday, all of which goes to show that it isn't the first hundred years that counts.

While many young men are competing for athletic success, there are some in Boone county who are merely trying to see which can drink the most ice cream soda.

Many city people are indignant this spring because the country districts don't keep up their roads in better shape for the pleasure cars of the city to ride over.

"Household Hints" never have anything about fathers putting up the screens or cleaning up the back yard. They never need to because most every man has a household hinter of his own.

A man was struck by lightning on a Cleveland golf links while carrying iron golf clubs. This won't deter anyone from playing golf, but it may suggest to some that it is dangerous to handle a hoe.

Makes Great Radio Invention

John Hays Hammond, Jr., photographed in Rome where he has contracted with the Italian government for a number of sets of his radio device which permits secrecy in radio transmission and also enables more than one message to be sent simultaneously on one wave length. The sets are to be manufactured in the United States.

THE DOG AS A CARRIER OF DISEASE.

It is an unwelcome thought to many who love their pets, whether cats or dogs, that the animals may on occasion be a source of great danger to the persons who dwell in the same house with them. Nevertheless, it is a fact and must be faced in the interest of the health both of children and of adults. Children are in greater danger, for they not only roll on the floor with the dog and caress him but are more susceptible to the diseases that the dog may transmit.

Tuberculosis is not an uncommon disease in dogs; they acquire it either from person or from other dogs. Hydrophobia is the most dangerous and fatal of all canine disorders, but fortunately it is rare. A victim of the disease, running amuck and biting a number of animals as well as men, may spread the epidemic. It is a commendable precaution to have your own dog vaccinated against rabies. Such forthought may save not only the dog's life but human life as well. Ringworm is probably transmissible from the child to the dog, and vice versa, though true mange is said not to be. However, when a dog shows many patches in his skin he should be treated for the eruption.

Dogs are susceptible to tapeworms and some of the worms the dog harbors may grow in the human intestine. One of them is small, but makes up in numbers what it lacks in size. Fleas take up the eggs of this worm and so may carry them to members of the family. The bladder worm is the most dangerous of the parasites that the dog may transfer to man. It is the larva of a species of tapeworm not uncommon in the dog, although it is small, it often occurs in great numbers. The symptoms are obscure, since the dog tolerates even large numbers of the worm. The most common symptom is an itching under the tail, which causes the animal to drag himself along the floor in a sitting posture. The larvae may reach the child when the dog licks the child's hands or, worse, his face and lips. These larvae form cysts in the organs of the host as an intermediate stage of their existence, and it is the cysts that constitute the danger to man. It is a good plan to have a veterinarian examine every pet dog at regular intervals. Or, if no veterinarian is to be had, it will do no harm to give the animal a dose of worm medicine from time to time.

SOME RESULTS OF PROHIBITION

In spite of all obstacles and handicaps the social, economic and industrial reforms accomplished under the four years of prohibition, are numerous that it is difficult to catalogue them in one article. But here are a few outstanding and verified facts.

There are no longer 177,790 open legalized saloons the death rate has fallen amazingly, the decrease being equivalent to saving 873,000 lives; the federal census shows a decrease of almost 6 per cent in our criminal population; at least seven million motor cars have been bought with money that formerly went to the saloon, and Roger Babson is authority for the state that this accounts for much of our prosperity; savings deposits increased last year a billion dollars; insurance holdings gained eleven billion; the growth of Labor clubs is due to prohibition; homes for alcoholics have decreased from 238 to 38; the per capita wealth has increased from $968 to $2,918, and labor unions are now going on record to the effect that the 18th Amendment is the greatest blessing they ever received.

San Joaquin county, Cal., proposes to plant walnut trees 100 feet apart on either side of roadways to be cared for as ordinary shade trees. In ten years these trees should yield 60 pounds of walnuts each, the sale of which should provide a fund of nearly $200,000 per year to be applied to road upkeep.

Before you call a man a failure remember that the word can justly be applied only if he has failed to accomplish what he set out to do—no matter what you think he ought to have done.

KITCHEN CONTESTANT RESTS WASHING DISHES.

How one of the contestants in the wife saving kitchen campaign which has been conducted this spring in nine counties of the state rests while she is washing dishes is told in a letter to Miss Mary May Miller, of the Kentucky College of Agriculture who has charge of the campaign.

One of the things this woman wanted most was a drain board for her sink, and after searching for one without success she writes, "A couple of days we had a nice rain which we didn't need, and as it stopped hubby from going to work I said it would be a fine day to get the drain board. I caught eleven old hens that aren't laying much and if they do lay you don't get much for the eggs, and we sold them for nine dollars, bought the drain board and put it up."

"I will tell you why I am crazy about the drain board. Yesterday morning I went to feed my chickens which are quite a distance from the house, and after I got that far, to save time and steps I thought I might as well go on to the woods and get me a mess of polk greens for dinner, and then to the garden for radishes, lettuce, and onions. In all I walked over a mile and was very tired when I got back; I had the dishes to wash and the greens to pick. I sat down at my sink, reached under it, got my dishpan, washed my dishes and prepared my greens, and when I got through instead of being tired I had actually rested. I know you will understand me, but don't tell anybody else I rested while I washed the dishes because they won't believe it."

EASIER TO SMILE THAN FROWN.

When God created man in his own image, he gave him the power to smile with the use of only thirteen facial muscles, while he must use sixty-five muscles for a first class frown.

We render tribute to smiles in money paid for seeing them, in money paid for being made to smile. We follow the men and the women who smile and we follow them willingly. And then we forget all about the great value to us of our own smile, and almost before our faces have relayed from the reciprocal smile another person brings to our countenance, we allow our mouth corners to droop and we go about our affairs with frowns and gloom.

People pay money to see their favorites smile in the movies. They pay money to see smiles on the living stage. They pay money to be made to smile. But the smiles of screenland and the smiles of the stage, even the smiles of the audience, are only occasional smiles. The great thing is the everyday, day-long smile of the man in business, the man in the street, the woman in the home or in whatever occupation she may assume.

All the great influence, the magnetism of compelling personality, the pulling power of our individuality, the pleasing force that is within us, may be used if we will tame our faces and teach them to smile when a smile counts, and that is much of the time.

We have the world at our feet when we smile.

RADIO TALKS TO FARMERS

Radio broadcasting stations in some states are sending out on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings of each week, tabloid talks on agriculture, the last word of the scientist and the scientific farmer expressed in crisp and interesting form.

When it is considered that with proper methods of agriculture and with proper preparation of the soil the revenue from farms might be doubled, the value of the movement is quite apparent. Agents of experiment stations preaching this doctrine of scientific agriculture are making much headway, but the dissemination of such knowledge requires ceaseless effort and constant pounding. The tabloid talks by radio thus come to the assistance of the county agents and the farmer.

The radio station will present these facts not only to the farmer, but to the boys and girls on the farm. It will aim to make the farmer appreciate to the fullest extent his investment in his acre.

Trade Where They All Trade

This flour has made its reputation on its merits only. Every user is a booster. The first cost may be a little more, but it makes more and better bread and therefore is economical to use. The satisfaction of always having good bread is remembered longer after the price is forgotten. The lowest priced flour is not always the cheapest.

This flour is made from the choicest selected Turkey Red Hard Winter Wheat grown in a small section of Kansas where it produces to perfection. There is no other flour equal to it.

THE FULL TERM SCHOOL

One of the first essentials to put country life on a strictly modern basis, is a school that is in session for a normal length of term. Up until a comparatively recent date, many country schools ran for a very short school year.

Families who lived in a neighborhood where the school only kept six months or thereabouts felt that the future of their children was seriously handicapped. The practical result in the majority of cases was that their children did not go beyond the grammar grades. When they got up to high school age, they were older than a boy or girl should be to enter that grade of school.

Hundreds of thousands of country people, perhaps millions, have not had good success in life, and are struggling today with adverse conditions, just because they were taken out of school before they had had a decent education. They are suffering for it through their whole lives. In many cases the trouble was simply that the schools kept such short terms that only a genius could have finished their work at the normal age.

Today the situation in that respect is very much improved. The great majority of country towns, realizing the necessity of a fair education for their children, have lengthened their school terms, and are giving just the same training as the townspeople get in cities. It is a heavy burden in many cases. But it is good policy in the long run.

In some states there are still many country schools that run with short terms. In some cases this is due to the lack of a broad viewpoint on the part of the taxpayers in the cities and wealthier portions of the state. They ought to be willing to contribute to state funds to improve the country schools. In other cases the local taxpayers are to blame, as they fail to realize how their town is handicapped if it provides inferior school privileges.

SWIFT JUSTICE.

Prosecution, conviction, and punishment of crime where competent evidence exists, should be swift, according to Secretary Hughes in an address before the institute of social sciences. Half of the majesty of the law in the minds of potential criminals, is robbed if justice is long delayed.

Most of the criminals are young and have little background. When they consider the possibility of committing some crime, they are not concerned much with what happened to offenders who committed some offense years ago. They think what has happened or has not happened to the fellow in that city who got away with some foul deed last month or last winter, if the processes of justice could work so that penalties were usually imposed within a few months, many who now go the crooked path would see it does not pay. Long postponements of trials often make it harder to secure convictions, as witnesses may disappear and as time goes on they are likely not to have such a clear memory of events.

MAKING WORK INTO PLAY

The old story says that a farmer had had all kinds of trouble in inducing his boys to clear a certain field of stones.

They just hated the dull work of carting those rocks off the lot. Finally one day it occurred to him to make a game out of it.

He set up a target at the edge of the field, and offered a small prize to that one of his boys that should register the greatest number of hits. The youngsters took hold of it with a will, made rapid progress at setting the stones out of the field.

That suggests a reason why much good work has been gotten out of children by the school garden movement, particularly where it was planned in contest form, with competition for prizes among the youngsters. Give a kid a chance to win something and show superiority and he will work twice as hard.

BASE BALL.

Those attending the base ball game on Decoration Day at Bellevue were highly entertained. The visiting team was Petersburg, and both teams were on edge, and all Boone county fans know that when these two teams are on edge it means a good game. It was a pitchers battle from start to finish. Joe Brady for Bellevue however was the master of Christy of Petersburg. Christy had all the better of the argument until the 7th when the score was 2-0 in his favor. He started the 7th by hitting Black and Cook in succession. Ryle hitting for Dolph grounded to second and on McWethy's wild throw both runs scored. Ryle himself scoring later on another error. Bellevue added two more in the 8th by dint of hard and consistent hitting. Outside of the pitching, the fielding of Cox and Cook and batting of Berkshire were the features. The final score was 5 to 2 in favor of Bellevue. By agreement the game was called an exhibition and did not count in the League standing.

Owing to weather conditions which have caused numerous postponements the Burlington club played the first home game of the season last Saturday with Bellevue as its opponent. We have not words at our command with which to describe this exhibition. Suffice it to say that it was easily the worst game of the current season. On the Burlington side the rottenness was all over, while on the Bellevue side it was just in spots. The game was absolutely featureless with one exception, and that was the pitching of Hubert (Pap) Brady for Bellevue. Boone county is proud to say that it can boast of a man 55 years of age who can go into the box and pitch nine innings and win, with comparatively poor support. The final score was 18 to 7, in favor of Bellevue.

Hebron defeated Petersburg at Hebron score 5 to 2. The game started off like an old time slugfest. The first inning was a perfect throw. White reached first on an error at third. Keim scoring on an error on the throw to home plate. One earned run.

After the first inning Bullock had the visitors at his mercy all of the time, only two reaching first. Shinkle singled in the 7th and Ruth singled in the 8th.

Akra started off in the first with a three bagger. C. Goodridge followed with another three bagger scoring Akra and Aylor scored Goodridge with a single. Morehead opened the second with a two bagger and scored on Bullock's three bagger. At this stage of the game Huey came to the rescue of McCarty and allowed Morehead to score on a put-out at first.

After Huey went in L. Goodridge hit a two bagger in the third and C. Goodridge hit a double in the 5th and Riley scored on a base on balls, a pass ball and an error at first.

It was a good clean game, the kind the fans love to see. Hits off McCarty two; off Bullock 5.

The Grand Stand was completed in time for the game, with the exception of painting, and the fans fully appreciate its comfort as well as its protection.

HOWE OPENS CAMPAIGN

John J. Howe, of Carrollton, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Senator opened his campaign at Mayfield. He told the Democrats of the First Congressional District that he was in the race as protest against the "machine" which he declares controls both of the major parties in Kentucky.

Mr. Howe's speech here dealt largely with what he termed the misrule of Kentucky and with a denunciation of Senator A. O. Stanley's Senatorial record, who the speaker said, supported Senator James Reed, of Missouri, President Woodrow Wilson's opponent in the League of Nations fight, after the war President had called on Democrats of Kentucky to elect Mr. Stanley to the United States Senate.

Mr. Howe denounced the "misuse" of the gubernatorial pardoning power as part of what he said was the working of the Kentucky Governor in building up powerful a political machine.

Several Governors have been accused, and not without justification of building up strong machines while Governor for the purpose of bringing about their election as Senator," said Mr. Howe. "Not being in sympathy with the professional machine, the Senatorial I determined to enter a protest against these conditions."

Referring to Pari-Mutuel betting machines at race tracks, he said their doom has been sounded. The legal partnership between the state and the race track will be dissolved.

"Much has been said and little yet has been done concerning the reduction in taxes," he said.

"At the recent session of our Legislature," he stated "a new tax law was enacted whereby it was supposed that great benefit would be derived by the farmers in the way of tax reduction on lands and live stock. It all looked fine, but in the last few weeks the taxpayers of the state have been amazed to find that, through the State Tax Commission, there is an attempt being made to increase the valuation of property by blanket raises, and the state will collect more taxes than heretofore."

Mr. Howe said that over the protest of the Republican President and Republican Secretary of Treasury Congress has enacted an income tax law largely through the "contingency of the Democratic party," which he hope and trust will reduce taxes. He also said that the national tariff law has caused the farmer to "pay the highest price for what he must buy, and that, although a promise was made by the Republican Administration that the distress of the farmer would be alleviated, Congress is now about to adjourn and no benefit has been accomplished. On the other hand distress among agriculturists is increasing."

SCHOOL NOTES.

The next Teacher's Examination will be held in Burlington, Thursday and Friday July 10 and 11th, 1924.

The requirements for admission are as follows: The applicant must be eighteen years or more of age, must have passed the 8th grade. No attendance at Normal School is required.

Harry S. New, Postmaster-General, authorizes postmasters to grant Saturday half-days to postal employees throughout the country.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

In the passing away of George G. Hughes at the home of his daughter in Petersburg, last Saturday afternoon, Boone county has lost another of its most estimable and highly respected citizens, honest, upright and true, whom in times past, everybody who knew him had the utmost confidence, and during the sixty or more years the writer knew him, we never heard of him doing an unkind act toward a fellowman.

As a private citizen, husband and father few there be who reached the standard set by Geo. G. Hughes, and a reference to his long life among these lines will ever be a pleasure to the members of his family and those with whom he associated, and we join with them in this their time of grief and sorrow. One by one the older citizens are passing away.

Rev. R. H. Carter, who has been attending Transylvania College at Lexington, the past year, graduated from that institution last week, with high honors. Rev. Carter deserves great praise for his effort in preparing for the ministry, and his legion of friends in this part of the county extend congratulations, and are glad to have him and his good wife among us again.

Mr. Will S. Norris, of Norris & Brock Co., Cincinnati, and Harbald Gaines, of near Burlington, have purchased of Jas. Brennan and son of Mayville, Ky., a five gaited saddle mare. She took fourth place at the Kentucky State Fair last year. Mr. Gaines has recently sold two fine young saddle mares at fancy prices.

Prof. C. H. Scott, principal of the Boone County High School, the past fall and winter, left last Thursday for Bowling Green. After a short stay there he will go to Princeton, New Jersey. Prof. J. C. Gray, Assistant Principal expects to leave in a few days for Lexington where he will attend State University for two or three weeks.

It has been reported that a member of the Downs-Moore Realty Co., of Shelby, Ky., was in Hebron recently looking at property. With an elegant new school building, electric lights and prospects of an improved road in the near future, we think Hebron offers an attractive field for the business in which Downs & Moore are engaged.

Sheriff B. B. Hume and Deputy L. T. Utz arrested and brought before Judge Riddell last Monday Andrew Rolles and W. H. Collins, his tenant. Each charged the other with malicious shooting, and their examining trial was set for Saturday morning, June 7th, at 9 o'clock.

Richard Smith, one of the Recorder's good friends of Union, was in Burlington, Tuesday. He made our sanctum a pleasant call. Mr. Smith and his good wife have been readers of the Recorder many years. We number them among our most substantial friends.

J. B. Dunkie, of Covington, who is now in the Revenue service of the Federal Government, was a business caller on the local banks last Tuesday. Mr. Dunkie was formerly a member of the firm of Goode & Dunkie of Covington, and is well known in this county.

Prof. C. V. Lucy, Principal of Hebron High School, was in Burlington Monday transacting business in the county Supt. office. Prof. Lucy had splendid success with the Hebron school the past year.

Burlington is one of the best fish markets in the county, but there has not been a fish brought here in several months. Fishermen, however, may think the town is full of "suckers" is the reason.

We understand that the Parents Teachers Association will make a determined effort to have 100 percent membership of parents of students in Burlington school this year.

C. H. Youell attended the lot sale held at Williamstown by the Downs-Moore Realty Co., one day last week. Sixty acres of land and one residence sold for $25,500.

Mrs. E. Hickman returned home Tuesday evening from Cynthia, where she was called last Sunday on account of the death of her brother-in-law, a Mr. Ward.

L. T. Utz is having a large barn on his premises razed and will erect in its place a modern bungalow. One by one the old landmarks of the town are disappearing.

Don't forget to attend the public sale of personal property at the Boone Hotel in Burlington, Thursday, June 5th. Sale begins at 12:30 p. m.

W. B. Cotton, one of the hustling young farmers and good citizens of Verona neighborhood, was a business visitor to Burlington, Tuesday.

B. T. Rice, who has been in jail since April court, has been quite ill for several days.

CONSTANCE.

Wedding bells will soon be ringing in Constance.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Robinson, of Bromley, attended church here Sunday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Mort enyon and family, of Hyde Park, spent Friday with Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Kenyon.

Mrs. Addie Gaines of Pt. Pleasant neighborhood, took dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Kenyon, Sunday.

Mrs. Addie Gaines went to Lexington last week to see Bro. R. H. graduate from Transylvania College.

Mr. and Mrs. John Gross went to see Mrs. Ben Otten, of Crescent Springs, Ky., who is very ill one day last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Kottmyer had as guests Friday Mrs. C. Meyers and Mr. and Mrs. Ray Kaup of Lower River Road.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Zimmer went Sunday to see her brother, Mr. Harry Wischmeyer, who is very ill at the Seaton hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Gross and daughter Elsie, entertained Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Clark of Columbus, Ohio, Sunday May 25th.

John Gross and daughter Elsie attended the Commencement Exercises held at the Presbyterian church at Crescent Springs on Friday evening, May 30th.

Mr. and Mrs. James Peeno and family, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Peeno and family, Miss Ethel Peeno and Miss Elsie Gross, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. E. Riddell of Sedamsville.

James Harrison and aunt Miss Emma Wilson, spent Memorial Day visiting four cemeteries.

Luther Hood and wife went to Waterloo to visit Mr. and Mrs. Rice, Mrs. Hood's parents, Friday.

There were many persons who came to the cemetery here to decorate the graves of loved ones Friday. Mrs. Bailes, who was the guest of Mr. John Klaserer last week, has gone to Los Angeles, Cal., to make her home.

We are sorry so many of our scholars are sick and hope to have them all in their places soon here in the Baptist Sunday school.

Rev. Moyer wife and mother, of the Northside Brethren Baptist church, of Cincinnati, made us a visit and held services for us on Wednesday evening. We look forward to their coming again soon.

Earl Masers came over from Riverside in his new Chevrolet and took his aunt and uncle, James Popham and wife out to the Hebron cemetery. Mrs. Popham went home with him and they went to Highland cemetery Memorial Day.

FRANCESVILLE.

Quite a crowd of our people spent Decoration day sight-seeing down at Middle creek cliffs.

Miss Marie Grin of Taylorsport, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Aylor one night last week.

Rev. O. J. Chastain and Frank Rue, of Petersburg, were guests of Mr. Jerry Estes and daughter, Miss Katherine Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Blaacka and family, of Pt. Pleasant, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jake Blacka and family, Sunday.

Little Manlius Raymond Goodridge of Taylorsport, was the guest of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Manlius Goodridge, Sunday.

Mrs. R. W. Baker and son Ronald Lee have returned to their home at Oakley, after a week's visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Seothorn.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Muntz and Mr. and Mrs. Mike Muntz, of Saylor Park, were called here last week by the death of their sister, Mrs. John Cave, Sr.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Reitmann had as guests this week-end Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hunicker and children, of Covington, and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Reitmann and children, of North Bend.

The Death Angel has again visited our community and taken from our midst Mrs. John Cave, Sr., who departed this life May 25th, 1924. She had been a sufferer from cancer for many months and for a month was confined to her bed, but thru it all she was a patient sufferer, bearing all her trials with a smile. She leaves to mourn her death one son, John Cave, Jr., four grandchildren, three brothers and a large host of friends who extend sympathy to the family in their bereavement. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. O. J. Chastain and Undertaker W. A. Bullock, Tuesday afternoon.

WEATHER FORECAST

For May just past out it was a gloomy month—24 days it rained, the month of May 1924, rain fell 5 1/2 inches, coldest May I have on record. I have 31 Mays. Average temperature 48.5, this month started in like it is going to be a brother to the last. Mr. Farmer I will tell you what we want now is more sunshine and not so much moonshine. Don't you think the crops would look better? That's the way I look at it. I may be mistaken. Hoping this will be a better month.

Respectfully Yours,
W. E. POPHAM.

The State Tax Commission raised the assessment in Boone county on live stock 5 per cent and 20 per cent on intangible personal property. This is an increase in taxes to be paid to the state amounting to $1,037.90 but on the entire assessment for state and county purposes the taxpayers of the county will not pay as much taxes as they did in 1923.

OLD AUTO USED FOR SAWING WOOD

When the old car in the picture was no longer of use as a joy-riding car it was turned into a wood-sawing machine and as such it earned more than a livelihood for the owner, who lives near Lewistown, Pa. Moved from place to place, it saved hundreds of cords in Mifflin county, Pennsylvania.

BUILT-IN TANKS
BIG GARAGE AID

Among Other Advantages, Provide Means of Lessening Fire Risk.

Nearly every owner of a car has looked with envious eyes at various kinds of gasoline storage tanks and wished he had the advantages they provide in the way of lessening fire risk, making possible the purchase of gasoline in quantity at lower cost, and furnishing a convenient method of filling the car while in the garage. Very little new can be told about these tanks or the method of installing them, but it is possible to provide one for less expense than would be imagined. Any car owner can put in a tank at a cost of only a few dollars for material if he will give his own time in making the installation.

Inexpensive Materials.
The materials required are a 55-gallon oil tank, obtainable at a cost of about $2; about five feet of 2-inch wrought iron pipe; approximately eight feet of three-quarters-inch iron pipe; one three-quarters-inch pipe nipple; one 2-inch pipe cap; one three-quarters-inch globe valve; two three-quarters-inch pipe elbows; four feet of flexible metal tubing, or fabric tubing, 1 inch inside diameter; and one air valve, such as is used with an inner tube. A threading die for the three-quarters-inch pipe to cut the standard 14 threads an inch and a die to cut the 2-inch pipe with 14 standard threads are used in making the connections. After fitting the pipe as shown and securing the threads with pipe dope or shellac, install the tank three feet under ground at the left side of the entrance of the garage, if your car has a rear tank. For a car with a cow tank, a location about six feet from the opposite end of the garage is more desirable.

Operated by Air.
The operation of the tank is by means of air, and merely involves the connecting of the air pump with the valve and the opening of the outlet valve. A fixed type of pump, with short barrel and valves, is used to advantage not only as a gasoline pump, but also as a serviceable tire pump. Even if a new pump is purchased, the cost for materials should not be more than $10. This device makes it a simple matter to pump gasoline into the auto tank while dosing or tuning up the car. G. A. Myers in the Popular Science Monthly.

Record of Car Expenses
Saves in Several Ways

The motorist who doesn't keep any record of his car expenses stands to lose in a variety of ways, but now he's out of luck anew. These gas taxes which he has been paying in many states may be deducted from his income. The same with state license fees. These are state taxes, and are accordingly deductible. Where the car is used for business the cost of ordinary upkeep charges and fuel is deductible, since it is an expense of running the business. Where the car is used for both business and pleasure the cost should, of course, be apportioned. But all this is like the Greek language to the car owner who simply pays out and never keeps a record of expenses. To those who keep records in a half-hearted way, or who think it might be advisable to try, this should be sufficient incentive to get out the little red memo book. It isn't anything at all when you do it to installments.

Gaskets Very Necessary to Prevent Gas Leakage

In order to secure a liquid or gas-tight joint, even between flat, accurately machined or ground surfaces that are fastened together, a packing of compressible material must be used between them which, when the surfaces are drawn together by the bolts or other means of fastening, will distort to conform to the slight irregularities that may exist, and thus secure a leakless contact, says the Automobile Digest. If the gasket material does not yield to the irregularities of the surfaces in contact with it, it cannot seal the joint. Owing to the necessity of using compressible material, it usually becomes necessary to replace them when removed. Their replacement is thus frequently required and evasive trouble is often caused by new gaskets which blow out due to defective installation.

Machine Demonstrates the Working of a Tire

An automobile tire company displays in its salesrooms in New York one of the most perfect machines yet devised for demonstrating the working of a tire under road conditions. Mounted on a heavy stand, a big iron drum is driven by an electric motor. An axle and wheel are mounted over the drum, with the tire in contact with it and bearing its weight. The tire is under the same pressure as if on a loaded touring car. The test, a most severe one, consists in driving nails, spikes, etc., into the tire and tube and then running with them in at a rate of about twenty-five miles an hour. The machine is operated by electric power and is also equipped with a speedometer, which gives a correct speed of wheels, as if in real road use.

Notched Rotor Is Used in Battery Ignition

In battery ignition systems there is usually employed a notched rotor against which presses the latch or tripper, with short springs attached. When this latch becomes worn the entire system will fail to operate properly, and it is a wise precaution to carry a spare latch in the tool box. It is not difficult to remove and replace this latch, which fits in but one way, so that there is no danger of placing it wrong.

Automobile Notes

- Improperly adjusted valve rocker arms mean a loss of power.
- Never leave the gears in mesh when you stop your tractor.
- When turning a corner it is a wise precaution to make a practice of throwing out the clutch.
- Proper inspection of the steering gear is as necessary and as important as the care of the engine.
- Front wheels should have about one-quarter inch forethought, that is, they should toe in slightly.

NEWLY MARRIED MAN

Finds Business in the South Good—Looking For The Best, Finds The Best, and That Life is Really Worth Living—Very Happy

Editor Boone County Recorder, Burlington, Ky.
My Dear Sir:

I look forward each week to a personal visit from our good people through you and the Recorder. I missed it this week. Evidently I must have gotten out of the Recorder's territory. Or probably you concluded I got so far away that I ceased to have interest in Burlington. Or again you may have thought that I was so busy with other "business matters" that I had forgotten Burlington. Whatever it is that you are guilty of, I want to tell you that you are wrong. I am ever interested in you and our people. I am always anxious to hear from you. And since I missed this week's visit so much, I just concluded to ease my mind by sending you a brief communication. I find "business conditions" in the South very good. It depends however, as you know on what business one is interested in. Even right in Burlington business indeed, life in its totality, depends on what we look for and the efforts we make. This is true in business. In Religion, and—in every other business. So I found here by looking for the best and trying to give my best, life is really worth living. And I am very happy. And you know it is very difficult to be really happy and not tell others about it. And who would better be "the others" than the best friends I have in the world—the Burlington people.

I did not know that you will care to publish this for the public. Some of them I would like to have read it. Some you see, would understand it. Others would not. But it couldn't hurt them.

But you, at least, have read it. So thought in case you hear anyone say that I care for my people on "county affairs" during the offering, you can tell them of their error. But under no conditions, different "very different," do I forget you.

And whatever becomes with "down to this point," please call the especial attention of our people to the all day program at our church, next Sunday, June 15th. The object in view is the other side of a church than the financial. I mean the educational and spiritual aspects of church work. Dr. James McKee Adams of Louisville, Ky., and the Baptist Seminary will speak morning and afternoon. He is a great man indeed. If his work were not connected with religion and in the church, everybody who is physically able would hear him. But some people have queer habits. However, largely thru your kindness, lots of people will learn of this and hear him and carry away a blessing. I thank you for your part in it.

Dinner will be served by members of the church and friends for all who come. Friends are invited to come. Come for the Bible School at 1 o'clock. We urge ministers and friends from other churches to come for the afternoon program. Come in time for dinner, about 1 o'clock.

And now to all who help I want to say, "Thank you" in advance and to you especially, Mr. Editor.

Very Sincerely,

W. W. ADAMS.

HOTEL FOR COVINGTON

Advocated by Covington Business Men

Covington Industrial Club members at a largely attended meeting last Thursday night, discussed numerous plans for the advancement of Covington. The occasion marked the first of a series of monthly meetings proposed by Henry W. Jenisch, president of the Club.

The proposed plans to boost Covington are for a wide publicity campaign, erection of a hotel, adjusted freight rates, and a number of a local chapter of manufacturers organization established of a tourist camp in the city and an industrial club membership drive.

Any plan to boost, enlarge or improve Covington is pleasing to Boone county people and should be supported by them. Boone county people are trading more and more in Covington and they should continue to do so. Among the most important things from a Boone county viewpoint that Covington is striving for, is the erection of a hotel and establishment of a tourist camp. These plans, if carried out will be both beneficial and convenient to Boone county people. Covington has long been known as the "Gate-way-to-the-South," and indeed she should be proud to be so termed, but we think that she should not be satisfied with being a mere "gateway," as the people further north would have them to be, but that they should strive to have tourists "stop" instead of "passing thru." To the members of the Covington Industrial Club we might say, in passing, "Don't forget us, and we won't forget you."

"THE COMMITTEES COME!"

One of the most thrilling moments ever experienced in a child's life, was lived through in the schools of years ago, at about this time of year, when it was announced that the school committee had driven into the school yard for their annual visit.

The children had assembled in their best clothes, staid and uncomfortable, and full of dread. Many parents were present. The full strain of the occasion, awe, inspiring and terrible, should enter the room. But while the committeemen seemed to cultivate this impression of fearfulness, it was commonly a good deal of a bluff. They might ask certain stock questions to show that they were carefully investigating the school results. But actually, their stern faces concealed a spirit of laughter and good nature, and all they wanted was a reasonable excuse for announcing that all the kids were promoted and everyone could go home happy.

CONVENTION MONTH.

Before June closes both parties will have held their National Conventions to be immediately followed by another, the Third Party convention. Then the fireworks will commence all along the line.

The Republicans face their convention with everything apparently settled. Though not settled to either their satisfaction or their confidence. The leaders are making heroic efforts to "iron out" some of the kinks and eliminate or soften some of the bumps that loom up.

The Democrats look forward to their meeting in New York with nothing settled. There are loud claims for this or that candidate, but absolute uncertainty. The line of attack upon the Republicans is fairly well indicated, but the man to lead the assault is not yet clearly in sight. Between the liquor question and influences that play both political ends against the movement, the leaders have a rough road to travel over.

Promoters of the Third Party movement do not hope to elect a candidate, but desire to give the people an opportunity of expressing their real political sentiments. If a new party should be framed as a result of the campaign, it will be because of that expression.

The Single Taxers already have a ticket in the field with candidates in 26 states.

The Prohibitionists may put a ticket in the field, and the Socialists will either endorse or nominate.

The presidential election of this year will be the most momentous in the history of the nation for the reason that the women of all the states will, for the first time have an opportunity to vote, and there is no basis for predictions in any direction. At the last presidential election, when Mr. Harding had such an overwhelming majority, not more than half of the qualified voters went to the polls. This year the total vote cast may be double.

THE OLD TOWN

Since Firelight Served As Illumination—Then Came Light—The Oil Lamp—Now Has Electric Lights.

Last Saturday afternoon about 3:30 o'clock President Ketchum of the Dixie Light & Power Co., assisted by a force of hands, turned on the first high tension current in the town of Burlington.

This event has been awaited with patience by our citizens since negotiations were first opened with the company last February, but though it may have seemed to some a long time to wait, still those who understand the situation realize that Mr. Ketchum has had to cope with many obstacles and unforeseen difficulties.

The current was only connected with a few residences as the line is not yet completed, but it will be a short time now until all are connected and enjoying the convenience. Arrangements have been made and plans completed for five or six street lights which will illuminate what is now one of the darkest towns on earth.

It was recalled by some that Burlington celebrated the third anniversary of a very disastrous event—wintered, for it was of the 7th of June, 1921, that one entire block was destroyed by fire.

While our recovery has not been as marked and rapid in proportion to size as has that of Yokohama, still we feel that the town is better and has a better appearance since the fire.

It is the opinion of many people, from the way three old bachelors bid on household furniture at the sale of the personal property of the late E. E. Blythe, last Thursday, something is going to be "did" in the very near future.

H. R. Laidy, the merchant prince of Florence, has some advertising in this week's issue that it will pay you to read.

Here Comes the Bride

BARN DESTROYED

Lightning Destroys the Barn of A. L. Nichols.

During the heavy electrical storm that struck Burlington last Monday morning, lightning struck a large barn belonging to A. L. Nichols, who lives on the East End pike about one mile south of Burlington. In a few minutes the barn was in a blaze and those who were attracted attempted to go to the aid of Mr. Nichols but the creek below town was so swollen by the heavy rain that it blocked the progress of machines in that direction, so that the rescuers had to abandon the attempt.

The barn and contents were destroyed, although the barn itself was covered by insurance. Mr. B. T. Kelly had a lot of farm machinery implements and feed stored in the barn which also were destroyed.

PERSONAL FRICTIONS.

If you were to go through 100 country towns, and analyze the reasons why those places did not make more rapid progress, you would probably find many cases where the advance of the community was being held back by personal jealousies and frictions.

People are thrown somewhat closely together in country towns, and they sometimes get morbidly sensitive to each other. If an organization is formed to promote some good object, certain people may say that they do not like the personality of some officer of that society, and they can not work with that person. So they may hold aloof.

During recent years, since country people have had more activities to take up their minds, they are not so apt to cherish petty feelings. Yet this sentiment probably exists to some extent.

The bigger and more intelligent people are, the less they are governed by such feelings. Broad minded people want to see their home towns go ahead, and they want to make a success of their own enterprises, so they just go ahead for these aims, even if they do not care for all the people they have to meet.

If the people of a town can not work harmoniously together, overlooking any little personal differences that may have had, the chances that that town can go ahead are not good. Town progress movements must have the hearty support of all. If people stand aside and won't play because they do not like this or that person who is prominent, a feeling of division is created that paralyzes effort. So let us not permit any personal dislikes to interfere to the least degree with our efforts for home town movements, but let us forget all that and take hold and work with one loyal cheer for the good causes of our Boone county towns.

A COMMUNITY TREE DAY

Walter Burr's book on "Rural Organization" tells how a Community Tree Day was observed. The men and boys gathered with axes, rakes, etc. Trees that added nothing to the beauty of the town were cut down. Others were given the pruning they needed. Dead trees and branches were trimmed ready for the sawmill, and the small brush was burned at a grand bonfire.

The women provided a fine dinner under the shade of the nicely trimmed trees. Afterward the state forester gave a talk on tree culture. A day like this would be a wonderful thing for many towns where the trees have been neglected. In many places such an occasion should devote itself mostly to setting out young trees.

W. P. Uta and L. E. Tanner, of the Union, neighborhood, came over last week and assisted L. T. Uta dig the basement for his new bungalow.

RELEASED FROM JAIL

Court of Appeals issues Writ of Mandamus in B. D. Rice Case.

The most sensational liquor case that has been tried in the Boone Circuit Court culminated Friday in the releasing of the defendant B. D. Rice from the county jail after having served 60 days of a 90-day sentence imposed for failure to execute a $1500 peace bond in compliance with the 1922 prohibition act.

Rice was charged with unlawfully selling liquor, he was arrested and gave bond for his appearance. During the trial of said case for some reason or other he decided to leave court, which he did, going to Indiana.

The court, after a brief deliberation, rendered a verdict against him upon the verdict. Inasmuch as the defendant was not in court when the judgment was rendered, Judge Gaines, according to his version of the 1922 act sentenced him to jail for 90 days for failure to execute the aforesaid bond.

It was from the judgment of the Court that attorneys Northcutt & Northcutt appealed the case and succeeded in getting a writ of mandamus from the higher court, requiring the court to accept a peace bond and release the defendant. This was done on Friday afternoon. The defendant paid the fines and costs in full amounting to $465 and was permitted to go hence.

"Duke" as he is commonly known was fined by a jury in the sum of $150 on a contempt charge for leaving court during the trial and the jail sentence was not imposed on that charge, as some people thought.

PAY DIRT AT HOME

A flush of indignation is the emotion the average person experiences when reading of wholesale swindles. But second thought naturally brings the reflection that most swindlers are due to the greed of the swindled, and that they are served right when they allow their avarice to overthrow reason.

When the widow is fleeced out of the insurance money which should have kept herself and her children from want, the indignation is more or less righteous and lasting. Even in such cases as these, however, had the widow consulted and followed the advice of a reputable banker before investing all she had in blue sky stuff it probably wouldn't have happened.

In the years that have passed, millions of hard earned dollars have been taken out of Boone county, never to return, by oil-tongued strangers who have made their "proposition" look gilded when it was really a gold brick.

Imagine, if you can, the prosperous state in which this community would now be, if of the money that has been invested in worthless stock, had been put back into this community where it was earned and originated.

Most of the wealth comes from the soil. If one-third of the profits that Boone county land has produced for its owners had been returned to the land in building it up or had been invested in local industries, this spot would be a treasure island in a sea of business uncertainty.

No end of advice on the subject will be of any avail so long as people are lured by wily tongue salesmen who never fail to refer to the success of Henry Ford and John D. Rockefeller. They forget that there are one hundred and ten million people in the United States and only one Ford and one Rockefeller.

Three new bungalows are to be erected on Gallatin street in the north end of town—work having begun on one and material is being secured for the other one.

Prayer meeting at the Burlington M. E. church tonight, Thursday at 7:30 p. m., and will close at 8:00.

MACHINE STOLEN

RUSSELL YEALEY HELD UP ON PARK AVENUE

Last Saturday night while driving with a young lady companion on Park Avenue in Kenton county, Russell Yealey, of Florence was held up by three bandits.

They bound and gagged Mr. Yealey and his companion, and having relieved him of some change that he had in his pocket, jumped into his machine and drove away. The bandits over looked his bill book, their evident object being to steal the machine.

Mr. Yealey managed to break the cords which bound him and hurried to a phone and notified officers who at once started in search for the robbers and the car.

Fortunately the machine was insured but at last report no trace had been found of the gang.

Mr. Yealey is a son of Prof. A. M. Yealey Principal of Florence High School.

THE EPIDEMIC OF SLANG

The "orky of slang" which seems to be a characteristic of the neurotic life of a certain class of young Americans is deplored by a popular writer, who seems to think this is a disease, when it is only a symptom. After pointing out that many of the expressions in vogue have their origin in the gutters of experience, he expresses the view that if these "smart" young people could realize how long is the society they mimic they would blush in shame.

This is taking the matter entirely too seriously. That vagabonds and rogues use phrases current in the transient vocabulary of slang concerns the average youth not at all. Boys and girls of today are very much self-enclosed, self contained and self-sufficient.

There should be no alarm. Slang there will always be of course, and not all of it will be objectionable or useless. The present tendency to indulge in an orgy of unlabeled speech will pass sooner or later, as all extremism does. The more extreme the fad, whether in clothes or speech, the shorter its life.

ARE YOU IN DOUBT.

The man in doubt as to the occupation he wants to follow had better sit down and be right still until he makes up his mind. Never go into business for the money there is in it but for what you believe you can get out of it. However, in most business careers money has been merely incidental. Looking after the incidentals is one of the secrets of success. Nevertheless, few men who have been great money makers entered their chosen field for the love of cash but for the desire to participate in the strife. They were more usually overjoyed at the defeats they turned up on their competitors than they were at the increase in revenue. You must like a business or you will not win in it, and the like must be for work and not for the pay. No man ever had his whole ambition in a bank book with only a rubber band around it.

MEMORIAL EXERCISES

At Petersburg Somewhat Marred By Inclement Weather.

In an atmosphere fraught with rain drops and extreme humidity the various fraternal orders held their annual memorial services for departed brothers last Sunday afternoon at Petersburg. Due to the threatening attitude of numerous dark clouds it was decided by those in charge that it would be inadvisable to try to carry out the usual program of marching to the cemetery in a body, so in conformity with this plan a committee of three was appointed to take the flowers to the graves, which was done.

The marshals then formed a procession and all marched to the Christian church, where Rev. R. H. Carter who had been appointed Master of ceremonies, took charge of the meeting. He then introduced Rev. D. J. Puncen, pastor of Aurora Baptist church, who delivered an eloquent address in behalf of the Odd-Fellows and Knights of Pythias followed by J. W. DeHart, State Deputy of the Modern Woodmen of America, who likewise delivered a commendable address.

Although the inclement weather kept many away who would have attended, the church was filled to its capacity and many listened to the addresses and music from the outside, while many more did not attempt to gain admittance at all. After the addresses were delivered the procession filed back to the Odd-Fellows hall, where they were finally dismissed.

The local order of the Eastern Star initiated Mr. and Mrs. Claude Greenup and L. T. Uta at their regular meeting last Thursday night. After the ceremony a delightful lunch was served by the ladies of the order.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

Total payments for expenses, interest and outfit for the state government of Kentucky for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1923, amounted to $19,338,545, or $7.87 per capita. Of this total $13,467,267 represents the expenses of operating the general departments of the state government, $407,200 interest on debt, and $5,464,076 outlays for permanent improvements. For 1923 the assessed valuation of property in Kentucky subject to ad valorem taxation was $2,448,453,936; the amount of state taxes levied was $8,883,905, and the per capita tax $3.62.

Reuben Akin from out on the Petersburg and Burlington pike, had a narrow escape from being killed, one day last week. While driving ground one of the horses he was driving reared up and fell backwards on him, knocking Mr. Akin from the harrow. He escaped with a badly bruised leg, and was able to get up and check the horses before they did any more damage. He did not realize that he was hurt so badly until he had finished the work and went to the house that evening, when he found one of his legs badly bruised.

Andrew Rolles was convicted in the Boone Quarterly Court for breach of the peace committed June 2nd, and his punishment was fixed at a fine of $25 and costs.

Rolles and his tenant W. H. Collins engaged in an altercation in regard to the conduct of their partnership in farm business. The parties settled their farm business affairs out of court and dissolved partnership. Rolles was represented by O. M. Rogers and Collins by S. W. Tolin and Commonwealth by County Attorney B. H. Riley.

County Agent R. J. Matson and wife and the following, of the Boone County Junior Agricultural Club, Artie Lee Franks, Virginia Yelton, of Burlington, Grant Maddox, of Florence, Ava Lou Hudson, of Walton, Viola Graves, Robt. Hafer and Dorothy Hood, of Hebron, left Monday morning for Lexington where they will spend the week at the Kentucky College of Agriculture. Mrs. Matson will have charge of the girls while Mr. Matson will look after the boys.

The Court of Appeals handed down an opinion last week affirming the judgment of the Boone Circuit Court in the case of Minnie Belleau vs. Henry D. Souther. The judgment of the court was rendered upon a jury verdict for $7,000 which the plaintiff Mrs. Belleau recovered against defendant Souther for killing her husband, Wm. Belleau, Jno. L. Vest, of Walton was the attorney for plaintiff and O. M. Rogers for defendant.

Mr. W. Hugh Fletcher, representing Transylvania University in a campaign to raise an endowment fund for the University, was soliciting in Burlington Thursday of last week. John D. Rockefeller has pledged $80,000 to the University, provided that they pay off their indebtedness and raise an amount, double that which he offers, from alumni and friends of the University.

Mrs. Alice D. Palmer, of Madisonville, Ohio, sent us a check for $150 for another year's subscription. Mr. and Mrs. Palmer were former citizens of Burlington, and are always glad to get the news from their old home town.

Last year ended with our being seven inches of rain short. Our hay crop then was a failure. This year, since Jan. 1, we are seven inches ahead of the average. Hay will be plentiful this year.

Members of the Boone County Poultry Association sold, this season, to various parties outside the county 42,000 eggs. From reports received the eggs gave satisfaction in the way of hatching.

The squirrel law is not out until July 1st, and the Game Warden has both of his eyes wide open and his ears to the ground. Better play safety first and wait until you can legally shoot 'em.

The force in the County Clerk's office is busy making up the tax books for the Sheriff. Mrs. Marce Riddell is assisting in the work.

Next Friday night at Petersburg, and Saturday night at Petersburg, picture show patrons will see William Russell in "Man Nise."

"WHITE PLAGUE"

Louisville June 3.—An active battle against the "white plague" will open June 17 with a clinic at Bardstown, while today Dr. A. T. McCormack, secretary of the State Board of Health, announced that Hazelwood Sanatorium is open for the reception of fifty more patients due to the completion of improvements costing $30,000 and the removal of the disabled World War veterans to Dawson Springs. Dr. J. S. Lock, secretary of the Kentucky Tuberculosis Association, will conduct the clinic June 17, 18 and 19 as the first of a series designed to reach every corner of the State.

Although Hazelwood Sanatorium is a State institution, Dr. McCormack explained that the 1924 Legislature failed to make any appropriation for its maintenance. Due to this fact it is compulsory that patients pay $15 a week, which is the sum the State estimates is the cost of treating each patient.

The sanatorium of which Dr. S. W. Bates is superintendent, has a capacity of 100 beds and every modern appliance for the treatment of tuberculosis, also, owning its cows and chickens which supply fresh milk and eggs, so necessary in the treatment of the disease.

We want those patients from the remote parts of the State, as well as nearby, in order that the good this institution does may be broadcast by word of mouth to every tuberculosis sufferer," said Dr. Lock. "Our aim for Hazelwood they appropriate each although a patient is either cured or dies in six months, or is cured. At Hazelwood, the 'turn-over' so to speak, is quick and the results are positive. A tubercular person is a far not only to fill the sanatorium, although we would like to keep it filled and have a waiting list."

"Our Legislatures appropriate money for insane asylums, where patients often spend forty to fifty years, but greater menace to a community than an insane person but the Legislature could not see it that way. As we have no State appropriation, we must keep Hazelwood filled if it is to remain open on the highest efficient basis."

Hazelwood, Dr. McCormack said, has been declared to be one of the most thorough hospitals of its kind and has a record for cures far above the average private sanatorium.

Despite the fact that Kentucky still has a high death rate from tuberculosis as compared to other States, the death rate has been cut from 259 per 100,000 in 1911 to 129 in 1923, Dr. Lock says. He believes this could be cut in half with free hospitals for the treatment of tuberculosis. In 1919 the State first made a showing of a reduced tuberculosis death rate, the first concerted move against the disease having been inaugurated the previous year.

STATE ENCAMPMENT.

The State Encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars will be held in Louisville at the Tyler Hotel on the 28th of this month, beginning at 10:00 o'clock a. m. Governor Fields and representatives of the G. A. R. and Confederate Veterans and other patriotic organizations will deliver addresses to the Encampment. Arrangements have been made to entertain several thousand in Louisville on that date.

The organization is 24 years of age and its membership is composed exclusively of veterans who have served overseas in time of war such as the Spanish-American War, the Philippine Insurrection and the World War. Its Commander-in-Chief, General Lloyd M. Brett of Washington, D. C., holds a Congressional Medal of Honor and eleven other decorations. Last year its Commander-in-Chief was Col. Till L. Huston, half owner of the Yankee Base Ball Team and Babe Ruth and who served without pay and contributed $40,000 towards propagating the organization throughout the country.

Since 1921 the organization has maintained without any assistance from the State or public, a bureau to assist disabled veterans of the World War in obtaining compensation and veterans of other wars in their pension claims.

A special effort to secure the attendance at the Convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, at the last two sessions of the Legislature, wrote and had presented the bonus measures for the State, which failed to pass. The measures were similar to the ones passed by twenty-two other states of the Union. It was the first organization after the World War that started the fight for adjusted compensation and recently

THE SMALL SCHOOL'S RESTRICTIONS

One of the reasons why so many towns in the State of Kentucky are closing small schoolhouses and going in for consolidated schools, is that the life in the big school is more interesting and rewarding to young people.

In the little district school, the big boys and the little ones may be of such different strength and ability that they can not play the same games. Consequently it is not possible to organize recreations in any systematic way. Their recesses may be spent in aimless loafing and rough housing. But when these youngsters get into a big school, the different ages can be handled differently, and play time can teach them obedience to rules, initiative, and many other good qualities. School life becomes more attractive to them, and they are more likely to go on and get a good education.

KENTUCKY BENDS THE KNEE TO BLACK GOLD

TO BEAR GOLD

(Louisville Courier-Journal.)

Kentucky this morning le on bended knee to Black God, conqueror of the fittest and the fleetest, the proud and the best, of the world's most illustrious and the right aristocratic of the equine nobility. He was enthroned in the heart of all Kentucky, in the admiration of all the Nation, was Black God yesterday at the Kentucky Derby, Churchill Downs here, by right of conquest, by might of courage, emerged triumphant from the crucible of the Golden Jubilee Kentucky Derby. The crowd of 150,000 spectators, the joyful maelstrom of the great horse race, the greatest that ever saw a horse race on the Western Hemisphere.

All crowds are interesting and fascinating, but it is doubtful if any crowd ever witnessed more magnificent or more fascinating than the Kentucky Derby crowd of yesterday. It was a crowd of sparkling personalities, of pulsing expectancy, of vibrant excitement, of throbbing hopes, of joys that illuminated and of shadows that quickly were routed. It was a ~~crowd~~ of gorgeously gowned women as radiant as the sky, of bewitching young girls as adorable as morning rosebuds, who made many of the fellows forget to look at the Derby. It was a crowd of fashionably tailored merchant princes and men of professions, of flashily dressed ~~for~~ court scholars, of hoary-headed patriarchs and life-time lovers of the roughed, of unbrutish country and of city snobs—aleas. All were smiling and jostled and of the horse. All sought information and all went home seriously. It was a crowd that reflected all the colors of the rainbow and victory swept each choice and choice choice mutual tickets to the magic foot of the rainbow.

This kaleidoscopic mass of colorful humanity covered the expansive meadows, cloaked the spacious stands and draped the covered roof of the Churchill Downs like a fancifully frozen robe, undulating to capricious freezes. It seemed that a whirlwind had struck during the running of the race. In some moments it looked like so many people were riding lightly colored and whimsically fashioned mosaic. It is well that May High on a great flagstaff in the field the American flag, a silken flaming banner, caressed by gentle breezes, took command of all, and speaking on that flaming banner, one bowed down in gratitude for the United States, for Kentucky and for the Horas.

President Coolidge will remain in Washington during the convention, leaving it to his friends to look after his nominations, the actual drafting of the Republican platform and the other convention details. A special telegraph wire is to be run up from the White House to the convention hall in Cleveland to keep the President advised of all developments as soon as they occur and so that he may issue orders to his political lieutenants if the occasion warrants.

WITH THE CONVENTION well more than a week away, some doubt still remains as to whom will be selected as the Republican vice-presidential candidate. Among those prominently mentioned for the second place on the ticket are former Governor Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, Major General James G. Hughes and Senator Wm. E. Borah, but there are a host of other possibilities.

SENATOR LA FOLLETTE'S activities in the direction of the Presidency remain a constant subject of speculation among the politicians of all parties. No one believes that La Follette has any chance of being elected President himself, but his determination to run as an independent candidate means that he may carry enough states to take the election out of the Electoral college and throw it into the insurgent-controlled House of Representatives, where no one knows what might happen. It is not expected he could carry more than ten states at the most, most of these in the Middle West.

THEir MAY CONSEQUENCES threatened by the Japanese Ambassador in the eyes of the American Government went ahead with its exclusion plans has developed so far through a formal protest handed to Secretary of States Hughes. There is nothing that can now be done about it, regardless of how much the President disliked to sign the exclusion bill. The excitement over the eastern question has given big Navy men in Congress an opportunity to rush through a building program involving the expenditure of about $150,000,000 for new ships.

JUNE FIFTH has been set as the date for publication throughout the country of the application forms for the soldiers bonus insurance certificates. The War Department estimates that it will be the latter part of June before the official application blanks will be ready for distribution, but a number of newspapers have arranged to print them before that time. The insurance certificates will not begin to reach the veterans until early next year. Cash payments will begin in March, 1925.

DEMOCRATIC SENATORS are playing Alphonso and Gaton in the cloak rooms now. So many of them are potential presidential candidates that it keeps them busy announcing that they are supporting someone else. Many look upon Ralston of Indiana as the likely Democratic choice.

THE WHITE HOUSE garden parties this spring have not been so successful. The weather has been cold and it has rained nearly every afternoon that the President and Mrs. Coolidge arranged to receive on the lawn of the Executive Mansion. At the first outdoor party, the President caught cold and has not yet fully recovered. Now he is leaving it to Mrs. Coolidge to do the honors at these affairs.

Utilization of small watermelons by converting the rind into preserves is being considered by a growers' association in Georgia. A prize contest has been announced by a local club of business men to arouse the interest of mothers, wives and daughters in marketing watermelon preserves in conjunction with cane sirup. It is felt that a good commercial product can be prepared that will save many of the watermelons now going to waste, and also supply a good market for the cane sirup.

Self government can be used as a mighty force for the common good, and we are a failure as a citizen unless we throw the full force of our personality into it. Let us not evade our responsibility but fulfill it, and be a patriot in the highest and truest sense.

Canada ranks third in the world as a gold-producing country, being exceeded only by the Transvaal and the United States. Ontario is now the principal gold area in the dominion producing about 40 per cent of the output.

HARD ROADS FOR THE FARMERS.

Authorities on rural improvement are constantly remarking on how much is accomplished to reduce the cost of marketing commodities when a hard road is put in connecting the farm districts with a railroad station. Yet the cost of hard roads is so great that for the farms to unite to build such a road would in many cases load these properties with a mortgage far above their ability to pay.

It is quite as much in the interest of the cities to pay for these roads as for the farmers to pay for them. Whatever it costs to get produce to market, on account of bad roads, is eventually paid by the people who consume the produce. When they reduce costs of handling by a hard road, they reduce the cost of the produce to the consumer.

When a man is sick he calls the doctor. He has faith in the doctor as long as the doctor makes him better. But when he finds that the physician has diagnosed the case incorrectly or is using a treatment which does not bring back health he either changes doctors or asks for a consultation.

Sick for good roads, the American people called in a doctor (Congress) and received a "first-aid" (treatment) called Federal aid, by which the physician ordered from the pharmacy (the Public Treasury) sufficient dollars to help the various parts of the United States to build new arteries.

But the United States needs not a few but a very large number of new arteries, and the prescription of the doctor isn't producing them in time to save the economic life of the patient.

It is, therefore, not the part of wisdom to ask for a consultation and have the doctor confer with other physicians with another and a new vision of the illness of poor roads and the method of their cure?

One of the cures advocated, and the only one which hasn't been tried, is the appointment of a National Highways Commission, to consider and report to the Congress on the subject of establishing a system of national highways. States which tried State aid and found it did not cure have tried State highway commissions and found they did not cure. Should not the United States find as the several States have found for themselves?

Roads are a national, not a State problem. Only the Nation can adequately and intelligently lay out a system of roads for the Nation, and only the Nation can afford to build and maintain such highways as will adequately care for the present, not to speak of the future, traffic!

SOFT SOAP JUSTICE

After a lapse of nine years, a man indicted for second degree murder in the District of Columbia was brought to trial—and acquitted in a few minutes. In the local jail of the District, languish convicted first degree murderers whose crimes were committed four or five years ago, but who, on one pretext or another, have thus far escaped the penalty provided by law.

Recently several hundred liquor cases pending in the District courts were nolle prossed because the prolonged delay in bringing them to trial had resulted in the loss of witnesses necessary to a conviction. The efforts of the police in the latter cases were wholly futile.

This is the situation in Washington, the capital of the nation, but conditions are about the same throughout the country. In Chicago the father of a murdered son attended court ten times to see justice meted out to the murdered. Each time the case was continued, until finally the father took the law into his own hands and shot the killer of his boy. Yet we are astonished at the prevalence of crime and marvel at the remarkable murder record of our large cities as compared with Great Britain where justice is swift and sure.

The American Bar Association has a committee engaged in working out a plan for avoiding the law's delays. All success to their efforts. It is high time that the people had a demonstration of the consequences that should attend closely on the commission of every crime.

In smaller communities murders are infrequent, but when they are committed, we are confronted with the same problem as larger cities.

Much of the law's delay can be avoided if judges will not permit trifling by attorneys who seem to postpone trial of their client until public sentiment has cooled off.

Few rural communities have any complaint against their judges, who are closer to the people and with few exceptions will not permit any temporizing with justice.

But the delay in larger centers has a psychological effect that affects the whole country and tends to license crime in every community.

The War Department proposition to conduct a two-day draft of 10,000,000 of men will cost more than the soldiers' bonus any one year and serve no really practical purpose except to stimulate other nations to similar experiments and expense.

Congress has agreed on a bill to loan $25,000,000 each year for five years to American ship owners to help them install the Diesel Marine engine. Farmers can wait a year or two.

A SANITARY BARN FOR HIGH GRADE MILK

Special features which will aid in producing sanitary milk have been included in the barn just built by George B. Mook, owner and manager of the Highland Dairy Co., who supplies high grade milk for Newport and Cincinnati markets. Pans for the barn were furnished by the agricultural engineering department of the Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Some of the sanitary measures used are: Wooden block and concrete floors, concrete mangers and gutters. Steel swinging stanchions where cows are as comfortable as they would be in an open field, and where it is impossible for dirt or dust to collect. Running water for daily washing mangers and gutters. Individual drinking bowls for each animal so that an abundance of clean, fresh water is always available; a ventilation system which keeps the barn warm in winter and cool in the summer and admits plenty of fresh air at all times; litter carriers for removing manure with a minimum amount of labor; and 4,172 square feet of window glass provided for each animal thru which direct sunlight keeps the floors dry and furnishes one of the very best of disinfectants.

At one end of the barn are the feed and milk rooms. The milk room, in which the milk is cooled and bottled as soon as taken from the dairy, is separated from the main dairy by means of a solid partition, so that there is no chance whatever of the milk absorbing odors. In the milk room also is provided equipment for steam sterilization of all milking equipment.

Left space is provided for storing hay and bedding. A double floor with building paper between floors keeps all dirt or trash from entering the dairy thru the left floor.

In a letter dated January 11, Mr. Mook states that "Our experience so far has shown that we have no difficulty in maintaining an average temperature of about 60 degrees; during one week we had a few days of extremely cold weather with an outside temperature of well below zero. At this time the lowest temperature we had inside the barn was 43 degrees."

BABY HEALTH TALKS

By Juanita McF. Jennings, Assistant Director Bureau of Child Hygiene, State Board of Health Louisville, Ky.

CARE OF THE BABY

What shall the mother do while the baby nurses?

Lie down and rest, because twenty minutes rest every three hours during the day gives the mother two hours rest and makes better milk for the baby.

What food improves the breast milk? A glass of milk taken half hour before nursing, cereal for breakfast and a diet composed of green vegetables, fruits and a moderate amount of starches and meat.

Should we play with the baby and amuse him?

No, a baby is a great responsibility, and not a plaything. His health depends on how well you follow out good health teaching with him. Should we rock him or put him in a jumper?

By all means, no—keep him quiet. Shall we shake rattles and make strange noises to attract his attention?

No, the nervous system of the baby is very delicate. Such treatment will make a nervous, irritable child, and often produces indigestion and colic.

Should we let the baby suck his thumb or pacifier?

No, if he attempts to suck anything but his food take it away from him. Fasten up the ends of his sleeves, so he cannot suck his hands and you will break the habit. This sucking makes gas in his stomach, causes colic, indigestion and irregular teeth and an ugly mouth. Good habits should start for a baby on the day of his birth.

Should the baby be kept up until his daddy comes home to play with him?

No, he should be put to bed at 6:00 o'clock until he is two years old, and never later than 7:00 o'clock during his pre-school life.

PLANT A TREE.

There are eighty-one million idle acres in the United States that are not fit for anything except the growing of trees.

And they go right on being idle for the want of anyone with enough foresight and interest in future generations to plant trees on them.

There is very little, if any, land in Boone county that will not produce something, but if it is left in the patriotic duty of the owner of the land to put it to work growing trees.

Convincing statistics have been gathered to show that reforestation is the only hope of the United States if its supply of timber is not entirely exhausted.

Tree planting is the stepping stone to forestry.

If you have a spot that will grow a tree, plant one. If you have an idle acre or two that is not busy, as all land should be, plant trees.

And if you do plant a tree, the American Tree Association of Washington wants to know about it.

It is easier to work yourself out of a job than it is to work yourself into one.

DERBY DAY AT CHURCHILL DOWNS.

By Daniel E. O'Sullivan.

The golden anniversary of Churchill Downs! Sacred and priceless its memories; beyond all price its half a century of high ideals and honorable endeavor! What thoughts of departed friends and old favorites, stir the heart and through the portals of the mind eager for utterance! Aristides, Vagrant, Baden Baden, Day Star, Lord Murphy, Fonso, Hindoo, Leonatus, Montrose, Proctor Knott, Ben Brush, Old Rosebud, and their fellows, all under the turf which they did so much to ennoble. Gone are the countless gay companies where youth and beauty and high estate made the vanished days resplendent. Gone beyond recall are those who lived the historic scenes we now celebrate: M. Lewis Clark, the fearless, peerless Judge; Frank Harper, the quaint owner of Ten Broeck; Gen. Abe Buford, who confidently expected to meet his thoroughbreds on the blue-grass fields of the new Jerusalem; the Chancellors, the Clays, the Breckinridges, the Blackburns, the Johnsons, Grinnets, Ten Broeck, Woodford and the lamented Charles F. Granger, all gone out into the shadows. But their spirits revisit the Downs, keep green its fields and bright its paths, hover above it in kindly council, inspire its managers and pass judgment on their decisions.

The month of May, caparisoned in her garments of gladness, violets blooming where she walks, always claims Derby day as her own. It is a name to conjure with, at once an inspiration and a delight. The blue-grass curls a welcome. An indistinct, cloudless sky spreads the benison of its silken tent over the scene. The brown ribbon of the course is unfolded as from a golden reel. Thoroughbreds pick their way daintily across the field, or arch their proud necks in preliminary gallops. Myriads of American flags swim in the sun-kissed air. Glad thousands occupy every nook of vantage, their faces radiant with joy and their hearts free from care. The stands are vibrant with uncontrolled emotion. The air is electric with expectation. A carnival spirit is everywhere. It is Kentucky's annual tribute to the thoroughbred, in which all America joins.

Derby day at Churchill Downs! What happy memories it evokes! What fond hopes have found realization here, and what bright dreams have raveled out into realities. At last the bugle sounds—its notes as thrilling as the Marseillaise. Fifty thousand spectators leap to attention at its command. A field of matchless thoroughbreds die through the paddock gate and prouette in the parade past the acclamating stands, the jockeys wearing above the saddles, their colors dancing like painted bubbles in the wind. They face the starter. A brief delay while positions are being taken. A sudden swing into line, and the barrier lifts, the flags fall, and "they're off!" In the race of the year. Sweeping past the stand fifty thousand hearts echo the rapturous of the hurrying hoofs and a wild chorus of approval follows the vanishing field. At every point of the swift journey excited partisans speed them on. The quarter is passed, and the half is left behind, and then begins the drive down the back-stretch where the cavalcade readjusts itself into divisions, the leaders wearying of the pace, become laggards.

Now comes the challenge at the crucial turn for home with the goal a half-quarter of a mile away. There is closing of the ranks, the vanquished drop back into the rack and a new pace-maker takes up the gauntlet. At his throat-latch, and saddle-girth, and hard upon his heels crowd the contenders, their jockeys not yet ready to acknowledge defeat. The frenzied thousands, in grandstand, club house and lawn, shriek personal appeals to particular horses and riders to "Come on!" "Come on!" Out of the thunder of a hundred hoofs comes the lightning flash of spurs, the whirl of swiftly drawn whips, and the desperate duel is on to the wire where fame and fortune wait. In the very last determinate moment there flashes from the struggle mass a thoroughbred that will not be denied, and in a whirlwind of speed he sweeps past the post a winner amid the applause of an enraptured multitude.

Longest Span Nearing Completion

Work is rapidly progressing on the longest suspended bridge span in the world, between Bear Mountain and Anthony's Nose, north of Peekskill, to carry a 88-foot roadway with a capacity of 5,000 motor cars an hour, over the Hudson river. The span will be 1,032 feet long, which is 32 feet longer than that of the Williamsburg bridge, at present the longest suspended span in the world. The total length between the abutments will be 2,258 feet. The bridge towers will be 350 feet high, and the span will have a clearance over the river of 157 feet.

WIVES SHOULD KEEP STEP WITH HUSBY.

Just what stand should the wife take when increasing responsibilities make increasing demands upon her husband's time, including the time he formerly spent at home? What should she do when business compels him to visit other parts of the country or foreign countries? Should she stay behind and keep the home fires burning? Or, should she arrange her domestic affairs so that she can go along? Should she turn to clubs of her own and to other diversions and activities not open to her husband? Should she...ivate friends of her own and leave him to his own friends?

These are but a few of a hundred and one questions which have had to be met and answered by the wives of busy Americans who are winning notable success in worldly affairs and they apply with equal force to the wives of business men and mechanics.

Of course, it isn't always the wife's fault, she isn't always allowed to choose. But far too many successful men's wives have been perfectly content to stay at home and to do nothing to prevent a parting and widening of the matrimonial ways. The many women cheerfully cultivate a society of other women instead of so handling hubby that his friends would become friends of the family. Make his life your life. Make his friends your friends. Don't hesitate to cancel any date at a woman's club in order to get a hurried dinner or supper ready for friends daddy may want to bring home. Read up on the things he is interested in. Encourage him to talk business with you. This spending—extravagance is a rock on which many matrimonial barkers are wrecked—and though economy must not be ignored, nevertheless she is a wise wife who, in the matter of her own dress, does not let Mrs. Jones show her too clear a pair of heels.

CHILD LABOR ON FARMS

The National Industrial Board, of New York, has issued a report which shows that more than one-half the persons employed in factories are working 48 hours or less a week, and the trend toward a shorter day in industry has been very pronounced since the war. The report covers all the states of the Union and shows that laws govern maximum hours, night work and rest periods. Thirty-five states and the District of Columbia have fixed an eight-hour day as the maximum for children, while in Virginia 44 hours is their maximum work week. In 19 states the weekly period is shortened to that children may attend school. The work day for women is limited to 8 hours in only 8 states, with 14 permitting a nine-hour day and 18 permitting 10 hours or more. One aspect of the child labor situation which the report reveals is that nearly half of the working children 14 and 15 years old are unprotected by law, for agriculture and domestic services are exempt. Farming alone accounts for 44.6 per cent of all working children. Child labor laws almost universally forbid night work for children and night work for women is forbidden in 16 states. A man may work as long as he likes in most occupations, so far as laws are concerned.

It is going to take an awful lot of help to figure out, and distribute the soldiers' bonus, but many of the politicians have friends who would consent to sacrifice their personal interest by taking some of these jobs.

It is claimed that more farm hands could be secured, if some fellow could have umbrellas to hold over their heads when they work out in the sun.

MAN IN THE MOON TO SMILE ON JUNIOR WEEK.

Arrangements have been made with the Man in the Moon to look pleasant during the week of June 9 to 14 because that is the week when between four and five hundred boys and girls from all parts of Kentucky will gather at the university to observe Junior Week, and incidentally to take a peep at the moon through the big telescope.

A solid week of fun, entertainment and education has been arranged for the youngsters, many of whom will, in a few years, seek admission to the university as students. The boys and girls who attend the Junior Week activities usually average about 14 or 15 years of age and are selected by their local clubs as representatives to the convention because of their excellent work in the agricultural clubs.

No farm boy or girl is likely to have reached this age without having gazed at the moon and stars, and with this in mind Prof. H. H. Downing has offered the use of the big telescope to boys and girls so that they may go back home saying they have seen a "close-up" of the man in the moon.

DEMOCRATS DARK HORSE FIELD.

About three weeks hence the Democratic National Convention will be engaged in a tug-of-war. It is still anybody's fight. Only one thing is accounted almost certain—that none of the three aspirants now out in front of the race is considered to be the victor. The race is considered to belong to a dark horse, and the dark horse field was never so overcrowded. There is an entry from every corner of the land.

The new suggestion in the dark horse field revolves around the name of Thomas J. Walsh, Senator from Montana. Mr. Walsh strikes many of them as "logical" beyond any aspirant now in the field and there is much talk in Washington of giving Mr. Walsh one of the places on the Democratic ticket.

Democratic leaders speak of "first string" and "second string" dark horses, when they've eliminated the Big Three. In the first string are Mr. Davis, Mr. Ralston, Mr. Cummings and Mr. Glass. In the second string are Governor Sweet of Colorado, Roy al S. Copeland, Senator from New York, Governor Silzer of New Jersey, Governor Albert C. Ritchie from Maryland, Senator Robinson of Arkansas, Chairman Cordell Hull of Tennessee, Huston Thompson, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, and former Governor Gardner of Missouri. Mr. Gardner's name has just entered the field. He was a successful war governor of Missouri and is considered, as a "border state" man, to measure up to the western and progressive requirements the Democrats will call for at New York. The foregoing entries do not exhaust the list. The country is wide and the Democratic Party is numerous.

A tooth of one prehistoric animal eight inches long and four inches wide, was found in the Mississippi river. Some of them feel about that size when the dentists are working on 'em.

Formerly this country used to resound with Indian warwhoops, but now it will resound with political whoops, so it remains to be seen if real progress has resulted.

The masters at Washington are demanding 711 a day. Now it remains to be seen what the congressional whitewashers will ask for.

Trade Where They All Trade

This flour has made its reputation on its merits only. Every user is a booster. The first cost may be a little more, but it makes more and better bread and is economical to use. The satisfaction of always having good bread is remembered long after the price is forgotten. The lowest priced flour is not always the cheapest.

This flour is made from the choicest selected Turkey Red Hard Winter Wheat grown in a small section of Kansas where it produces to perfection. There is no other flour equal to it.

W. L. H. Baker, Miss Williametta Baker, Mrs. Chas. Thompson and two little sons Charles and Thomas, of Ft. Thomas, were visiting Mrs. W. L. H. Baker at their country home Saturday and Sunday.

We received the following marriage announcement, too late for last week's issue: "Jennie Mae Rogers and Harold Louvet Aylor were united in marriage by Rev. Hanson, pastor of the First Baptist church, of Covington, March 31, 1924. We wish them every happiness through this life and may prosperity follow them."

The above young couple are from the Bellevue neighborhood.

Dr. H. M. Hays, of Clevela, Ohio, was transacting business in Burlington on Tuesday of last week. With the doctor was his wife and a Mrs. Dwyling, of Chicago.

BASE BALL.

Rev. R. H. Carter brought his junior team to Burlington last Thursday afternoon and trimmed the local "kids" by a score of 7-6, in an interesting game. The game was scheduled on short notice, and Coach Carter, who always carries a good supply of material on his roster, was kind enough to loan the Burlington team enough players to fill out, and play the game.

Burlington and Hebron staged a very interesting contest last Saturday afternoon at the Burlington park and the locals as per custom emerged on the short end of a rather close score. Hebron started their young pitcher Hafer, while Burlington relied upon Finn, each starting his first combat of the season. Neither trust was misplaced however as each pitcher tossed an excellent article of ball, although Hafer was relieved by Bullock, when Burlington got a base on balls and two hits in the 7th. Bullock then put on the brakes and there was nothing more doing so far as Burlington scoring was concerned.

Finn for the locals was at the top of his old time form and deserved a much better fate, as he did not allow an earned run, poor support accounting for all of Hebron's scoring. Not a score was made until the sixth, and it was an exceedingly interesting contest until the eighth when some sloppy playing allowed the Hebron boys to salt the game away.

Hits off Finn—5; off Hafer 4; Bases on Balls—off Hafer 1; off Finn 2.

Struck out—by Finn 9; by Hafer 4; by Bullock 2.

Three base hit—Kelly.

The first extra inning game of the season was played last Saturday between Petersburg and Bellevue at Bellevue, Petersburg winning in 11 innings by a score of 7-6. Joe Brady as usual was in the box for Bellevue and pitched a creditable game although he lost and allowed thirteen hits. Petersburg entrusted the game to Roger McCarty, their junior pitcher, who has had some little trouble getting started this year, but covered himself with glory in this one.

Bellevue started in the very first inning by scoring two, Petersburg tying the score in the second. In the fourth Petersburg scored three and took the lead, Bellevue scored two in the sixth and then with Petersburg leading in the ninth 5-4, they put over one run and tied it up at 5 all. In the eleventh Petersburg scored two in their half and Bellevue making a valiant effort, fell one run short of tying it up, thus ending what was termed by some as the best game they ever saw. However that may be, all say it was the best of the season thus far.

Hits off Brady 13; off McCarty 8.

Struck out by Brady—10; by McCarty 12.

Bases on balls—by Brady 2; McCarty 2.

Two base hits—C. McWethy (2); M. McWethy, White, Shinkle, Hitzfeld, L. Ryle.

Three base hits—Berkshire.

The feature of the Bellevue game was the hitting of Claude McWethy, two doubles and a single being his portion.

Kelly hit the first ball pitched in the Burlington-Hebron game for three sacks, but could not score.

Ruth, who has succeeded M. McWethy as the manager of the Petersburg club, stayed out of active service and did all the coaching at third base.

By oversight on the part of the base ball editor the League Standing and "games for next Saturday" were omitted from last week's items in the base ball column.

BEHIND WITH THEIR WORK

Wet weather continued over the county for the greater part of the past week and farm work was delayed a great deal but the temperature was higher and all crops and pastures are looking better. A small amount of tobacco has been set but plants and other conditions are not normal. Rust and wild fire have played havoc in a big per cent of plant beds and for that reason many acres intended for tobacco will be planted in corn as there will not be enough plan to set the acreage planned for the year. These conditions will probably be in the farmer's favor because too large a tobacco acreage had been planned in view of the fact that leaf conditions are now greater than for many years. If a light crop of tobacco is produced this year growers should receive a fair price but if an excess is produced all growers will suffer a low price.

BURLEY GROWERS ACT TO PROTECT LEAF INTERESTS

Vice President Kehoe Sent to Washington To Look After Burley Tobacco in Proposed Relief Legislation—Membership is 103,286.

Lexington, Ky.—On motion of Hon. Elliott Northcutt, of West Virginia, prompt action to insure for the tobacco growers of the Burley district the benefit of any relief legislation under consideration by Congress in the final week of its session was taken by the Board of Directors of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Cooperative Association at its regular monthly meeting here, when by unanimous vote of the Board a telegram was sent to each member of the National House and Senate from the Burley States urging the same consideration for Burley planters that may be accorded to other lines of agricultural production in the proposed legislation.

Mr. Northcutt, who is U. S. District Attorney for the Western District of West Virginia and the member of the Board from that State, emphasized the importance of prompt action by telegraph and declared that the Association should send Vice President James N. Kehoe, himself a former member of Congress, to Washington to represent the Burley planters and to request the other tobacco co-operatives of the country to take similar action. Mr. Kehoe left for Washington Wednesday.

Modern Woodmen.

Class adoption M. W. A. will be held at Odd-Fellows Hall at Florence Tuesday night at eight o'clock. Patriarch Camp of Burlington will put on the degree work. All Woodmen are invited. Refreshments and a good time promised.

Last Tuesday night, Patriarch Camp conferred the degree work on Bruce Campbell, and Wesley Underhill was adopted as a social member. Mr. Underhill is the oldest Modern Woodman in the county.

Quite a number of the members of the local camp at Burlington attended the Memorial Services at Petersburg last Sunday afternoon and enjoyed the splendid address of State Deputy J. W. DeHart as well as the addresses of the other speakers representing the other orders.

New Camps have been organized at Florence and Hebron.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

Life's too short to waste time talking about your neighbors.

The trouble with the big I is that it frequently becomes the small you.

There was no preaching at either of the Burlington churches last Sunday.

Miss Bessie Baldon entertained a number of her friends with a party, last Tuesday evening.

Judge J. M. Lassing has made a boulevard out of Garrard street from Washington to Temperate.

A fair size crowd attended the sale of the personal property of the late Eugenia Blythe, last Thursday.

Between showers, last week, many farmers succeeded in getting considerable corn and tobacco planted.

Now is the season for garden parties, but few people come appropriately dressed in overalls and aprons.

John Barnes of near Burlington, finished setting his crop of tobacco last Wednesday. John is always up in the lead.

Strange to say school examinations never take up practical subjects like the rules of base ball or how to behave at a dance.

O. N. Scott, Wm. Stephens, Robert Kirtley and Prof. Kennard, of Petersburg, were business visitors in Burlington Saturday.

It is reported that cut worms have damaged the early corn and tobacco considerably. Weather conditions have been favorable for the worms.

The heavy wind storm of Thursday night of last week, did considerable damage to fruit and shade trees in different parts of the county.

Dogs made a raid on Reuben Akins and Robt. Utz's flock of sheep, one day last week, killing two or three in each flock and crippling several. The dogs were killed.

STIFLING COMMERCE.

We note in the Advertiser that Robert Lee Mathews, of Petersburg, has accepted a position with Dudgeon & Stansifer at Walton. Both employers and employee are to be congratulated.

Morris Rice, of Rabbit Hash, was in town, last Friday, carrying his right arm in a sling, caused by his auto "kicking" while trying to crank it. The two small bones in his wrist were broken.

The North Kentucky Rural Carrier's Association held a meeting at the home of Len Childers in Erlanger, last Saturday evening. Officers for the year were elected. Elijah Stephens and A. H. Jones from Burlington attended the meeting.

Last Wednesday afternoon a "stramp printer" found his way to our office. He had visited practically every city in the south eastern part of the U. S. He was looking for work but we could not accommodate him and he left for Aurora, Indiana. He was a Frenchman by the name of Groulx.

STIFLING COMMERCE.

When you hoard money away, you assist in stifling the commercial activity of your home community as well as the whole country at large.

If you put it in the bank, the banker lends it to someone who uses it to produce something. That keeps other people at work and keeps the money in circulation.

If you lend it on a mortgage or buy bonds, it serves the same purpose. It keeps circulating and everybody is benefited.

When money keeps moving, it enables many people to move.

And the fellow who can't move ahead is in sorry straits.

GOOD INTENTIONS

Some people mean well, but never do well. Their lives are paved with good intentions never carried out. They are always intending to do something that never gets done.

In the end of taking a just pride in accomplishment, they are continually humiliated by the inadequacy of their excuses.

They do not even drift with the tide of humanity, but unresistingly are swiched into the eddies of life.

For them there is a beginning and an end, but nothing in between. They have neither true friends nor bitter enemies, because they do nothing to inspire either friendship nor enmity.

They are nameless because no one takes the trouble to name them. Hush up—and start something.

APPLYING PRINCIPLE OF AERIAL LIFE NET TO PUBLIC HIGHWAYS

A "highway guard," a successfully tested safety device, applies the principle of the aerial life net to prevent highway embankment, curve and bridge accidents. W. T. Kyle of Bridgeport, Conn., sponsored the appliance. The secret of the guard lies in its strength and method of fabricating the material so as to obtain elasticity. Tests have shown that it is practically impossible for the average-sized machine speeding as high as forty miles an hour to break through and if the car hits the wire at a moderate speed the recoil is sufficient to bring it back to the road without serious damage.

FEW CAR OWNERS KNOW STEERING

Reasons Why Auto Is Hard or Easy to Handle Are Given by Prof. Greer.

(By ERWIN GREER, President Greer College of Automotive Engineering, Chicago.)

The average motorcar owner probably will be surprised to be told that he doesn't know what really good steering means. The reason is that so many factors contribute to helping or hindering the easy guidance of the modern car that many of them are entirely overlooked by most owners, and the result is that they consider satisfactory steering what is in reality very far from perfect.

To begin with, it is important that the front wheels shall be properly aligned. The car is to steer with maximum ease. Now all wheels are cambered and toe-in to a certain extent. The amount varies with different cars, but the owner should take pains at least twice a season to see that his wheels are properly aligned.

Improper Alignment.
Any time that the car is involved in a collision of any kind, even if it is with the curb, the wheel alignment should be checked up. Improper alignment results not only in hindering the steering of the car, but in excessive tire wear.

If the alignment of the wheels is found to be incorrect, it may be altered by manipulation of the tie rod. This latter is the rod which runs from one steering knuckle to the other, and which has a movable portion at either end. Hard steering is often caused by misalignment of the front wheels through an error in the toe-in.

In most steering systems the stack which develops may be taken up in two or three different places. The car owner should find out, to begin with, where the wear is greatest, whether in the gears at the bottom of the posts, in the ball joints or in other parts. A good beginning may be made by gripping the tie rod and moving it back and forth, thereby detecting play in this part, if it exists. Perform the same operation with the drag link or rod connecting the steering arm with the front axle. The ball joints may be adjusted by means of a nut which is located in the back of the spring.

Adjustment Provided.
To do this remove the cotter-pin, turn down the nut, insert the pin again and the job is done. If the play is in the gears there is usually provided an adjustment, placed just above the case in which the gears are housed. As a general thing it takes the form of a serrated nut, which is held in place by a slotted pin. The pin must be removed with a screwdriver, the nut being turned slightly, after which the pin is replaced. Each time the nut is turned it is well to try the steering wheel to see that the adjustment is having the desired effect.

Steering knuckles are held in place by a pin, on which the knuckle turns. If lubrication of this pin is neglected, excessive wear will result. There are a number of different types of steering knuckles in common use. All of these have bearings, and most of them employ bearing bushings. Replacement of these bearings is frequently necessary when excess play develops in this part. It is not too much to say that daily lubrication is essential to the continued life of the bearing.

Compression as Brake Is

Not Injurious to Engine

Some motorists, says Motor Life, appear to have the mistaken notion it is harmful to the engine to use the compression as a brake in going down steep hills. Shut off the engine and leave the gears in mesh, so the wheels drive the engine against the compression in the cylinders. Because the throttle is closed, this will help to save the service and emergency brakes from excessive wear.

If greater braking power than that afforded by the high-speed position of the gears is needed, shift into second or low, the braking effect being increased as you stop down.

"All Is Well" Slogan

A suggestion for an "All Is Well" sign in case of wreck or breakdown on the highway is made to motorists through the Automobile Club of Southern California. It is in effect, that the motorist forced to stop on the highway for repairs or because of accident, display a white rag or handkerchief to indicate to passing drivers that no one is injured and no help is needed.

Many drivers feel the urge to be of assistance when a wrecked machine is encountered and frequently there is a congestion of the highways due to this worthy sentiment. Hence, congestion could be relieved in the vicinity of the wreck by the simple expedient of raising a white emblem indicating that aid is not desired.

Simply Constructed Tire Among Latest Inventions

The Scientific American in illustrating and describing an automobile tire, the invention of C. Escher of Jersey City, N. J., says:

"The invention relates to tires for mounting of vehicle wheels or demountable rims for vehicle wheels.

Latest Novelty in Automobile Tires.

The general object is to provide a durable and simply constructed tire. The object is accomplished by providing an inner rim, a cushion positively attached to said inner rim, an outer rim positively attached to said cushion and forming the cushion with walls flaring outward so as to provide bracing members adapted to support the rim against rocking."

Change in Size of Tire Hurts Odometer Accuracy

One frequently hears the suggestion that a change of tire size makes a very serious difference in the accuracy of the speedometer, and more particularly of that shown by the odometer. As a matter of fact, there is a difference, but it amounts to very little when short distances are considered. For instance, a difference of half an inch in diameter in a 34-inch tire makes a difference in odometer readings of 80 feet to the mile. When a permanent change of tire size is made it is important to have the recording instrument adjusted to meet it.

AUTOMOBILE NEWS

Care should be taken, when installing a fan belt, to see that the pulleys are in line.

To make both surfaces of carburetor and intake gaskets airtight, they should be sealed with shellac.

A new keyless lock for automobile steering columns automatically operates when a car stops.

Never allow a leaky gasoline pipe to go without repair. A spark or hot exhaust pipe may cause an explosion.

Leaking water pipes may be temporarily repaired by binding around several layers of string well soaked in thick oil.

American automobile manufacturers intend at least $50,000,000 each year in developing new models before the cars are offered for sale.

FERTILE EGGS CAUSE LOSS TO FARMERS EVERY SUMMER.

A large part of the loss caused by eggs spoiling in warm weather can be prevented by producing only infertile eggs during the late spring and summer. This loss, which is conservatively estimated at more than $15,000,000 a year, falls almost entirely on the producer. Not only does he lose the value of the eggs which spoil, but the producer suffers a further material loss in the reduction of the number of eggs consumed caused by people getting bad eggs among those they purchase.

This loss can be entirely prevented by producing only infertile eggs during warm weather. This is accomplished by taking all male birds out of the flock after the breeding season is over. The rooster has no influence on the number of eggs produced, and should either be marketed or killed—the latter can be canned—or he should be kept penned up.

The United States Department of Agriculture has just published a large poster showing the difference in the keeping qualities of infertile and fertile eggs during the warm weather. This poster also gives simple rules for producing good quality eggs on farms during the latter part of the spring, throughout the summer, and into the early fall months.

THE FARM.

Modern farming can not be conducted without considerable modern equipment, but the cost of that equipment is not merely the purchase price. If a man has to telephone to a repair shop every time his automobile or other machine goes wrong, and have a man come out at high wages to fix it, his expenses are going to mount up, and the delays in his work caused by the stoppage of his machine are expensive.

It used to be said that hard work was the first essential for success in farming. It is still necessary, yet other abilities count equally high. Among them is the ability to handle and repair machinery and tools. Any scheme of education for country life that does not do something to fit a man to repair and handle his own machinery and automobile is lacking in a vital essential.

RENTED PROPERTIES

The average tenant in a rented house will not take as much pains to improve and beautify his grounds as the average home owner. This is perhaps natural, as you could hardly expect a person to do as much work to improve another man's property as he will to develop his own. It is particularly hard to induce transient occupants to do much for improvement.

Landlords often complain that if they take pains to improve their buildings that the same is not appreciated by many tenants and that many such betterments are destroyed by careless tenants or their children.

People who occupy rented properties ought to take just as good care of them as if they owned them. If they do, they will usually find that landlords value them as occupants and will make concessions to keep them. The people who allow their properties to deteriorate while they occupy it, usually have to pay pretty high for what they get.

And the boys who have fitted themselves to be bosses may not at land such positions, but lots of carpenters and bricklayers are needed.

BIDDING UP MUSCLE SHOALS.

The competition now developing for Muscle Shoals is a healthful sign. For a while it looked as if that great power site, with the costly works built there at government expense, was going to lie idle or go to Henry Ford by default. All at once the project has become the subject of keen rivalry.

There are two or three other companies, apparently headed by responsible men and backed by large capital making bids that look more advantageous than Mr. Ford's. At least they are more definite, they promise a larger return to the government and they do not require the alienation of the Shoals for 100 years in defiance of the established federal waterpower policy.

As a result, it is possible that Mr. Ford will raise his bid and make his terms more explicit. It is also possible that other bidders will get into the game, if the government does not change its mind and decide to keep and run the project for itself.

This situation reflects at the same time a better appreciation of what water power means in this country and new interest in our national resources. The oil inquiry has contributed much to this interest, and greatly strengthened the public desire to let no national fuel source pass into private hands without ample compensation and safeguards.

Some of the people who pride themselves on being self educated, seem to think it necessary to present themselves with a diploma on many occasions.

ALL DAY MEETING

—ice, a service replete with good music, excellent preaching, and last but of course not least, countless good things to eat, was held last Sunday at the Burlington Baptist church.

Miss Giovanna Maturio of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music was the special pianist for the day while Dr. James McKee Adams, of the Southern Baptist Seminary was especially called for the preaching.

The morning service commenced shortly after 11 o'clock and after several congregational hymns and special numbers Dr. Adams delivered one of the best and most inspiring addresses from a spiritual standpoint that has ever been preached from the local pulpit. The principal point emphasized by him being that a man's business is not in the every day walks of life, that whatever is his earthly calling is not his business but simply a means of earning a livelihood, and that his real business is in winning souls to Christ.

After the discourse the large crowd that had assembled, numbering about 400, repaired to the basement of the church, where there were enough of the things that tend to satisfy the inner man to supply twice the number.

The afternoon service was taken up with more special music, and the fine sermon by Rev. W. W. Adams, and a short talk by Rev. W. W. Adams, the local pastor.

The meeting was dismissed about the afternoon, with the phrase on every tongue "it was a fine meeting."

NOT A SHOWER—BUT A DELUGE

This spring has been noted for its numerous showers both of the kind that tend to make life miserable and the kind that make it worth living, but the occurrence last Monday night in the basement of the Baptist church in honor of Rev. and Mrs. W. W. Adams was of the kind that suggest the fact to ones mind that the term "shower" was a misnomer, and that this event should not be termed thus. In short and instead we think it was a "deluge" and so indeed did everyone present. Suffice it to say that the gifts and their donors were so numerous that it would require at least a column in which to list them.

Judge J. M. Lassing made a very appropriate and complimentary speech in behalf of Rev. Adams followed by a personal examination by Mr. and Mrs. Adams of each and every gift, after which both of the favored ones relieved themselves of their feelings very beautifully and appropriately.

We think that no young couple ever took up the journey of matrimony less blessedness with more sincere well wishing than has this one, and the Recorder desires to take this opportunity and privilege of extending its very best along the rest.

BROWN—KELLY

To the surprise of their many friends Mr. Walter Brown, son of Mrs. Emma Brown, and Miss Katherine Kelly, attractive daughter of Mrs. Bess Kelly, all of Burlington, eloped last Saturday afternoon, going to Walton, where they were married by Rev. R. F. DeMolay, Baptist minister. After the ceremony they left for a short trip to the Kentucky mountains.

KIRKPATRICK—ELLIOTT

Herbert Kirkpatrick, 53, and Miss Clara F. Elliott, 17, both of Burlington, were quietly married last Saturday in Newport, after a courtship of a few months. The bride is a daughter of Howard Elliott, farmer of this precinct. They are now a home in Burlington.

Mrs. Elias Boyle, of Hamilton, O., sent us a money order for $1.50 to renew her subscription for another year. Mrs. Boyle says: "I can't do without my dear old home paper." Mrs. Boyle formerly lived in the Bellevue neighborhood, and is a daughter of the late J. M. Moody and wife.

Mrs. Carrie Graves Dove and little daughter of Detroit, Michigan, attended the all-day service last Sunday at the Baptist church. Mrs. Dove announced her intention of moving to Erlanger, in the near future, which will be a source of pleasure to her many Boone-co. friends.

"JUNIOR WEEK AS I SEE IT"

(BY GRANT MATTOX)
Florence, Ky.

The fourth Annual Agricultural Club Week at Lexington, was a complete success as all the boys and girls will testify. Boone county was represented by the following Club members: Ava Lou Hudson, Walton; Dorothy Jean Hood, Hebron; Virginia Yelton, Lee Artie Franks, Elizabeth Tanner, all of Burlington and Grant Maddox, Florence.

Each county was allowed to send eight per cent of their total membership to Jr. Week. Boone county was allowed to send 15 boys and girls but only six attended. Where were the other nine who were entitled to go? They had known what interesting and improving things were to be learned there, they could not have been kept at home.

Where was Boone county's two demonstration team? I could not find them and I do not believe they were there.

The highest scoring teams were as follows: Home Practice Demonstrations—First—Campbell county; Second—Graves county; Third—Henderson county. Agricultural demonstrations—First, Breckenridge county, team composed of Robt. Kinchloe, Mary Sue Thompson and Dorothy Wright, second—Crittenden county and third, Hopkins county.

Lets get busy and show them at the State Fair that Boone county is still on the map, and next year lets take a real, live delegation, with two demonstration teams to Junior Club Week.

Although Boone county had only six members present, Dorothy Jean Hood and Grant Maddox were chosen to write articles for the newspapers, concerning Jr. Week.

The boys and girls were divided into four tribes for the purpose of playing games: Cherokee, Chickasaws, Mahawks and Warhawks. Our County Agent was leader of the Chickasaws, under whose leadership they won a prize of ten dollars, by putting on the best stunt for stunt night. He had eighty-eight boys and girls in his tribe and each received a Junior Club pin and two pennies.

The main points of the week's program were as follows: Lectures, play time, classes, and educational movie picture shows. Many interesting speakers were on the program, among whom were Gov. Fields and Pres. McVey of the University of Kentucky.

We took a street car trip past points of interest in Lexington and out to tours to Frankfort, State Fish Hatchery, Georgetown, and to the best farms of the surrounding country. These were arranged by Mr. and Mrs. Matson to whom we owe our good time.

Miss Nell Stephens spent Sunday with friends in Burlington.

L. C. Scothern's house looks very attractive with its new coat of paint.

Mrs. Wm. Stephens had one hundred and fifty chickens stolen the past Friday night.

Mrs. John W. Burton, of Cincinnati, was the mid-week guest of her mother, Mrs. James S. Asbury.

Two three or four days of sunshine marked the past week was also marked by a heavy rain here Sunday night.

Mrs. Lorena Cropper is with her daughter, Mrs. Chester Grant, and is slowly recovering from a badly sprained ankle.

Mrs. J. B. Berkshire, of Petersburg, gathered together a few friends for dinner Monday evening to meet her sister, Mrs. Preston McKee Brindley, of Cleveland, Ohio.

Mrs. Robert Stark Hannah and interesting children, arrived Saturday from California, and will spend the summer with her father, Mr. W. T. Berkshire and Mrs. Berkshire.

Mrs. Ben H. Berkshire entertained Friday at her home on the Petersburg pike, overlooking the town of Petersburg with a luncheon and Five Hundred in honor of her daughter, Mrs. Stanley Palmer, of Auburn, Indiana.

Dr. and Mrs. M. A. Yelton have been entertaining for the past week Miss Giovanna Maturio of Cincinnati. Miss Maturio is an excellent and highly accomplished pianist, having studied at the Cincinnati Conservatory having been a member of the last graduating class from that institution. She has also had several years experience in teaching.

John Baldon, after a two week's visit with relatives and friends in Burlington, left Sunday evening for his home at Bowling Green. His wife, who was operated on at the Deaconess hospital Cincinnati, about two weeks ago, will not be able to leave the hospital for several days.

Alonso Beemon and son, Raymond, of the Burlington and Florence pike, motored to Dayton, Ohio, Sunday.
Jerry Fowler and wife, of Hebron, spent Saturday and Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Fowler.
Rev. G. N. Smith, of Praise, Ky., visited relatives in the Bellevue neighborhood, the latter part of last week.
Richard Marshall and wife, who moved to Salem Ridge, Indiana, this spring, attended the all-day meeting at the Baptist church, Sunday.
Mr. and Mrs. W. H. P. Hollaway, Mrs. E. V. "Over and son Perry Connor, of Petersburg, were in Burlington for a short time Sunday afternoon.
Mrs. Lorena Cropper, after spending a week with her daughter, Mrs. Chester Grant and family, in Idlewild neighborhood, returned home Sunday.
B. C. Stephens and wife, of Rising Sun, Ind., spent from last Thursday until Sunday morning with his brother, R. H. Stephens and wife, of the Bellevue pike.
Prof. J. C. Gray, who for the past two years, was assistant principal at the Boone County High School, left Tuesday morning for Detroit, Michigan.
Since his stay in Burlington the Professor has made many warm friends who hate to see him leave.
Bert Smith, of Newport, was visiting relatives near Burlington, last Saturday and Sunday. For several years Bert carried his mail on R. D. two out of Burlington, but for the last ten years has been connected with the Newport postoffice as a letter carrier.
Mrs. H. F. Wesler, son and daughter, of near Hopeful church, were in Burlington, last Friday. Mr. and Mrs. Wesler have just moved back to their farm after spending the winter in the city. While in town Mrs. Wesler called at the Recorder office and had the subscription date on their paper pushed up another year. These good people have been readers of the Recorder since they came to this county several years ago.

BASE BALL.

Bellevue defeated Hebron last Saturday in a loosely played game by a score of 16 to 8. These two teams had the leadership of the league hanging on the outcome of this game, consequently Bellevue again holds the undisputed lead in the Boone County pennant chase. Bellevue started Presser in the box, but he was relieved by Joe Brady later in the game. Bullock started the game for Hebron but he succumbed to the incessant fire of Bellevue bats before the game was finished, being relieved by Morehead and then Doc Goodridge. Each team was or-edged which may partly account for the looseness of the game. Although it was a free hitting exhibition by every one, the feature of the game was the terrific slugging of Less Ryle, who tore off two singles and two doubles out of five times at bat. Struck out by Joe Brady; by Presser 3; by Bullock 2; by L. Goodridge 4; by Morehead 2; Bases on balls—by Presser 4; by J. Brady 1. Errors—Bellevue 5; Hebron 5. Two base hits—L. Ryle (2) W. Ryle, R. Brady, Williamson, Cook. Three base hit—Black. Home Run—H. Acra.

Petersburg made its first appearance on the Burlington ground last Saturday afternoon and walked away with the contest after having played the regulation distance of nine innings. Each team was somewhat stronger than on any previous occasion this season. White pitching for the first time this season was in excellent form, while Wilson starting and Benson finishing for Burlington were each a trifle unsteady. Petersburg ran up a total of ten runs before Burlington knew the game had started, but the home boys finally woke up and scored 5 in the last two innings. Nixon, of Transylvania, was in the Petersburg line-up and his hard and consistent hitting was the feature of the game. The final score was 11 to 5 in favor of Petersburg.
Ray Conner, "Jaeg" Garnett and Dewey Benson were the reinforcements used by Burlington, but they could not pull them out of the losing rut.
Hits off White—8; off Wilson and Benson 9.
Bases on balls—off White 2; off Benson 1.
Two base hits—R. Nixon and R. Conner.
Three base hits—M. McWethy, R. Nixon, Wilson.
Home Run—Benson.

Petersburg defeated Hebron losing put Petersburg in 2nd place and Hebron in third.

The first ex-Boone countyite to arrive in Burlington for "Kentucky's Home Coming" is William Pyles, of Pattenburg, Mo., who arrived in Burlington, last Saturday. Mr. Pyles left Boone county in 1880, forty-four years ago, and this is his first visit back. He is a son of Andrew Pyles, who many years ago, operated a hat was then called Pyles' mill on Campdown creek—now known as Sullivan mill. There are very few of the citizens left in that section who were living there when he was a young man. Although Mr. Pyles has passed the three-score post in life's journey, he looks hale and hearty. While in Burlington Saturday he met with several old acquaintances—boys with whom he played nearly a half century ago.

Miss Helen Crisler, of Covington, spending the week-end with Mrs. Ida Balsly, of Burlington, entertained for a short call last Saturday evening Mr. Robert Glor, Miss Nellie Raywood and Mr. Karl Rotta. Miss Raywood, who lives in Covington, is a chum of Miss Crisler, was the week-end guest of Mrs. D. R. Blythe.

Two young men were lodged in Burlington jail about midnight Saturday night, charged with speeding on the Dayton highway near Florence. Upon their paying bail of $5.00 and they were released Sunday morning. It is claimed that both were under the influence of liquor and had collided with another auto.

It's news these days when the story of the wedding says that the bride and groom "will go to their newly furnished home."
Worry is thinking in circles, we are told, but square heads worry.

LEGION NOTES

Sacramento, Cal.—The California State Veterans' Welfare Board is purchasing homes for veterans of the World War at the rate of two a day, according to a report recently sent to the State Department Headquarters of the American Legion.

Carville, La.—Time hangs heavy on the hands of the sixteen veterans of the World War who are doing battle at the federal colony here with the most dreadful of diseases, leprosy.

These men contracted the "white death" while serving with the A. E. F. in Russia.

And as they wait in the slow process of their cure by the chaulmoogra oil treatment, their spirit beats in angry, bitter, throat-clutching rebellion against their prison walls those walls which shut them off like a tomb from their fellow-men and the pleasures of the great world outside.

Desperate, haunted by the bitterness of it all, one of the boys recently made a dash for freedom. Escaping, he wandered about for months. Wherever he went, he was shunned as an evil thing. His fellows fled at his approach.

At last he gave up in despair. Back to the colony he came, to await for time's slow healing and the day when he might go forth clean.

Hearing of the plight of these men, the women of the Louisiana Department of the American Legion Auxiliary are ministering to them. Stifling the dread and aversion inspired by the disease, they went in person to the colony. They saw conditions for themselves. They learned what could be done. No second-hand reports satisfied them.

They are doing many things to relieve the veterans' sufferings, to reassure these men that they are not forgotten and are helping them to while away the time that passes so slowly.

Perhaps the most enjoyed of the things the Auxiliary women have furnished is the fully equipped kitchenette which has been installed. Here the boys may cook their own meals. They also have their own mess kits, reminiscent of army days. Here they may free themselves now and then from the weary routine of mess hall fare.

The Auxiliary sends big boxes of foods to the veterans. Their appetites have not been dulled in the least by the disease which afflicts them.

Amusements have been provided by the Auxiliary. Motion picture shows have been arranged for once each week. A high-powered radio set has been installed, reading matter galore has been provided for the Carville library. All this, and much more besides, the Legion Auxiliary has done. And, when one of the boys loses in the struggle, the Auxiliary has arranged that his body shall be honorably sealed and brought to his home for burial with full military honors.

Honesty still bats higher in the percentage column than cleverness.

Mrs. Stanley B. Palmer and son, of Auburn, Ind., are visiting Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Berkshire.

Quite a number from other churches in the county attended the meeting at the Baptist church.

Dr. M. A. Yelton sold a fine bird dog to a gentleman from Ashland, Ky., last Saturday for $250.

Strawberry short-cake is the chief delicacy of the season, and in a few days cherry pie will be on the bill of fare.

Esquires E. J. Aylor and R. L. Tanner were in the county attorney's office last Wednesday on business pertaining to county roads.

F. E. Krutz, the faithful and efficient clerk in L. C. Seothorn's store at Idlewild, bought another $1.50 ticket on the old Recorder merry-go-round last Saturday.

The Circle Girls of the Petersburg Christian church will present a play Wednesday June 25th, entitled "An Old Fashioned Mother," which is reported to be very similar to "Over The Hill." See ad. in this issue.

Mr. and Mrs. Craig Baldon and daughter, of Woodman, Colorado, arrived Monday evening for a visit with Mrs. Baldon's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Rlythe. It has been ten years since Mr. and Mrs. Baldon visited the old town where they spent their childhood days.

ICE CREAM SUPPER
Modern Woodmen of Grange Hall Camp will give an ice cream supper at Grange Hall, Saturday evening, June 21st. All are invited.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:
The charge preferred by me, in the Boone County Court, against Herman Batheleier, has been dismissed. I found upon investigation that the charge was false and that Herman Batheleier was innocent, and that some person had induced my daughter Sadie McCarty to make the charges against him.

Our readers understand, of course, that any writer who attempts to interest or clarify the news or the developments which come under his notice may sometimes be accused of permitting his personal prejudices to influence his judgment. We know that Mr. Keegan makes a determined effort to be fair and impartial, but any views that he does set forth are solely his and not necessarily those of this newspaper.

THE AMERICAN embassy at London post at Tokio, recently visited by Cyrus Woods, may be filled at once, if for no other reason than a political one. Rumors have been heard that Secretary Hughes did not want to send a new man there because there were only a few months more of the Coolidge Administration and no one could tell what might happen in the November election. Talk like that is not good for a presidential candidate, so there may be a new Ambassador in Japan to quiet the rumors.

GEORGE HARVEY'S return to journalism after a successful fling at diplomacy is of especial interest in Washington because he has become the editor of the POST, the capital's rock-ribbed Republican daily. Harvey's editorial page looks like it had been taken from one of the old conservative London papers, and he is filling it up so far with clippings which he procured during his stay in Great Britain. Of interest, too, is that fact that Harvey is occupying the now famous house at 1509 H Street where Harry Daugherty and Jesse Smith lived when they came to Washington four years ago.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN will sit in the Democratic National Convention as a delegate from Florida. It looked for a while that he couldn't even make the grade in the primary, but when the votes were counted, lo and behold, the Commander led all the rest. With Bryan at New York, there is sure to be a convention fight over a dire plank in the platform. He is pledged to oppose Senator Underwood, the outstanding southern candidate for the Presidency, because of the latter's wet leanings.

THE GOVERNMENT is continuing with its plans for issuing the bonus insurance certificates to world war veterans despite the legal efforts here to have the bonus law declared invalid and unconstitutional. The court fight against the bonus is directed, according to the American Legion, by big interests which have opposed the bonus from the start.

TWO OF THE major problems upon which President Coolidge clashed with Congress—Tax Revision and the world court—will be kept alive throughout the summer and will be nullified over at the Capitol again next winter. There will be much talk of both issues during the campaign and when Congress reconvenes, the President will renew his demand for the Harding-Hughes world court and tax reform along the lines recommended by Secretary Mellon. Leaders of his own party right now are not wholeheartedly behind him on either proposal and wholly at variance with him on the world court. On the court fight, however, he has the backing of the Democrats.

Under an act recently signed by President Coolidge, every native Indian in the country becomes a citizen of the United States. The granting of citizenship will not remove the restriction on Indian lands under Government guardianship, the Supreme Court having held that wardship is not inconsistent with citizenship.

Prominent Republicans and Democrats are urging an extra session of Congress unless the Harding-Coolidge World Court plan is acted upon at the regular session. Between international affairs, taxes and farm relief Congress has had hard problems to solve but has done as well, perhaps, as many of its one-idea critics could have done.

When the radio reaches the stage of perfection where we can tell what our neighbors are saying about us, the day of privacy will have arrived.

After refusing their boys a chance to make a little money for themselves, some farmers are now paying high prices for ignorant helpers who can't understand English.

JUNE'S MATRIMONIAL ADVENTURES.

June, famous as the wedding month, begins a new era of life for many of the young folks, including some of the popular young crowd of Burlington.

The cost of living is said to place a high barrier in the way of young folks who wish to marry, yet it seems as if about the same number as ever feel disposed to enter this normal condition of life. If young people have anything of the same spirit that the folks who settled this country had, high prices won't daunt them, provided the man has a steady job and has shown himself willing to work.

They would better start out in a two room apartment if necessary, or only one, if their ancestors' land and they are worthy of the responsibilities of matrimony. It is not true that two can live as cheaply as one, yet many fellows could support a family out of the extravagances they have indulged in while single.

RUM ROW MUST MOVE

The liquor treaty with Great Britain by which the United States government has the right to search suspicious ships for liquor, when the same are found within one hour's distance from shore, will put a few more difficulties in the way of rum running. Even if people dislike the prohibition amendment, they must admit that it has been preposterous to permit a fleet of vessels to come up to within three miles from our shores prepared to unload illicit liquor on the first dark night.

With this longer distance to be traversed by the boats that land the illegal stuff, and new coast guard chasers going after them, there ought to be some interesting times off the American coast this summer. Rum running will not be quite so joyful and festive a sport.

PREPARATION FOR BUSINESS.

The idea used to prevail that education was not necessary for business, and that anyone with a kind of money making genius could jump in most anywhere and achieve success. But today the idea is spreading that anyone's chances of business success are greatly improved by taking adequate preparation for it.

A big lift to this form of training has now been given by George F. Baker, by a magnificent gift of $5,000,000 to the Harvard school of Business Administration. No doubt this liberal offering will inspire many others to give liberally to business schools.

The so called self made man is often able to work himself up from small beginnings with but little education. Some times he is naturally such a broad minded man that he seems to educate himself as he goes along, and comes out a good all round man and fine citizen. Some men have such a keen bargaining and trading instinct that everything they touch seems to turn to money.

Yet many of these men deeply regret, as they get up in life, that they did not have a more thorough education. They welcome the chance to put their sons through colleges and fine business schools.

As great industrial enterprises figure more and more, it becomes more difficult for a young man to work his way up. Without special education, it may take him many years to learn the things that the young man trained in a good business school acquired in a short time. People are needed who have both general culture, so that they are fitted to become community leaders, and scientific training in business methods so that they are able to grasp accurately the large commercial problems of the time.

WOMAN'S REVOLT FROM FORCE.

Attention continues to be excited by the instances where women have operated as bandits, bootleggers and bootleggers. A bobbed hair bandit or bootlegger is sure of unlimited publicity. But the fact that such cases attract so much attention simply shows how unusual they are, and how woman's general nature, in all but extremely few cases, revolts from those applications of brutal force which so many men use with coarse lack of feeling.

The revolt from force manifests itself not merely in resisting the temptation to throw upher crimes, but it will manifest itself more and more in a protest against the wickedness of wars. Sensible women will not hold that a nation shall lie down and allow itself to be trampled upon. But they will insist more and more that everything possible be done to avert the evil of wars. A great new force of women voters is now making itself felt. Politicians who insist that there always have been wars and always will be, have many millions of American voters to deal with who think differently.

The British Labor Government proposes to build during the next few years 2,500,000 workers' houses, at a cost of about $3,000 each. The proponents claim the cost represents only 10 per cent of the "drunk bill."

Better homes is considered the first necessary step to improve labor conditions.

Many a husband envies President Coolidge for the veto power he has over bills.

Dr. Charles W. Flint

Chancellor Charles W. Flint of Syracuse university, who has been sworn in as a colonel of the United States army reserves by Maj. Carl J. Adler, adjutant of the Ninety-eighth division. Doctor Flint says that the head of a school with a unit of the Reserve Officers' Training corps should be the head of the organization.

TREATMENT OF CONSTIPATION.

It is probably no exaggeration to say that constipation is responsible for more of the physical misery of mankind than any other of the so-called minor ills of the human race. A few hints therefore as to some of the means of preventing or curing the evil may help to promote the well-being of many, both young and old.

In the first place we must disabuse our minds of two common errors—first, that the bowels can ever be made to function properly by the use of drugs and, second, that constipation can be cured by exercise, no matter what kind. If all the much advertised pills, powders and potions that promise a cure of constipation could be thrown into the sea, it would be bad for the fishes, as Oliver Wendell Holmes said, but good for mankind, for then we should have to turn to exercise and diet and exercise (including massage and hydrotherapy) which are the only positively curative measures. As for exercise, constipation can be cured by the proper kind—that is, exercise of the abdominal muscles—but exercise that does not strengthen those muscles may do more harm than good.

Many people harm themselves by too concentrated a diet—for example meat or eggs three times a day. The residue after meat is digested is neither bulky enough nor stimulating enough to induce active intestinal contraction. The same objection applies to too much starchy food. Vegetables and whole-wheat or graham bread or corn-meal bread together with some cereal that has not been predigested must enter largely into the daily diet. At the same time moderate exercise must be observed; a person may take in such a large bulk of the advertised anticonstipation preparations as to clog the intestines and so produce the very condition that they are supposed to prevent. Almost all fresh fruits except bananas and berries are excellent, and so are jams and marmalade, except loganberry jam and raspberry jam. Water, cold or hot, should be taken in abundance, as in addition to the fluid taken with meals a glassful before breakfast, a glassful between meals and a glassful at bedtime. Coffee is permissible, but tea should be taken only in great moderation and should not be allowed to draw more than two minutes, if as long as that. Cream and other fats are useful, but milk is not.

Walking is most beneficial, and all able-bodied persons should make a point of walking briskly every day of the year. The special exercises are those that contract the abdominal muscles. Many times a day, when you are walking or sitting at the desk whatever you may be doing, you should practice retracting the abdominal wall without expending the chest. Other special exercises can be devised by anyone with a little ingenuity and should be observed religiously. Anyone who acts upon these suggestions and fails to get some measure of relief is in need of medical care.

The farmer who used to be too sleepy to read after supper, is probably now so busy listening to the radio that he can't be persuaded to come to bed.

It is pretty hard to persuade a farmer's boy to work for $3.00 a day in Boone county, when he gets the idea in his head that he can make a million in some city.

These other waves may be very wonderful, but the summer girl wants to know if looking at them will make her a better bachelorette.

The reason money is so valuable is because so few have any.

HONOR

By THOMAS A. CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

There is apparently in the minds of many people a peculiar significance in being put upon one's honor, what ever that may mean, and a peculiar freedom from responsibility when not upon honor. An act may be recognized as objectionable or even as actually evil, but many people feel no compunctions of conscience in committing it, unless they are upon their honor. Then they would lose a leg rather than offend.

I remember not long ago having a conversation with a young fellow with reference to certain immoral things of which he had been guilty. He agreed with me ultimately that if the past could be forgotten he would not in the future again offend. It was not long, however, until I discovered that he had broken his agreement.

"Did you not promise me," I asked, "that you would not do this thing again?"

"Why, I believe I did," was his reply, "but I did not promise upon my honor."

A few years ago a boy came to my office and asked me to lend him thirty-five dollars. He was playing in hard luck, he was out of work, and if he could borrow the sum of money for which he asked, he could get to a distant city and find a job. He would pay the money back in three months, he said. I let him have it, and not hearing from him for a year or two, I wrote him.

"I was not of age when I borrowed the money of you," he finally replied to my letter, "and so I am under no legal obligation to pay it." And he has never done so. He was not on his honor, you see.

It is a curious thing this honor. Under certain conditions a man feels bound by it. He must be honest and truthful and upright. He must insist upon honesty and uprightness in others. Then he is honest, or turns a corner, and the whole situation changes. He may lie or practice deceit or even steal, and a few think the worse of him and he not anything the worse of himself.

It is a false honor, this I have been describing. Real honor is based upon principle, it is the moral law.

It is not influenced by time or situation or circumstance. It is a part of a man's everyday life; it controls and directs his action wherever he is, and it needs no oral or written expression to make it binding.

"... the Lammeters had been brought up in that way that they never suffered a pinch of salt to be wasted, and yet everybody in their household had of the best, according to his place."—Silas Marner.

There are wasteful persons and thrifty persons in every nation; but when the percentage of wasteful persons is very high, we speak of the nation as wasteful, and when the percentage of thrifty persons is high, we speak of the nation as thrifty. America has the reputation of being one of the most wasteful nations on earth; France has the reputation of being one of the thriftest.

One drawback to popularizing thrift in our country is that so many people confuse thrift and stinginess. Part of our extravagance is probably due to the fact that we are still close to pioneer conditions when game and fish and timber were so plentiful that there seemed no possibility of exhausting the supply, and consequently no need for thrift. Part of it is also probably due to the fact that many of our housekeepers grew up on farms where there were always pigs and chickens and cats and dogs to eat all table scraps and kitchen waste. Broken bread, bits of meat, thick parings and uneaten food seemed no waste when thrown into the swill barrel, to be fed to the pigs. Nowadays, however, the farmer knows that his pigs and chickens thrive better on a proper diet than on table scraps; and what was formerly fed to them is now buried or burned.

When a farmer kills a beef or a hog or a sheep, there is usually much waste. Often he wastes the very portion—the animal that meat-eating savages and meat-eating animals consider the choicest part of the carcass—the blood and glandular organs. In the large packing plants, where a few cents saved on each animal slaughtered amounts to hundreds of thousands of dollars in a year, there is no part of the carcass allowed to go to waste. No one speaks of the packers as stingy—but as efficient. With them the value of thriftiness shows, because the quantities handled are so large.

When our homes are run as efficiently as the large packing plants, we shall have more housekeepers such as the Lammeter sisters—housekeepers who waste absolutely nothing and yet provide their families with the best of everything.

HOME PRIDE

"You live in the same place you always did?" we asked a man the other day, as we walked up the street with him.

"Yes, in the same old hole," he replied.

The answer was typical of the man. He called home a "hole" and it was a "hole" because he could see nothing else in it.

It has always been a "hole" to him and probably always will be because he hasn't vision enough to see its possibilities.

There are not many people like this in Boone county, but there are far more than there should be, simply because they have taken the wrong view of life and their job.

They represent a type who doubtless have suffered some disappointment, some fancied wrong, and they have brooded over it until everything looks dark. They fail to see a bright spot any place in the future.

Home and all that it means depends upon the viewpoint. If we get the proper perspective, home is something more than a "hole" and we take a just pride in making it respectable.

A humble home may be made just as attractive as a home on which money is lavished. It may be beautiful in the exact degree to which we give time and thought to it.

Pride in our community, our country, state and nation begins with home pride and those who take a justifiable pride in the place they live can be put down as good citizens.

RADIO

(Edited by G. Douglas Warrick, Editor of Radio Merchandising.)

Such a Set Gives Volume and Distance.

By LEON BISHOP

Procure any standard make of 180-degree variocoupler, rewind the stator with 40 turns of No. 20 double cotton covered magnet wire. At a point eight turns from the ground side of the stator take off a lead which goes to the antenna. Across this coil connect a .0005 variable condenser. This condenser must not be over .0005 in capacity, but under that value if anything.

The grid condenser has a capacity of .00025 mfd. and the grid leak a resistance of 3 megohms. The bypass condenser is .002 mfd. The audio frequency amplifying transformer may be any of the so-called high ratio types.

The first or detector tube rheostat should have a resistance of 30 ohms, while that of the second or amplifying rheostat should be 10 ohms. The detector tube B battery voltage is variable from 22 to 34 volts.

It is important that the outside windings of the secondary be connected to the grid, and that the inner side of the secondary shall be connected to the negative side of the A battery, and not to the negative side of the filament.

This circuit, when working properly, will not only regenerate but will spill over when the rotor windings become parallel with the stator.

Most of the tuning is done with the rotor at almost right angles to the stator. This circuit will operate almost any type of loud speaker with wonderful volume. It is even possible to put over loud speaker reception with stations 1,500 miles distant.

The multi-audio circuit is not only extremely sensitive but wonderfully selective.

The best results are obtained by using UV-201A tubes.

Following several valuable suggestions, these improvements in the multi-audio circuit are advised:

Instead of a variometer in the plate circuit to produce regeneration, a much simpler action may be obtained by using a standard variocoupler, the 180-degree type preferred. The rotor winding need not be changed, as the average variocoupler has a sufficient number of turns to produce regeneration over the frequency used in the music band.

In this circuit the antenna is connected eight turns from the ground, as shown in the diagram. This eliminates a tremendous amount of code interference, and it will be easily possible to listen to the shorter wave stations, even through the local interference of station WEAF.

It must be remembered when using the 180-degree type of variocoupler that it may be necessary to reverse the connections to the rotor. When the proper connections are obtained and the rotor is turned parallel to that stator winding, a terrific screech should be heard in the phones. In other words, the best point of tuning is arrived at with the rotor at about right angles to the stator.—New York Herald.

Use Wood and Copper for Open Circuit Jack

It will be found that a very good open circuit jack can be made as follows: A block of wood $\frac{1}{2}$ inch square $\frac{5}{8}$ inch long is cut as shown at A. Procure two small pieces of copper, and cut one of them $\frac{1}{4}$ inch and the other $\frac{3}{4}$ by 1 inch. Bend the first piece as shown at A and the second one as at B. A hole large enough to allow the plug to pass through it is bored in the panel exactly in front of the place where the block of wood is to be nailed.

The strip of copper A is screwed against the panel and above the hole so that when the plug is pushed in it will make a good contact. The strip B is also screwed in place on the block so that the tip of the plug is connected to it. The block is now fastened in place and the jack is completed.—Radio Digest.

Flexible Leads Save Breaks in Portable Set

When building that portable set for the summer vacation and other trips, use of flexible wire for connections inside the set will probably save lots of trouble from broken connections due to jars and other causes. These connections are not quite so efficient, due to their capacity effect from the insulation, but they are safer and a broken connection out in the woods, miles from a soldering iron, is a calamity. Keep them short but not taut enough to be under a strain. Copper lugs should be soldered to each end to go over the binding post apiece.

Every effort is being made to persuade a few motion picture players to depend entirely on the scenario and not introduce impromptu thrills.

Six hundred years ago in England, men were belabored for burning coal. Some of it that a consumer gets these days establishes a reasonable doubt.

Germany's class distinctions are now largely regulated by the difference between those who have paper marks and those who have real money.

The report that 24 billion telephone calls were made in the United States in the last year unfortunately fails to distinguish between assistants and errors.

Moscow sentences eight government employees to be executed for grafting on public funds. There is that much to be said in favor of the Bolsheviks.

200-Meter Work Makes Interesting Listening

There is some interesting stuff in the air down below the wave length used by the lowest of the broadcasters. It's no use to listen down there until 10:30 p. m., or later, because the amateurs, 90 per cent, then, keep off the air during broadcasting hours. From eleven o'clock on, however, even if you do not have a broadcast receiver, there is some interesting amateur phone traffic on 200 meters and lower. You'll find it extremely sharp and requiring care in tuning. Perhaps, too, you'll begin to realize what you are missing by not knowing the code. If so, you can get a chart of the code and you'll find plenty of opportunity for practice in reading any night after eleven o'clock if you tune down to the 200 meter band.

Bakelite Regarded as One of Best Insulators

The insulating material, bakelite, that is used so extensively for radio panels and parts, is really a very complicated substance, and when the scientific man wants to talk about it he has to call it by the tongue-twisting and brain-exhausting name, oxybis-methylglycolanhydride. It is a condensation product of phenol and formaldehyde, is a very fine insulator and has great heat, moisture and acid-resisting qualities. Its brothers go under such trade names as formalin and condense. These materials are highly efficient in all places where the best of insulation is needed, both in radio and electrical work.

Caught as Catch Could.

Said a Radophan, As he tuned in his set: "This is catch-as-catch-can, I must take what I get." Then he turned on a wheel And the stuff that he got— A political spiel— Made him swear quite a lot. —Walter Drummond in Radio Digest.

Your Conversation "FLAPPER"

Authorities differ as to the origin of the much-discussed term, "flapper." Flapper popularly is applied to the young girl who is in the period of many readjustments which accompany adolescence. Flapper also has been applied to young birds who are just learning to use their wings.

Father Sage Says:

"There are two requisites which every successful moving picture artist must have: First, he must be good-looking; and second, he must be able to lift his left eyebrow in the approved cynical manner."

SODOM

By THOMAS A. CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

"And Lot pitched his tent toward Sodom," the historian wrote when narrating events connected with the early settlers in the Orient. Lot was a good boy who had been well brought up, and Sodom was beautifully situated in a green, fertile valley with a view of the mountains in the distance. The town had its attractions, and Lot was human. It was, however, what in these modern days we should call a wide-open town. There was no attempt to enforce the Volstead act, traffic laws were loose and the dances were unchaperoned. The young people were friendly and unconventional, the sort that takes pride in the fact that they know how to take care of themselves. The vaudeville shows were snappy; all of the pool halls allowed gambling devices; and it was easy to pick up a female acquaintance on the street. When anything happened the policemen and the mayor were always safely out of the way and employed themselves harmlessly the day following in looking for a clue. There was something doing in Sodom most of the time, and it was, in fact, a very interesting place. Lot found it so.

But he found also, as every man before or since has ultimately found, that you can't play with evil without getting soiled by it. You can't even look on and keep absolutely aloof from it. Finally it touches you. You begin at first to justify it and then to take part in it. Sodom went up in flames consumed by the fire of its own law-for-evil pleasure, and though Lot escaped, he was scorched; he carried with him the marks of contact with the low and vulgar and obscene. He was not the same man that he was before he had gazed upon the corruptions of Sodom.

That was six thousand years ago, of course, and in a heathen land; but there are still Sodom-modern, aluring and so cleverly camouflaged as to seem quite harmless—toward which the well-intentioned young fellow, or his sister even, may look with interest or desire, or may pitch his tent. It is easy and often interesting to treat lightly the religious principles which we once followed, to drop into the unconventional, to play a few hands of poker, or to bet on the game, to go gradually from a ruse to the vulgar and finally to the immoral. Lot had no intention of taking up the habits of the Sodomites. He was curious. He simply wanted to see what it was all like. I'm sure he felt that he was quite able to take care of himself, but he was mistaken, and so is everyone who plays with evil or temporizes with wickedness.

"TANTALIZE"

Tantalus was a Greek king, the son of Zeus, who was accused of betraying certain valuable secrets. The gods punished him by giving him an unending hunger and an eternal thirst. They forced him in a lake whose waters reached just to his chin. Over his head grew fruit which constantly receded from his grasp. To the unfortunate Tantalus we owe our word "tantalize," a verb meaning to tease or torment.

How Fast Does Hair Grow? The rate of hair growth varies from three-eighths to three-fourths of an inch a month until it has reached a length of from twelve to fourteen inches, when the rate of growth is reduced one-half. Past this point it gradually ceases. Hair grows faster in warm weather than in cold and faster by day than at night.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

The following is from the Blue Grass Clipper, published at Midway, Woodford county, in its issue of June 19:

"Mrs. J. Howard Rouse entertained Wednesday afternoon of last week with a luncheon bridge in honor of the bride, Mrs. Josephine Herring of Lexington, whose marriage to Mr. Leving P. Young, of Lexington and Louisville took place Saturday night at Castleton.

The house was a home of pink roses. Assisting Mrs. Rouse in entertaining was her mother-in-law, Mrs. J. E. of Lexington."

Mrs. J. E. Rouse (nee Cora Conner) is a daughter of the late O. P. Conner and wife, and a sister of Mr. L. A. Conner, of Burlington, and Mrs. Eva Carver, of Petersburg.

Farm work has progressed well in this county during the past week and with warm weather crops have made excellent growth. Corn is starting off nicely and many fields have been cultivated twice already. Tobacco is being set rapidly now but it is only two weeks late. The acreage will no doubt be reduced materially in this county due to the late season and the poor quality of plants. Farmers will make a strong effort to increase the quality of the crop this year and not rely so much upon the quantity as has too often been the case.

Attorney O. M. Rogers, of Erlanger, and his brother-in-law Lewis A. Smith, of Palatka, Fla., were in Burlington, last Friday afternoon. Lewis Smith is a son of the late Dr. J. F. Smith, and was born and reared on the farm now owned by G. T. Gaines on the Petersburg pike. It has been forty years since he first left Burlington, and during that time many changes have taken place in the old town—most all of the older citizens have passed away and there are very few of his playmates left. He like the rest of us is getting a little gray on top.

With cherries plentiful and an abundance of blackberries on the briars, with millions of fish in the creeks and squirrels up a tree, which you are not allowed to kill until the first of July, home comers need not go hungry so long as they are willing to help garner the harvest that nature has provided. How they will enjoy life once more back in Old Kentucky! Be seated, wandering prodigals, while Miss Victrola renders the choice selection, "I Had a Good Home, But I Left It."

Samuel E. Calvert, son of James Calvert, many years ago Sheriff of this county, died at the Soldiers Home at Danville, Ill., Monday, June 16th. Sam Calvert was born in Burlington, where he spent the greater portion of his life, and was liked by every one who knew him. He is survived by two brothers, Lewis Calvert, of Rising Sun, Ind., and Jay Calvert. His many friends in Burlington are sorry to hear of his passing away.

W. H. Seabee, one of the Recorder's good friends from out of the D. three, was a business visitor to Burlington, last Wednesday afternoon. While in town he called on the printer, Mr. Seabee informed us that his mother, Mrs. Rebecca Seabee, who is now living at Erlanger, and is in her seventy-sixth year has cut two new teeth the last month, and bids fair to enjoy many more years of life's blessings.

The past week has put a beautiful look on the gardens and all crops. The sun has brought out the growth and everything has taken on a splendid aspect. All kinds of early vegetables are plentiful and home grown beans will be ready for use within the next two weeks.

One thing in favor of the wet season with some of the gardeners in Burlington, is that they did not have to stick their peas. The weeds were so high the vines were held up. This does not apply to the editors garden as they just had them plowed this last week.

Mrs. B. C. Gaines and Mrs. G. W. Tolin, both of Burlington, attended a garden fete given by Mrs. William Whitehouse and Mrs. J. C. Hernan, on their beautiful lawn on the Dixie Highway last Friday afternoon.

After a week's vacation spent with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Hall, Miss Bess Hall returned the first of the week to her work with the Union Central Life Insurance Co., Cincinnati.

Miss Edna Riley, formerly of the Bullittsville neighborhood, was visiting Mrs. Ida Bailey a few days the past week. Miss Edna will leave soon for California.

W. L. Kirkpatrick, one of Burlington's live-wire merchants, has recently installed in his place of business an up-to-date soda fountain.

From all indications there will be a good crop of fruit in Boone this year.

G. W. Tolin was in Constance precinct on legal business last Friday.

THE FOURTH OF JULY

The real significance of Independence Day comes from an understanding of its meaning, a realization of what the Fourth of July stands for in American history.

No child should be permitted to grow up with the idea that the 4th is the day we all take a vacation and try to see how much noise we can make.

Rather, every school child should be able to quote from memory the essential part of that immortal Declaration of Independence.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed.

In the words of Abraham Lincoln, "This was their majestic interpretation of the economy of the Universe. This was their lofty, and wise, and noble understanding of the justice of the Creator to His creatures."

Americans today may well ponder carefully the expressions of these great men who gave years of efforts and thought to the forming of our national ideals and who wrote these ideals into the two great basic documents of our civil life—the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States.

The Declaration of Independence declares the doctrine of equality, liberty and that a government derives its just powers from the consent of the governed.

Equality means fraternity, brotherhood, fair-dealing, exclusion of no one from public benefits because of race or poverty or lowly birth. It does not mean social equality, or equality of wealth or equality of inherent ability. The Declaration referred to political equality, which means equal opportunity under the law.

The national ideal of liberty has been the first watchword on our lips. To assure our union, our government, in the interest of personal liberty, license, unbounded freedom, is not liberty as conceived by the writers of the Declaration. It is, rather, to break the national ideal into pieces and to rush back towards the barbarism that existed before man set aside his selfishness to form co-operative government, without which we would still be roaming the wilderness and fighting for our daily bread.

The other vital thing in the preamble of the Declaration of Independence means that government is to be from the bottom up and not from the top down. The American theory is that all power flows in the people as a whole. A tendency to depart from this system in recent years has been the greatest source of trouble. Only by holding to the representative form of government as established by our forefathers, can our republic endure.

BUILDING FISH TRUSTS

The wholesale value of the fish "landed" in the chief counties of the world is $780,000,000. Add 25 per cent for storage, shipping expenses and dealers' profit and the cost to fish consumers is well over one billion of dollars.

In this connection is a curious fact that many states as well as nations maintain fish hatcheries at the expense of taxpayers, and those hatcheries restock the lakes, rivers and streams for the benefit, generally, of combinations of men who control not only the fish boats and nets, but control the wholesale markets. The individual fisherman has almost passed out of existence today because he cannot dispose of his "catch" except to the "trust" and must take what is offered or get out of business. An investigation of almost any fishing port in this nation will prove this fact, and it is a subject that deserves the attention of our authorities because the people pay twice.

BOND ISSUE

IS DECLARED CONSTITUTIONAL BY THE COURT OF APPEALS.

With all seven judges concurring and Judge Barker, of Falmouth, writing the opinion, the Court of Appeals last Friday held the act, submitting to the voters of Kentucky the $75,000,000 bond issue, to be constitutional.

By their decision the people of Kentucky now have the privilege of deciding by their vote, which they will cast at the next November election, whether or not these bonds will be issued. In other words the question of providing funds for the improvement of roads and public institutions is now in the hands of the people.

These issues are vital in Kentucky. The improvements are necessary, and the RECORDER is of the opinion that the voters of Boone county cannot do judiciously otherwise than to support this measure.

Summer Arrives

MAKING USE OF SCHOOLS

There was a time when the little one-room school houses for four or five months during the year were a rendezvous for rats and mice. But those days have gone forever.

The small buildings are disappearing and in their place have been erected consolidated schools costing from $10,000 to $100,000. They represent a large investment of taxpayers' money which should not be allowed to lie idle all summer and earn nothing. They can be made to pay large dividends in community enjoyment.

It may have been all right to let the birds and beasts and reptiles take possession of the one-room buildings because there was not much money invested in them. Farmers were busy and they could be placed in condition for school cheaper than a caretaker could be employed. But with the expensive consolidated schools, it is different.

This kind of reasoning does not apply to the modern rural school plant, in the light of a new day and a better understanding of how to make use of school houses as community centers.

For an expensive school building to be unused from April or May until September is sheer waste. There may be a time when rural schools will be run on an all-year basis, with vacations being arranged at periods when children can help with the crops. But for the present, the consolidated school should justify its existence during the summer months, in a better vacation for the children and a richer community life for the adults.

There are countless uses to which the school building may be put during vacation—uses which each school community can work out according to its own needs.

Parent-teacher's associations have a habit of discontinuing their meeting during the summer, but even they can make use of the building, as can all other organizations. Closing the school year does not mean that all of the life that centers in and around the school building should cease.

RESPECT FOR LAWS

Not many crimes in several decades have attracted the attention that has been directed to the recent kidnapping and murder in Chicago. Revolting as are its details, its lesson should not be lost; neither should its causes be passed lightly.

Probably never in criminal annals has such a clear case been built up against the defendants, involving, as it does, their confessions and the mass of material evidence to support it.

They are both subject to a double death, so to speak, as the law plainly sets out death as the penalty for murder and kidnapping for ransom. In whether or not the death penalty is visited upon them, only time will tell, but the public will follow the case with keen interest because of the many questions involved.

There is no question that the increase of violent crime is closely related to the delay in punishment of criminals. Those with criminal intent fail to see the relation between a murder and the execution of a murderer several years later, if, indeed, he is put to death at all, and does not win his freedom on any pretext or another.

Crime increases directly as the losses which prompt application of the law would fetch, fail to make an impression on the public mind.

The nation's criminal element will be encouraged or discouraged, according to whatever course this case takes.

On account of the social position and wealth of the defendants' parents, the importance of the outcome of the trial of the two boys is great, because of the far-reaching effect it will have in influencing people to respect the law.

No kind of weather suits everybody.

NEW GASOLINE TAX

Records on file at the office of the Boone County Clerk M. E. Rogers, show that 425,666 gallons of gasoline was sold by the wholesale oil companies in Boone county in 1923. The tax on this amount of gasoline brought a return to the state of $4,258.96, of which 1 per cent went to the County Clerk for collecting the tax.

Comparison of figures for the first four months of 1923 and 1924 show that a total of 114,889 gallons of gas were sold by the wholesalers during the first four months of 1923, the tax on which would be, at one cent a gallon, $1,148.89. The sale of gas by the wholesalers for the first four months of this year reached 119,225 gallons, which netted a tax of $1,192.25.

Basing figures on these records, it is estimated Boone county with a tax of three cents a gallon will net the state approximately $3,000 during the year 1924.

Under the new law the collection of the tax on gasoline is taken out of the hands of the county clerk and is placed in the hands of the State Tax Commission, Frankfort.

With the placing of the added tax on gasoline, Boone county for the first time in many years, is without the service of an oil inspector. The recent Legislature abolished this office in 88 counties. Mr. Robert Coffman, of Walton, has held the office of oil inspector for Boone county for the past two years.

Since the new law went into effect the price of gasoline has increased to 26 cents a gallon for the more common gas and 30 cents a gallon for the higher grade gas. This is an increase of two cents a gallon on each grade.

The new law, will, no doubt, cause motorists to fill their machines with gasoline from towns on the other side of the river.

NOTICE—Beginning next Saturday, June 28th, the County Clerk's Office will close at noon. Those having business at this office will please "tune" in on this.

As a result of the study of the price trends of ten crops and five classes of livestock and livestock products for the last five years, the national Industrial Conference board has come to the conclusion that while those things which the farmers buy has increased more than 100 per cent in price in 1920 over 1914 and stood about 86 per cent higher in 1923, the value of an acre of his crops stood only 31 per cent higher than in 1914. Furthermore, the purchasing value was only 71 per cent of the 1914 value. These figures are not only inaccurate but have been compiled on very conservative data, and not designed to "fool oneself."

For several years the view has been widespread that the farmer has been bearing his share of the burden of contributing toward the support of the federal, state and local governments. It will doubtless come as a surprise to many economists as well as authorities on agriculture, to learn that as a matter of fact the farmer appears to be overtaxed rather than undertaxed. The conference board in its exhaustive analysis on tax burdens and exemptions, finds that as a matter of fact the American farmer is paying more than his share of the nation's tax bill, and has been for some time.

While spring lambs have been commanding good prices so far this summer, farmers are seemingly anxious to get them to market now and not waiting for the lambs to get ready. Most of the lambs that have been marketed to date have been lighter than the pockers like and therefore have not commanded the best prices. Lambs have been back ward this year and it is quite likely that a large per cent of them will be marketed during the latter half of July and August.

WILLIAM BLANTON RYLE.

William Blanton Ryle, son of David and Minerva Nelson Ryle, was born January 31, 1861, died June 12, 1924, aged 63 years, 4 months and 11 days, having spent his entire life within a few miles of his birth place.

He was a member of one of the old pioneer families, his ancestors being among the very first to settle in what is now Boone county.

He was engaged in farming and stock raising until a few years ago, when failing health compelled him to give up his business and sell his farm. Lately he has made his home with Colin Riggs and his mother, Mrs. Charity Louden, near what is known as "Kelly's Cross Roads," where he was faithfully cared for through a long and painful sickness. He was a modest unassuming gentleman, a man of integrity whose home was never questioned.

Funeral services were held at East Bend M. E. church, Saturday, June 12th, Rev. Mr. Broadwell, of Rising Sun, officiating.

He had been a member of East Bend Lodge No. 114, Knights of Pythias, and the ceremonies of that order were performed at the grave, after which he was laid to rest beside his life-long chum and friend of other days, Ben R. Stephens, who preceded him to the grave about six months.

The great crowd present was a fitting tribute of the neighborhood to a life that had lived to a close.

He is survived by five brothers, John P. D. Murray, and Florence Ryle, of Rabbit Hash, and O. M. and Ed. Ryle, of Latonia. A large number of nephews and nieces and many other relatives. One by one they are passing to a better land.

R. T. S.

MARRIAGES.

HUEY—HUEY

Franklin Huey, 19, and Beatrice Huey, 19, both of Burlington, drove to Walton last Saturday evening, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Wilford Rouse, where they were quietly married by Rev. R. F. DeMoisey. The groom is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Huey of the Commissary neighborhood, while the bride is the eldest daughter of Joseph Huey and wife, of Burlington.

The bride attended Boone High School last year while the groom was graduated from that institution as a member of the class of 1923.

After the ceremony the happy young couple returned to the home of the groom's parents where they are now at home to their many friends.

These are two of Burlington's most highly respected young people and all unite in wishing for them everything that is best upon life's journey.

ACRA—SIEKMAN

Mr. Howard Acra, 25, and Miss Bessie Siekman, 19, were married last Saturday evening at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Siekman, of Francesville.

The young couple marched out upon the front porch to the strains of a beautiful wedding march played by Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd McGlasson, where in the presence of about three hundred guests Rev. H. C. Runyan, of Latonia Christian church, united them in the holy bonds of wedlock.

After the ceremony an elegant lunch was served on the front lawn.

The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Siekman of Burlington, and is a graduate of Boone High School and has taught school for the past few years, while the bride is one of the most popular young ladies of this section of Boone county.

The young people received a great number of valuable gifts from the guests that were present as well as from many others.

They will be at home for the time being with the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Siekman.

A young couple giving their names as Chauncey McCune and Hazel D. Bolt, both of Columbus, Ohio, obtained a marriage license at the County Clerk's office last Saturday morning. They were married by Rev. W. W. Adams, local minister.

BOONE HI SCHOOL PRINCIPAL

AND ASSISTANT EMPLOYED

The County Board of Education at its meeting last Thursday employed Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Hook, who taught in the Bradfordville High School last year, as principal and assistant respectively of the Boone High School for the coming year. These people are coming to us highly recommended and in their own words "they intend to be one of us."

What we hear of these people is not what we know of Burlington people they will leave nothing undone toward making them feel at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Hook are now taking some special work at State University, Lexington, the better to be prepared for their work here the coming term.

BENEFITS OF TOWN PICNIC

Community picnics may be looked at as nothing more than fun making times where every one has a jolly day. Perhaps though, they go deeper into the community life than a great many people realize.

There is one thing that they do accomplish, and that is to break down cliques and social lines. There is too much tendency for people to associate only with small circles of friends, and to remain more or less strangers with those outside their own little groups. A good community picnic breaks up these artificial groupings, and turns the people loose to enjoy each other on a broader scale.

The effect must be to break down some jealousies and prejudices that often exist. In many towns it is difficult to promote general community movements, because people are not well acquainted with each other and do not work well with those outside their own little customary groups. After a good town picnic where all the groups have merged together, it ought to be easier to promote town movements for the benefit of everyone.

These are times when there are many changes in population, newcomers moving in, and many of these folks are looking for a chance to get better acquainted. Some people of a naturally reserved nature will live in a town for years and not make many friends. They are desirous of wider friendships, but dislike to push themselves ahead and take the initiative.

A town picnic is a wonderful thing for bringing these folks together and helping them to break down the lines of formality, and new friends and pleasant associations result. Let it be hoped that we have some pleasant community events of this kind in Boone county this summer. The young crowd enjoy these occasions, and when they come home after a jolly day at such times, they think this is a pretty good place to live in.

MRS. S. M. CHILDRESS DIES.

Mrs. Mollie Sue Childress, 48 years old, wife of Leonard L. Childress, rural mail carrier and a sister-in-law of Judge Henry W. Childress, of the Erlanger (Ky.) Police Court, died Saturday afternoon at her home, Grace Ave., Erlanger. Mrs. Childress was prominent in church and society work. She had lived in Erlanger 25 years. Besides her husband she is survived by three daughters, Mrs. August Adams, Chicago; Miss Statira Childress, Erlanger. Funeral services were conducted Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock by Rev. A. S. Cuts, pastor of the Erlanger Baptist church. Burial in Highland cemetery.

BIRTHDAY DINNER

Mr. and Mrs. John Feeley entertained last Sunday in honor of Mr. Feeley's 48th birthday. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Gulley, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Pettit and children, Rev. and Mrs. W. W. Adams, C. N. York, Mrs. Cad Sullivan and children, Mr. L. R. McNeely and family, R. Lee Huey of Big Bone, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Gaines, Mr. Harold Gaines and family, Mr. Jos. Feeley, of Cincinnati, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hall. That Mr. and Mrs. Feeley are past master and mistress in the art of entertaining all present will readily testify.

HOME DESTROYED BY FIRE

Dorsey Anderson's home on Elijah creek was totally destroyed by flames last Tuesday night about 8 o'clock. Mr. Anderson was away from home at the time and the conflagration was not discovered by the neighbors in time to save either the dwelling or any of the contents. We are not informed as to the insurance. The origin of the fire was unknown.

PLAY GIVEN AT HEBRON

The Camp Fire Girls journeyed to Hebron last Thursday evening where they presented their play "The Call of Wholes" before an appreciative crowd in the new building at that place. The girls were well pleased with their trip and had nothing but praise for the treatment they received at the hands of the Hebron people.

CARD OF THANKS

We desire to express our thanks and appreciation to the friends and neighbors and K. of P.'s who so kindly and faithfully ministered to the cure and comfort of our brother, W. B. Ryle, in his last illness, and for their services to his death.

HIS BROTHERS

Paradoxical as it may seem, yet it is none the less a fact that for the last 120 years the Republican or the Whig or the old Federalist party never elected a president from the East with the single exception of Theodore Roosevelt in 1904. What is meant by the East is all this country lying along the Atlantic coast from New York to the Gulf of Mexico. What is meant by the West is the western boundary of Ohio and north of the Ohio river and East of the Mississippi. It takes in 21 states.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Porter entertained Monday evening with a Seven o'clock dinner in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brown. Others present were Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Cropper, Miss Mary Bess Cropper and Mr. John Lassing, Jr. A very pleasant evening was spent by all.

Corn planting has been rather seriously delayed, due to wet weather. However, with a suitable summer and fall all medium and early varieties of corn should mature well if planted within a reasonable time. Ninety day corn should mature if planted any time in June, if the fall is late.

The colored people held an all-day meeting at their church in Florence, last Sunday. It is said that the Town Marshall was kept so busy that he had to have a "sail" attached to himself in order to keep moving, and when he found time to rest he had the Sunday Enquirer convenient that he might read a few lines occasionally.

H. P. Wilson, wife and son, two of the good citizens of Union precinct, were Burlington visitors last Saturday afternoon, and attended W. L. Kirkpatrick's auction sale. While in town Mr. Wilson called at the Recorder office and renewed his subscription. They have been members of our reading circle many years and we thank them for their continued patronage.

Some three or four weeks ago B. E. Aylor, proprietor of Aylo's Poultry Farm, just north of Burlington, set a turkey egg, that he supposed was turkey egg, but he had the surprise of his life, when he went to make an investigation last Sunday, as to how the turkey hen was progressing, and found a nest full of fine Maltese kittens. You may think this is a little "kitchinsh," but all you have to do to verify the truthfulness of the story, is to call on Mr. Aylor, who will be delighted to show you his fine hatch.

ALL DAY MEETING AT BELLEVUE CHRISTIAN CHURCH

A large crowd enjoyed the splendid services at the Bellevue Christian church last Sunday which occupied the entire day. Special musical numbers were rendered by the boys and girls of the Bellevue Sunday school and the Circle Girls Glee Club of Petersburg. Rev. R. H. Carter delivered two splendid discourses on "Christ the Man of Nazareth" and "The Triangle--Faith, Loyalty, Service." Rev. B. H. Bush, local Baptist minister was present and heartily joined with Bro. Carter in helping to make the day successful. At the noon hour a bountiful dinner was served on the church lawn which it is needless to say, was heartily enjoyed by everyone.

INSTANTLY KILLED

Sam See, 35, an employee of the United States Engineers' Department was killed instantly Monday while on his way to work on Government Dam 38, at McVillie. He stepped out of his automobile near the Dam to lift a wire out of the way of his car. The wire, which was lying across the road, evidently was charged with high voltage for he was electrocuted instantly. See had been in charge of the construction work at the Dam for three years and had made his home in Rising Sun during that period. A widow and several small children survive him.

NOTICE.

The Boone County National Farm Loan Association is now taking applications for loans and expects to close the class within the next two weeks.

Any farmer desiring a long time loan at 5 1/2 per cent please call on the Secretary-Treasurer and fill out an application immediately.

A. B. RENAKER, Secretary-Treasurer, Burlington, Ky.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. J. Allen, of the Pt. Pleasant neighborhood were the guests of Mr. Allen's sister, Mrs. S. S. Crisler and Mr. Crisler, last Wednesday. Mr. Allen paid his respects to the Recorder office while in town and handed us $3.00 to renew his subscription and that of his daughter, Mrs. Mayhugh, of Saylor Park, Ohio. These good people have been readers of this paper for many years and are numbered among the Recorder's good friends. Mr. Allen will reach his seventy-sixth mile post in life's journey if he lives until next August. He moved to the farm on which he now resides fifty-four years ago, and is numbered among the county's best farmers, and notwithstanding his more than three score years he looks after and supervises the work on the farm. We thank them for holding on to their seats in the old reliable family reading circle, and hope they may live to enjoy its weekly visit many more years.

Mrs. John Baldon, who was operated upon at Deaconess hospital, Cincinnati, two weeks ago, spent Saturday and Sunday with her sister, Mrs. W. R. Davalville. She returned to the hospital Monday morning for further X-Ray treatment, before returning to her home at Bowling Green, Ky. Miss Irene Kirkpatrick expects to return home with her where she will spend the summer.

Prof. E. E. Snoddy, head of the Philosophy Department of Transylvania University, will be at Petersburg from July 6th to July 19th inclusive, where he will deliver a course of lectures on the New Testament at the Christian church.

The charge preferred by me, in the Boone County Court, against Herman Batchelor, has been dismissed. I found upon investigation that the charge was false and that Herman Batchelor was innocent, and that some person had induced my daughter Sadie McCarty to make the charge against him.

Witness my hand this 17th day of June, 1924.

ANOTHER CROSSES THE SILENT RIVER.

Saturday June 14, 1924, a shadow of gloom was cast over this community when the Death Angel came and took from our midst the life of our friend and neighbor Mrs. Agnes Tanner Walton. Mrs. Walton had been a sufferer for 28 months with the dreaded disease tuberculosis, bearing her suffering very patiently and trying to be bright for those about her. The deceased was born May 21st, 1888, aged 36 years and 24 days, and was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Tanner. June 19th, 1907, she was united in marriage to Ira L. Walton, son of the late J. H. Walton. Sept. 13, 1908 Mrs. Walton united with the Pt. Pleasant Christian church under Rev. R. H. Carter. The deceased leaves to mourn her departure husband, mother, father, an aunt and uncle B. H. Tanner and wife, who raised her from childhood, five sisters, Mrs. Wm. Tupmar, Mrs. Kittle Darby, Mrs. Arthur McDuffy, Mrs. Clyde Arnold, Miss Maebel Tanner, one brother J. Kenneth Tanner a grandmother, Mrs. Frances Clutterbuck and many other friends and relatives. In compliance with her request the funeral service was conducted by Rev. H. C. Runyan at Hopeful church on Tuesday at 2 p. m., after which the body was borne to its last resting place in Hopeful cemetery by the pall-bearers whom she selected. The husband and other relatives have the sympathy of the community in this their hour of sorrow. One by one they cross the silent river. Some at morning, some at noonday. Others at the sunset of life. To the sunny vales of Eden, Where all is happiness, peace and light.

A FRIEND

Two young couples, one from Delaware, Ind., and the other from Lawrenceburg, Ind., applied at the County Clerk's office, Monday morning for marriage licenses, but on account of the would be brides being under age, were refused. Instead of returning to their parents' dwellings they left town headed toward Covington.

The revival at the Union Baptist church closed June 16th with twenty-two additions.

Mrs. Bernard McNeely spent last Thursday with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Horton.

Mrs. Bryan Aylor and son, and Mrs. J. A. Miller and baby spent one day the past week with Mrs. Albert Sheets.

The Y. W. A. supper given at Grange Hall last Saturday night was quite a success, there being a very large crowd present.

Linnie Love is building a new house, having torn down his old one. Mr. Thos. Roberts, of Bellevue, is in charge of the work.

Mrs. Floyd Chipman returned to her home on the Dixie Highway last Thursday after several days' visit with Miss Lillian Butler.

All are cordially invited to attend the ice cream supper to be given by the Y. W. A. of Big Bone Baptist church Saturday evening, July 5th, at which ice cream, cake, lemonade, etc., will be served. A feature of the evening will be a contest for the most popular girl, the winner to receive a prize.

The presidential campaign this year will be a great political battle between two great political parties struggling for political mastery and it would be truthful for the truth's sake must candidly admit that it will be a doubtful contest and a case in which the longest pole will knock the persimmon.

Special Correspondent of the R.E. CORDER

THE REPUBLICAN CAMPAIGN to keep Coolidge in the White House and to bring the irrepressible Daves to Washington to preside over the Senate gets under way just as the Democrats are tugging toward New York to name their candidate. At this writing it is years that neither McAdoo nor Smith can win the nomination—that they will wear each other out in the opening balloting at Madison Square Garden and will then have to agree on a dark horse so that the weary delegates can get away from the high priced hotels and go home. John W. Davis and Samuel Kalston are suggested as likely compromise candidates.

THE FAMOUS "Old Guard" of the Republican Party is relegated to the rear and then some in the organization. They have all felt the Coolidge axe, wielded by the forceful, not clever Butler, and they have taken their medicine. Many of them are resentful and their resentment will flare up time and time again against the Massachusetts manufacturer who displaced them in the command of their party.

MARION LEROY BURTON, the Michigan college president, who nominated Mr. Coolidge in the Cleveland convention is destined for a public office should the Republican ticket be successful in November. It is said here that the President would like to see him at the head of the proposed federal Department of Education and Welfare, endorsed in the Republican platform and provided for in the pending plan for reorganization of the governmental machinery.

ALL THE BITING phraseology at the command of these Democratic leaders skilful with the pen will be brought into play at the New York convention in drafting the platform. The first complete platform which will be laid before the Democratic Committee on Resolutions came from the hand of Carter Glass, the Junior Senator from Virginia. It was Glass's platform that the San Francisco convention adopted four years ago before nominating McAdoo and the Virginia Senator has hopes that he will again be successful. Denunciation of the Republicans for official corruption will feature the Democratic platform and a flat claim will be made for credit from the people for effecting substantial tax reduction.

HAVING VETOED the soldiers bonus bill, President Coolidge is now trying to set himself right with those who opposed his position on that measure by insisting that the Government lose no time in administering the law despite the fact that Congress has made no money available for that purpose. Cabinet officials concerned with the bonus have been ordered to disregard Congress and cut red tape so there will be no delay in getting the bonus-insurance certificates to the soldiers.

SENATOR LAFOLLETTE is attracting almost as much interest in Washington as the President. Everyone expects the Wisconsin insurgent to run for the Presidency. He is only waiting for the Democratic convention to adopt his platform before he blossoms forth as a full-fledged candidate. Endorsement of LaFollette for President is looked for by the Conference for Progressive Political Action, which meets in national convention at Cleveland, Ohio, on July 4th. The Wisconsin Senator has been invited to address this convention. He may take this opportunity to sound his own keynote.

SPLIT WIDE OPEN on nearly all public questions, the Republicans and Democrats are in agreement upon at least one issue this year and that a very important one. The Republican platform endorsed the Harding-Hughes world court plan, and this is the one supported by the Democrats in the Senate, who proposed it after Republican Senators had turned down the Harding plan which had President Coolidge's approval. The chief difference is that the Democrats will demand complete adherence to the covenant of the League of Nations.

More than a dozen congressional investigations, embracing a wide range of subjects will go on here during the summer. This unsavory condition of public affairs would indicate that honest men are a scarce article in our national business office.

President Coolidge is spending his summer in Washington, so that an experienced man will be in charge of laying on the White House lawn.

CAMPAIGN FOR BETTER SIREN WELL STARTED.

Rhoads Says He Hopes to see Kentucky in Second Place in Nation by Middle of Summer.

Lexington, Ky.—The Federal Department of Agriculture jointly with the College of Agriculture and with Wayland Rhoads in charge of the work in this state have been carrying on a campaign in Kentucky to promote the use of purebred sires instead of scrub sires in all livestock breeding.

In the first quarter of the campaign for 1924 Kentucky is in the third place with Ohio and Virginia second in the number of persons enrolled. Mr. Rhoads says he hopes to see Kentucky go to second place by the middle of summer and to the first place by October.

The campaign is carried on by the various county agents under the supervision of Mr. Rhoads. W. R. Gubbert is the county agent for Fayette. The duties of the agent are to call meetings and arrange programs for them, to provide for the showing of motion pictures and slides and to receive interest in the campaign in every possible way.

Counties which have held campaigns for one week or longer this year are:

Fayette, Crittenden, Graves, Caldwell, Campbell, Boone, Boyle, Washington, Pulaski, Garrard and Jefferson. Jefferson's campaign is especially notable having been going on for six weeks.

RIGHT.

Many have heard the story of the man who was frightened to death by practical jokes. They tied him to a chair, gagged him, put his feet in warm water, told him they were going to cut the soles of his feet and let him bleed to death. The water was colored red and the dull edge of a razor blade was passed across the soles of his bare feet, and the man, believing that he was bleeding to death, actually died of heart failure.

That was a foolish joke, but not nearly so foolish as some of the tricks that we allow to be played on ourselves.

It is not necessary to go through such an elaborate program to frighten some of us, especially where business is concerned.

Let someone wave the red flag of business depression across the horizon and the timid souls run to cover. Prosperity is straightway frightened to death.

The same old "bunk" is used every time. Some pessimist surmises that this is election year and therefore business will be "bunk." It's an old superstition that belongs in the limbo of witchcraft, but so many unthinking souls accept it for truth every four years that it continues to operate to the detriment of business.

Elections do not hurt business, but business men think they do and therefore they do.

The result is that prosperity is frightened to death. But there's no reason for it. The next time someone says the election is strangulating business, don't look serious and agree—laugh at them.

WOMEN N CONVENTIONS

Whatever else may be said of the atmosphere of this year's Republican convention is higher than that of any of its long list of ancestors. There was less drinking than at any previous party convention, there was no smoking and the presence of so many women added a tone hitherto unknown.

It is a question whether the dryness of the proceedings of which there was a chorus of complaint—is not due in part to the lessening influence of the women, and whether they'll not serve in part to ballast in the future those ebullitions dear to every convention-goer. Women are notably absent from the demonstration around the sitting Wisconsin delegates.

Will women stampede, sheik in enthusiasm, forget all their customary quietness of four years to join in a typical convention outburst every presidential year? Maybe. They didn't start it in Cleveland; perhaps they will in New York. Or perhaps their long experience in unimpassioned club work and their natural sense of decorum will lay a restraining hand upon them. If it does, then a change is come over national political conventions dating from this one.

SUCCESS OF CO-OPERATIVE MARKETING

The price for potatoes obtained by the Maine potato growers exchange for the first year of its existence is stated to be twice what it was the year before, with an increase in value of the crops to the country estimated at $3,000,000 to $7,000,000. Also the price remained more stable through the season.

The worst difficulty with marketing as it has frequently been conducted by unorganized producers, has been that great quantities of their crops have been dumped on the market early in the season, thus pushing the price way down. What is needed is some system for regulating the delivery of the product, so that it will come on the market as the consumers can use it and pay a fair price for it.

UREY WOODSON

The best thing that the Democratic convention did this week at Lexington was the recommendation of Hon. Urey Woodson, the able and fearless editor of the Owensboro Messenger, as national committee-man from Kentucky who has rendered more able and untiring service to the Democratic party than has Mr. Woodson. He is a nationally known figure and with him at the helm again, it will mean that Kentucky will be more than a passive figure at the meetings of the national committee. Mr. Woodson was a member of the committee from Kentucky for twenty years and during that time his ability was recognized by the committee, for his services were drafted by the powers of the party, who made of him the secretary of the national Democratic committee, a position that he filled with marked success—in fact, he was one of the three or four members of the committee that did practically all of the directing of the party's affairs. It augurs well for the party that he is to again be a member of the national committee from the state of Kentucky, and the Advocate congratulates the far-sightedness of the state convention in the choice of such an invaluable man as Editor Woodson.—Col. W. V. Richardson in Danville (Ky.), Advocate.

Col. W. V. Richardson,
Danville, Kentucky,
Dear Colonel:

It was fine to read in the Danville Advocate your tribute to an old and devoted friend, Mr. Urey Woodson, who, I understand from the editorial, has recently been selected as a member of the Democratic National Committee. In my eight years at the White House, there was no man more constantly on the "burning line" for the cause of our party than Urey Woodson and no one showed more devotion to the cause of our party. He never came seeking favors for himself nor did he desire office or honor for himself. When the Kentucky Democratic honors him, it puts to the forefront one who has many devoted and loyal friends throughout the country. The fact that he has been reelected has given delight and happiness to his friends.

May I congratulate you on the generous tribute you paid him in your editorial.

Sincerely Yours,

J. P. TUMULTY.

"It seems that every man engaged in a trade or profession a mile different from the common run looks on folks not familiar with his particular line as 'laymen,' and speaks of them as such. 'Waal, when ye come to figure it all out, everybody must be a layman to somebody else; so it ill behooves any man, no matter how skilled he may be in his own particular line, to hold too exalted an opinion of himself."

MAUDLIN

The rather distasteful word "maudlin," which means either drunken stupidity or tearful sentimentality, has an origin quite above its station. In reality, it is a contraction of "Mary Magdalen," whom artists depict as weeping continually. Although generally used as an adjective, maudlin is also a noun, which denotes a variety of yarrow or herb which grows in Europe. The pronunciation is "maud'lin."

STANDING BY PRINCIPLES

By THOMAS A. CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

It's a test of character for a young fellow to stand by his principles, especially if they are of that old-fashioned kind that have respect for self-control and religion. Worthington found it so when he went to work for the first time in the city. He had come from the country and he was still old-fashioned in some ways. It took nerve to say his prayers while some unregenerate sinner giggled, or to start off for church or Sunday school while the other fellows were either in bed or sitting around in their pajamas reading the Sunday paper. It wasn't easy always to admit that he didn't smoke or to refuse approval when a smart young clerk cracked a vulgar joke, and, as I said, it was a test of character and a test which too many dunks.

Every one admires the man who stands by his principles even when he is loath to admit it. If he laughs or makes light of your respect for religion or your regard for a clean tongue and a clean life, it is merely to bolster his own weakness or to test your sincerity. He respects you if you stand and displace your weakness if you lack the courage of your convictions.

When Jimmy Hunter "got religion" during one of the evangelistic campaigns conducted at his college years ago, he knew perfectly well that he'd have to say his prayers openly. When he thought of what "Butch" Wheeler, big, blasphemous and agnostic, would say and do, his heart sank, but he stood by his principles and knelt down by the bed in the dormitory, his body trembling and his lips dumb. Some body laughed. But it was "Butch" who thunders out, "Be quiet, Jimmy's doing what he thinks is right, and what some of us, perhaps would be better off if we did. If any man interferes, he'll wish he hadn't." And quiet reigned.

If there were 50 men or women with force and with moral and religious backbone, they could revolutionize almost any community—even this one in fact. It isn't necessary to talk or preach much. All that is needed is to go ahead and lead your life quietly, soberly, without shame and in accordance with the principles you know are right. It's example that counts most.

Memorial Day in Paris

The sixth Memorial day since the armistice to commemorate the memory of the 30,000 American heroes resting in French soil was observed throughout France. The picture shows Americans placing a wreath on the tomb of the unknown French soldier at the Arc de Triomphe.

BETTER TIMES AHEAD FOR THE FARMER

Experts say that important problems are confronting agriculture. It is estimated that the population of the United States will be near 150,000,000 souls within twenty-five years and these experts are wondering where the food they will eat is coming from.

Conservatively estimated, it is said that 38,000,000 acres will have to be added to the nation's present actual crop land to support a population that the United States will probably have by 1950.

That can mean only one thing—that the demand for products of the farm is going to increase constantly and that the consequent reduction of supply will operate for the benefit of the farmers of the United States.

The tillers of the soil everywhere have been downcast and heavy of heart. Being dropped suddenly out of a cloud of affluence that came with the war and remained for a few years afterwards, it is little wonder that farmers became discouraged at the sudden change which took away their war profits and made it practically impossible to make much more than a living off their land.

But they should not be too impatient. The troubles that have beset agriculture for the past few years are going to pass, and when they do, agriculture is going to come into its rightful place in the business world, such as it never did before.

It is but natural to reason that in due time, farm products are going to become scarce on account of farms being abandoned and farmers being attracted to the higher wages of the industrial centers. This condition, combined with increased demand due to the constantly growing population, means better times ahead.

The depression is only temporary. The law of compensations is going to bring the pendulum back.

All farmers need to do is to be optimistic and keep pegging away. There is a better day coming—and when it comes, the tiller of the soil is going to be sitting on top of the world where he belongs.

A PARADOX

A writer in a big city newspaper says that business men have few flowers for Congress and its tax law, but that judged by the standards of the parliaments of other great nations, congress has done some good things and not many foolish ones.

He points out that Germany, France and England are on the verge of a business precipice, with business issues at stake that would raise the hair of business in America, and that if the United States were operating on the European plan, we might have Brookhart or Heflin for president today, because the government has been defeated on the soldiers' bonus, Japanese exclusion and the Mellon tax reform.

The conclusion is somewhat of a paradox. Congress is not entitled to any credit for the stability of our government, as compared with the hectic governments of Europe.

If it were left to congress, someone of the Brookhart or Heflin stripe would be president, if congressists to be judged by the way it has voted.

But fortunately, our constitution does not permit calling an election every time a "crisis" arises or the president is not supported by congress. If it did, we would never know when we got up in the morning who our president was.

We in the United States have the good fortune to have been started right by a group of wise and far-seeing men, who understood the tyranny of a minority, an example of which we have just seen in congress.

Of course, congress did a few good things, not the least of which was the defeat of the Muscle Shoals and the McNary-Haagen bills, both of which proposed unwarranted raids on the treasury at a time when the popular demand was for economy in government and tax reduction.

Ford car No. 100,000,000 was completed at the Detroit factory on June 4. The last million cars were manufactured in 1 1/2 working days.

PAMPERED CHILDREN

Most people will be quick to point to the moral in the slaying of young Robert Franks of Chicago by the sons of two Chicago millionaires, who did not offer any real motive for the crime in their confessions.

And none will be wrong in pointing to the moral—for its lesson is one that is needed in every household where there are children.

In this instance, two young men not yet of age, both college graduates and one of them unusually brilliant, with everything that money could buy, brutally murdered a defenseless boy.

Whatever their motive may have been, the fact stands out that they were pampered sons of the rich and they committed a deed that is very likely the logical development of their environment, their mode of thinking and their superficial ideas of life.

Doubtless they have been reared in surroundings that have led them to believe that anything was theirs for the asking.

They had lived the life that they knew to the fullest and have found it empty. Then they sought new thrills, which ended so disastrously.

Pampered boys and girls are the incorrigible boys and girls. Children whose every whim is satisfied and passing fancy gratified, with few exceptions, are the children who come to grief sooner or later.

No matter to what estate they may be born, children have to be restrained and directed by persons wiser in experience and older in years.

The boys who have a free rein are on the road to the same destiny that now holds these two Chicago boys, in its death grip—perhaps not a destiny so fatal, but one that will bring pain and sorrow.

Thoughtful parents will regard this terrible tragedy as a possibility for any boy or girl who are permitted to do as they please and will be guided accordingly.

SPEAKING FOUR INCHES FROM TELEPHONE MAKES LINE 200 MILES LONGER.

To talk "at" the telephone, instead of in or thru it, is still the practice of some people. To speak with the mouth held four inches from the receiver is equivalent to lengthening the line more than 200 miles, according to data gathered by the Kentucky Committee on Public Utility Information. To speak two inches from the telephone is equal to lengthening the wire 128 miles. Loud or high-pitched voices cannot be as readily understood over the telephone as those of lower pitch. All of these facts have been disclosed by a long series of tests designed to determine how telephone users themselves may contribute to the efficiency of service.

Lace and Ostrich Compete in the Millinery Field

Competing with ostrich in the millinery field is lace. The two combine in this charming model. Covering the crown with lace as the picture shows, is one way of emphasizing its value. That a shoulder-ribbon of ostrich converts a small fashioned shape into a truly picture hat is demonstrated in this pretty midsummer chaparral.

The Chinese bandits have been on another rampage, but they are still unable to keep pace with the New York variety.

The kind of presidential candidate most people would like to vote for is the one who cares more for the nation than the nomination.

Cloche Continues to Be Fashion's Favorite

That Madame Fashion is not selfish is evidenced in this little cloche, for this bonnet-like type continues to be her favorite. The advent, this season of gay silk print into the millinery field, such as covers the brim and bands the crown of this model adds to the charm of many a chaparral. Note also the hand dyed and matched silken scarf about the neck. Everybody's wearing them!

MAY INCREASE MAIL RATES

The postoffice employees are not dismayed or discouraged because of the veto of their revised salary bill by President Coolidge. They are satisfied the bill would have been passed over the veto had it not been for the filibuster conducted by Senators Spencer and Pittman to prevent a vote.

The postal salary will again come up on the reconvening of Congress next December. In the mean time, the ascertainment of the cost of carrying the various classes of postal matter now being conducted by the Post Office Department under a congressional appropriation of $500,000 will in all probability be completed during the summer or fall. The results of the investigation by the department of the subcommittee will show that an increase in certain postal matter will be justified, and that this in turn will provide the funds for the payment of the salary increase. It is also pointed out that the normal increase of 10 per cent per annum in the business of the postoffice will more than pay the increase in salaries.

Congress will say its final valedictory next March, but it will have to pass a better examination than it did at the recent session or it will get no diplomas.

Possibly some folks about now would need a vacation more if they had not been taking one right along through the year.

The public remains reconciled to the adjournment of Congress, but there would be a terrible howl if the ball leagues stopped.

Trouble, worry and eczema are three things that are not helped any by scratching them.

New Record for Women

Miss Nancy Aten of Drake university, a freshman who clipped one-tenth of a second off the former women's national college record for the 65-yard hurdles in the national telegraphic meet recently held at Des Moines, Iowa.

NOW IS THE TIME.

Now is the time that young men, attending High School, or having just graduated are making their plans for the future. They are at the cross roads of life, where it is necessary for them to weigh and balance all presentations made to them so that their future will be secure. Some of them are not able financially to take a college course and enter one of the learned professions, many can not take their diploma and step into an established business where their advancement is assured and guaranteed. It means that many will either drift through life, or get a job in one place and stick to it until they are superannuated.

By law, each Senator, Representative and Delegate in Congress is allowed to appoint three men from his district each year as candidates to the United States Naval Academy, Annapolis, Maryland where their future is guaranteed, where if they fully meet the requirements, they can obtain the best college course in the world, and education which will cost the government approximately $40,000 for each graduate, and upon graduation be commissioned an officer in the U. S. Navy with an increased future.

The pay while attending this college is $800 per year, adequate to pay all expenses with a good deal left over.

The law also provides that there shall be appointed each year to the Naval Academy, one hundred (100) young men from the enlisted strength of the Navy.

The requirements for this appointment are that you must have been an enlisted man for one year by August 15th, and must be under 20 years of age on April the first of the entering year. In other words, a boy who is under nineteen April this year who enlisted before August 14, will be eligible for next year's class. Further an examination must be passed which is competitive in its nature, as only one hundred may be appointed, but so far, the allowed number has never been equaled so that it is merely a question of passing the examination. Men applying for permission to take the examination are given preliminary examination and if qualified are given an intensive course of study at a training station under qualified instructors from about November first until date of final examinations.

Our government is very desirous of obtaining eligible candidates for the Naval Academy for next year in order to insure filling the one hundred vacancies for midshipmen from the enlisted personnel, and has directed all of its Naval Recruiting Stations to fully explain to all prospective applicants for enlistment who have in mind trying for the Naval Academy or who appear to be qualified to go there, the feature of this offer.

THE VALUE OF ALCOHOL

A perpetual debate is going on as to how far alcohol has value physiologically. A committee of highly qualified British scientists and experts has been investigating this question, and a report of their findings was published in 1918, which has now been revised. So it should conform to the latest value in allaying excitement and distress, it has a limited food value under conditions when ordinary nourishment can not be taken, and it may ward off the effects of chills.

But on the other hand, it is held to be unfavorable to longevity, even if taken moderately. It weakens the power of resistance to certain infections, and its use is held not to be essential in any condition. It removes in varying degrees the normal mental control of thoughts and actions. On the whole the verdict of these scientists is against the use of alcoholic beverages.

Cooking lessons are being given by radio, but no one has improved on the pie mother used to make.

THE NEWSPAPER.

There is no greater responsibility than that resting upon the editor of a newspaper. The late Dr. Talmage said: "The newspaper is the great educator of the nineteenth century. There is no force compared with it. It is book habit, platform, forum, all in one. And there is not an intellectual-religious, literary, commercial, scientific, agricultural or mechanical—that is not within its grasp. All our churches, and schools, and colleges, and asylums and art galleries, feel the quaking of the printing press."

Every man who has anything to do with the making of a newspaper should take special pride in giving it a character for truth and wisdom. "I saw it for the newspaper" ought to be sufficient evidence of the truth of an assertion.

But newspapers are human institutions and are good or bad, in precise proportion to the character of their makers. Some are avaricious and look at all questions through the business office, some are timid and sycophantic and some are weak and foolish. To put them all in a class would be as unjust as to put all men in the same class.

The world would be a stupider place to live in if it were not for the newspapers, and it would also be a much more cruel and tyrannical world. Besides, the newspaper inspires heroism, patriotism philanthropy and integrity. When the newspaper becomes a traitor to its trust, and the people lose faith in its sincerity, God help the republic!

THE COATLESS QUESTION

Now that genuine summer weather has arrived, hung up its hat, and announced its intentions of staying a while, the question of coat versus shirtwaist once more rears its head.

The women retain the proud privilege of wearing the shirtwaist obsequiously. For church or shopping or evening party the shirtwaist is in vogue for femininity and, apparently always will be.

The man who would venture to remove his coat in church would be looked upon as mentally deficient, and fashionable hotels and restaurants will not countenance his presence.

Regular pastors, sweltering in their heavy black frocks, often envy the Rev. Billy Sunday who not only removes his coat in mixed audiences, but also collar and dress shirt when talking to men only. But, then, he is an evangelist and is answerable to no one.

Court judges cling to precedent no less resolutely than the clergy. Some courts refuse permission to twelfth jurors to remove their coats while others encourage it.

With the exception of church and court room, there are few places where a man could not wear his shirtwaist, and coat, if he really wished to do so, but it is man himself who is responsible for the popular attitude toward his mode of apparel. If the shirtwaist men were numerous enough, he would meet with no opposition. The women are not greatly concerned over his fashions, so it is question for man himself to settle.

Humiliating as may be the confession, man is the prize sartorial coward.

Woman has nerve enough to adopt the most outlandish and hideous fashions which human ingenuity can conceive, but the lords of creation don't dare to take up a new style that's sensible.

It's a man's own fault that he's conventional rather than comfortable.

SCHOLARSHIP PRIZES

One of the pleasing features of the closing exercises of schools and colleges is the announcement of prizes for success in scholarship. In this age when the successful athlete gets much more glory than the successful student, it is a mighty thing when a substantial reward is offered to the successful scholar. The practical aid given by a money prize is less important than the prestige offered to good academic work.

Many such prizes are offered by colleges and private schools. It would be a fine thing if an equal number could be offered at public school graduations, so that the young people could all realize how much the public values good faithful work in the subjects which the schools were established to teach.

CO-OPERATION FROM THE CHILDREN.

In many cities Boy Scouts and other organizations of boys and girls are enlisted to help in community enterprises. They distribute circulars and sell tickets for community events, help clean up rubbish, plant trees along the roads and in parks, report objectionable conditions that should have official attention.

The country town ought to organize its school children and young people to stand at the doors of the world waiting their turn to plunge in. He ought to feel that of gratitude to the old school and he must admit that much of his success was due to the helpful men and women who there started his life career right.

Formerly the farm hands had to get through work in season to get to the movies after supper. Now they will probably have to get through at 2 o'clock so as to get the afternoon auto parking.

NEAR EAST RELIEF.

Ten thousand innocent children, over one orphan, 60 per cent less than 10 years of age—turned out of an institution over which floats an American flag—turned out to starve and die or become outcasts in a desolate land.

Sounds cruel and inhuman, doesn't it? Yet this is the verdict of the national executive committee of Near East Relief now being broadcasted to every corner of Kentucky—a verdict not yet executed but will be on July 1 unless—well, it depends on the generosity of sympathetic Kentucky folks as well as other red-blooded Americans, according to Miss Beth Higgins, state director of Near East Relief.

The tragedy may be averted if Christian folks will open purses a bit wider during the month of June, says Dean R. L. McCready, state Chairman. The dean says that persons with whom he has talked who have visited the Bible lands and have seen the happy contented children who are being helped by Kentucky, feel that to turn even one of them away from America's protecting shelter would be a tragedy.

Dr. John R. Mott, secretary of the international Y. M. C. A., has just returned from Bible lands. He had frankly stated regarding relief work in the Near East, "I do not know of any enterprise of its kind which has set a better example of self-help and support than has the Near East Relief. If American people could see what I have seen during the last few months there would be no doubt whatever about the adequate support of the great work."

Kentucky will have its annual Bundle Day the week of June 29, to help clothe orphans and refugees of the Near East Bible lands. Any kind of cast-off clothing is needed, according to Near East Relief headquarters, 940 South 4th St., Louisville, Ky.

"Children overseas will suffer next winter unless citizens of Kentucky give their old garments generously," says a statement from the relief committee.

UNEXPECTED RESULTS FROM ADVERTISING.

Printers' Ink tells how a comparatively small grower of celery who made a small try at advertising, came out as the result of his effort. An advertising man passing on a vacation on this man's plantation and got interested in pushing his product. He induced him to prepare special labels for his boxes, special bands for individual stalks, to print some illustrated booklets. He originated a trade paper, and tried out a limited newspaper campaign in only two cities.

The celery grower thus described the result: "That business of ours has just jumped up, the same as light crops do in the Everglades muck-almost overnight. I'm more interested in advertising now than in raising celery."

A great many people who have never advertised much would be equally surprised if they would try it out. They need not spend any very large sum of money, nor take any very big space in the paper. The main thing is to pick out some special lines that they feel have exceptional merit, put in a brief description of them, state why they are believed to be of superior value, and then quote prices.

Every seller or producer of merchandise has such special opportunities to offer. He can go through every section of it, and pick out things that look to him particularly good, which he takes pride in offering as the result of his enterprise and judgment and experience. He will sell them to his best friends, knowing that they will be pleased with them, and feel he has done them a service in attracting their attention to these lines of goods.

Now if he will pick out a few of these articles or lines, and tell the public about them in a few terse words, not fancy language, nor flowery writing, but just plain every day talk, and quote the prices on them, he can hardly help getting results.

THE RETURN OF THE ALUMNI.

It is a moment of both joy and sadness when the graduate of a school or college returns to reunions or commencement exercises of his alma mater. There is a note of pathos in the thought of vanished time. If he has gone on many years, he has dropped something of the elasticity of youth.

At the same time, if he has rendered service to his community, he feels that he has advanced far beyond the point at which he stood in his class room days. If the years have been well lived, they have brought enriching friendships and broadening experiences. Great obstacles have been surmounted.

The years should have given him keen sympathy with the young people who stand at the doors of the world waiting their turn to plunge in. He ought to feel that of gratitude to the old school and he must admit that much of his success was due to the helpful men and women who there started his life career right.

Formerly the farm hands had to get through work in season to get to the movies after supper. Now they will probably have to get through at 2 o'clock so as to get the afternoon auto parking.

Coming week

THE BIG JR. CLUB CAMP

The Jr. Club Camp, which was such a big success last year, will be held at the Florence Fair Grounds, June 30 to July 4.

The camp will be held with the State Y. M. C. A., College of Agriculture co-operating. R. J. Matson and C. A. Wicklund, County Agents, in Boone and Kenton counties will be in charge of the camp and Ernest E. Fish of Lexington will be camp manager. Three men and three women from the College of Agriculture will be present as chaperones and instructors. There will also be a Red Cross Nurse, Y. M. C. A. men from Louisville, a local minister and leaders from the different communities at the camp throughout the week.

The camp is open to all regularly enrolled Jr. Agricultural Club members and their leaders. It affords one of the best weeks of educational and recreational value to which parents could possibly send their boys and girls. It affords a week's outing and at the same time much training of educational value is instilled. The mornings will be spent in exercises and classes and the afternoons in playing organized games and stunts.

Enrollments will be taken any time Monday, however those coming before dinner should bring a lunch with them as the first meal will be served Monday evening, after which several reels of motion pictures will be shown in the open.

The girls and women leaders will be housed in the dining room which is screened and will afford very comfortable quarters. The boys will have a section under the grand stand which has been prepared for them.

Thursday will be visitous day, when all parents are urged to attend and bring their friends. A special program is being arranged for that evening.

No boy or girl will be expected to leave the camp at any time without a chaperon and without permission from the Camp Manager.

Camp will break Friday morning. For further information call or address the Jr. Club Department at Lexington, your County Agent or the Farm Bureau.

STILL ANOTHER

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Kirkpatrick, one of the many newly wedded couples of this precinct, were thoroughly surprised last Monday evening when a number of their friends gave a shower party for them in the K. of P. hall in Burlington.

In order to play the game safe, Mr. Kirkpatrick's machine early in the evening so that he would be sure to be at home, which plan worked efficiently.

This party was instigated on short notice, but "Hubb's" many friends soon got the word and in less than an hour they were moving toward the hall from every direction. In fact the people of this vicinity have become so well trained for such frequent practice in the above pastime that they call to one's mind the famous "minute men of '76" by the instantaneous and systematic manner in which they answer these "shower" calls.

"Hubb's" keynote remark was that in the following of his chosen profession he had been "caught out" in many stories of all kinds, but that he was "caught out" in a "shower" he had encountered. He emphatically join with his many other friends in extending our very sincere and best wishes for a happy married life.

The county jail and the two parolees and capals on the entire house are receiving a coat of paint. Ed. Hawes and Alvin Brown are the brush artists. This is a new idea and grand idea. The annual show has been a great success.

THE FARMER GOES TO MARKET

TOTAL VALUE OF FARM PRODUCTS BY YEARS
1914	$9,895,000,000	1919	$23,787,000,000
1915	$10,775,000,000	1920	$18,328,000,000
1916	$13,406,000,000	1921	$12,402,000,000
1917	$18,331,000,000	1922	$14,604,000,000
1918	$22,480,000,000	1923	$16,064,000,000

During 1923 the American farmer carried over $16,064,000,000 worth of grain and live stock, dairy and poultry products, fruits and vegetables from the farm to the market. The total value of the nation's farm output was $14,000,000 more than the estimated value for 1922 and over $6,189,000,000 more than the value of the farm products in 1914.

In 1921 and 1922 the value of farm products was lower than any year since 1914 when the total was $18,408,000,000. With the entrance of the United States into the World War, prices for farm crops almost doubled in value. In 1917 the total value of farm products was $19,831,000,000, an increase of $5,925,000,000 over the previous year. In 1918 the value had reached $22,480,000,000 and in 1919 it was estimated at $23,787,000,000. In 1920 the total value of farm products decreased in the one year more than $5,406,000,000. In 1921 there was a still greater reduction, the total value having dropped to $12,402,000,000, the lowest since 1915. Since 1921 values have been working their way back to normal.

Of this year's crop more than $3,000,000,000 worth were marketed by the farmer's own business organizations at the actual cost of handling. Reports from 1,400 grain co-operatives show business totalling $460,000,000; 1,941 dairy products organizations did a business of $300,000,000; 1,182 live stock shipping associations, $280,000,000; 78 cotton co-operatives, $100,000,000 and 14 tobacco organizations, $125,000,000. Only 8,513 of the 10,800 organizations have reported, of which 60 per cent were primarily engaged in selling farm products.

Outlook for Farm Prices

WHOLESALE PRICES DURING THE CIVIL WAR AND WORLD WAR PERIODS (FOR THE CIVIL WAR 1864 TO 1865-100, AND FOR THE WORLD WAR 1914 TO 1914-100)

Will prices go up or down, or remain stationary during the next decade? If you know the answer to that question and knew how to take advantage of the situation, it would mean money in your pocket, according to the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation.

Dr. G. F. Warren, agricultural economist of Cornell University, has collected evidence on the price trend to be expected. He finds prices are acting in almost exactly the same way they did following the Civil War. The price level following the Civil War continued to fall for 18 years. Dr. Warren believes price levels in the United States will again act in this way.

The present huge supply of gold has much to do with the situation. Great Britain alone has sent to the United States since the beginning of the war more than $1,800,000,000 worth of gold—nearly a quarter of all the gold money in the world. Before long, Dr. Warren thinks, Europe will take her gold back. Then prices will go down.

Prospects Bright for Better Horses

COMPARISON OF THE NUMBER AND VALUE OF FARM HORSES

Both farm and city are demanding more and better horses, according to the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation. Despite the 15,281,205 automobiles and trucks in the United States, there are 15,208,000 head of horses and mules on farms today and 2,300,000 horses pulling loads in city streets. The coming of the auto and trucks reduced the number of horses in cities by 2,000,000 between 1910 and 1920, a reduction of 80 per cent. But during the last three years there has been a decided trend in the opposite direction.

Between 1910 and 1920 the horse population on farms decreased 10 per cent. On January 1, 1924, there was 18,203,000 horses, compared with 21,656,000 six years before. This was the smallest number since 1905. Still, 97 per cent of all field work is done by horses and mules.

Around 1915, under the influence of stimulated war production and replacement by mechanical power, horse prices began to decline. By January of this year average values per head were the lowest since 1903. Mule prices, unlike horses, advanced during the war, reaching their peak in 1920. In 1923 there was a third more horses and mules sold than during the previous year. Good mares and stallions are scarce. During the war, horse breeding languished. The number of colts produced failed to keep pace with the losses by death. Between 1910 and 1920 horse and mule colts combined decreased 22 per cent. The largest percentage of the horse population is old.

Low prices will continue to discourage horse and mule production and cause still further decrease in the population until the average price turns upward. Unless breeding operations are increased, demand will soon be greater than the supply. How soon the market turning point will be reached for the rank and file of horses is uncertain. Prices have already improved for the better than medium grades. The constantly increasing demand along with the limited supply is indicative that the turning point is not far off.

(By Margaret Boyd.)

"... doesn't alter what's been going on for sixteen years."—Silas Warner.

Godfrey had let his daughter go unclaimed for sixteen years. Then he went to ask for her, and he was sorry he had not claimed her earlier, and seemed to think his repentance all that was needed to undo the past. Eppie meanwhile had grown up as the weaver's foster child; had been educated in the weaver's beliefs, and had fallen in love with one of the weaver's own rank. Silas here pointed out that no amount of repentance can change what has already been done, what belongs to the past.

Godfrey overestimated the value of repentance—so do many of the rest of us. The value of repentance is to the one who repents, not to those he has wronged. The repentance of the thief on the cross did not in the least alter the harm he had done during his lifetime. The widow whom he had robbed, and who had starved because of his robbery, was not fed by his repentance. The orphan whom he robbed of the money for his schooling was not educated by his repentance, nor were the years and opportunity that were lost for lack of that education restored to the victim by the thief's repentance. The man who lost faith in humanity because his friend stole from him did not have his faith restored because the thief repented. The value of the repentance was to the thief; not to those who had suffered because of his thefts.

Repentance by itself does not offer promise of better conduct in the future on the part of the one who repents, and it establishes the standards of men as correct. If men did wrong continually and never repented of their wrongdoing, we should lose faith in our standards of conduct—we should begin to think that what we believed wrong must really be right. The fundamental law of our moral belief is that while we do right we do not wish we had acted differently, but that as soon as we do wrong we begin to wish that we had acted otherwise. A man never wishes to undo a good deed; but always wishes he could undo a wicked deed. That is, we never repent of doing good, but always repent of doing evil. This belief is to morality what gravitation is to the physical world. If a man does wrong and never repents of that wrong, we are left with the same feeling that we should have if we threw a stone up in the air and it never returned to the earth. Repentance, therefore, serves to establish our standards of right and wrong, just as the returning stone serves to establish the law of gravitation.

William A. Perry, the senior senator from Louisville and president pro tem of the senate is the acting chief executive of the state during the absence of Gov. Fields, who is attending the National Democratic Convention at New York.

The first official act of William A. Perry upon being sworn into office by Chief Justice Flem D. Sampson was to commission Mrs. Perry a colonel.

"She already is my commanding officer," he said. "I merely gave her a title."

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

Nutty Bill from Blind Buck, in the Falmouth Pendletonian of last week, says:

"Congressman Rouse will go back to the sixty-ninth Congress without any opposition in his own party and it is fooling away time for any one in the opposition party to oppose him. He has served his district during six terms in Congress and his constituents know they have an honest man who is imbued with the democracy of a Jackson and Cleveland combined with the courage of a Wilson. He does not depend on blocs to elect him, but his constituents as a whole. He is as much the representative of the voters of Blind Buck as he is of the voters of the cities of Covington or Newport."

The Fayette Farmer's Union has launched a movement for a cut-out of the 1925 tobacco crop.

In a speech recently, Thomas R. Adams, an advocate of the curtailment of production, declared that the growers should agree to a cut-out next year and put the price to 40 cents a pound on what is in the pool. "In this way," declared Mr. Adams, "we will be able to regulate the industry as well as to stabilize the price." He further asserted, "We had better try to do something for the relief of the growers at this end of the line than to send our officials as salesmen into the bankrupt countries of Europe to sell them tobacco which they are not able to buy."

When a man becomes a candidate for public office every phase of his life becomes subjects of discussion. It has been discovered that General Dawes is not the stern, strict, cold-blooded business man usually depicted, for he is not only a musician, but a composer. One of his best compositions was reproduced on the Victrola by Fritz Kreisler. It has also been discovered that his philanthropy has extended to many philanthropic arrangements for institutions, and that he, as a human man as can be seen in an extensive arch.

According to reports Boone county has the largest and at the present time, what appears to be the finest oats crop ever grown in this part of the State. The wet, cool weather of May was just what was needed for the growing of oats. As they will be short this fall the big oats crop will go a long way to make up the deficiency. Excellent weather conditions the past week have enabled the farmers of Boone to finish planting their corn and about two-thirds of the tobacco has been transplanted.

Benjamin C. Rice, 22, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Rice, of Waterloo neighborhood, who has been suffering from a mental trouble, became so violent last Thursday evening that physicians were summoned on Friday for examination. They pronounced his case serious and he was taken to Central State Hospital at Lakeland, where the many friends of the family in this part of the county wish for him a speedy recovery.

Mrs. J. W. Kelly, who is recuperating from the effects of a minor operation performed at the Deaconess Hospital, Cincinnati, last Tuesday, is suffering from a severe sprained ankle which is so painful that it is retarding her recovery materially. Mrs. Kelly sprained her ankle the evening before the operation, but it did not cause her much pain until the next day.

Garfield Post No. 2, G. A. R., will give a picnic and outing at Florence, Ky., Saturday, July 12, 1924. Speakers of note will be present and entertain the crowd. Good music will also be in attendance. All old and young soldiers are invited to attend and enjoy the day's pleasures.

Asserting that the present immigration law "locked the front door of America to Europe and opened the back door to Mexico," James J. Davis, Secretary of Labor, declares that he intends to fight for a selective immigration system until it is adopted.

How beautiful it is to cut the weeds and keep everything about the place nice and tidy, healthy and inviting, cheery and attractive. Now don't jump on to the editors about giving this advice—they are excused—too busy.

Many people can't pay their bills this month because they are just going on vacations, and they won't pay them next month because they have just been.

Formerly the children used to walk long distances in the country to pick flowers, now they will consent to go if they get an automobile ride.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Jones were shopping in Cincinnati, last Friday afternoon.

We have heard no complaint of a scarcity of stock water, so far this summer.

THE FOURTH OF JULY

One Hundred and Forty-Eight Years Ago The Declaration of Independence Was Drawn.

One hundred and forty-eight years ago a small group of men met in Philadelphia and discussed the proposition to rebel against the King, and risk their lives in an effort to throw off the British yoke. On the fourth day of July, 1776, the Declaration of Independence was drawn and adopted by Conference, and it was signed on that day by John Hancock, the President of the convention and Charles Thompson, secretary. The actual signing of the document by representatives of states did not actually occur until some months later and when it was done the men knew they were outlawed with a price on their heads, because it was red revolution. It meant something to sign that document. It took courage; a willingness to die if necessary, for conscience and for country. That document meant this: "King George, we do not want you any longer as our ruler. England, we will pay you no more tribute. From this day forward we will be an independent power in the world, and we defy you and all the rest of the world to prevent our being what we wish to be!" This was democracy born in the world.

History moves in mysterious cycles and the man who has learned his best lessons in the harsh school of experience is not averse to profiting from the experience of others. We of 1924 can profit from that of the shrewd patriots of 1776, who sought and gained political independence and bequeathed it to us.

Once the movement for a new America was started, a wise old leader advised the factions that they had their choice of hanging together or hanging separately. It was, and is, good advice. This must continue to be a government of and by the people whatever results may be—else no man can foretell what may happen. Almost every system and condition in life has changed since the dawn of an experiment, then considered the "reddest" thing in the history of the world. And yet in no other land and in no other time has the individual enjoyed such blessings as he enjoys today in America.

We need, not more independence but more realization of interdependence. We can develop calmly, smoothly, rationally, or we can exterminate each other so that no one will benefit. The first course is easier and the results are more pleasing. Let us stick to the original principles, and this Fourth of July renew our allegiance to the Declaration of Independence.

BASKET DINNER.

ALL DAY SERVICE HELD AT THE WOOLPER SCHOOL HOUSE.

On last Sunday, June 29th an all-day service was held at the Woolper school house. Rev. R. H. Carter and a number of Petersburg people together with the citizens of the surrounding neighborhood, united in making it an enjoyable day. Rev. Carter delivered two excellent discourses, one in the morning and one in the afternoon and at the noon hour one of those "old time" basket dinners, for which the "Woolperites" are famous, was served and heartily enjoyed by everyone, even the minister himself, entering into this feature of the program to the utter consternation of all present.

The Circle Girls Chorus, Rev. Carter's favorite asset, were on hand and rendered choice vocal selections, which helped to make the day more enjoyable.

Rev. Carter just held an "all day" service at Bellevue the Sunday previous, now "where does he go from here?"

JACK-BROWN

Ossman Jack, 28, and Miss Bertha Brown, 25, both of Beaver Lick, this county, were married last Saturday. The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Jack, a farmer of Beaver precinct, while the bride is a daughter of Mr. William Brown.

At the time the license was issued the young couple did not know where they would be married nor by whom. We extend to them our very best wishes.

GRANT COUNTY INCREASES ALFALFA ACREAGE.

Over 1500 acres were seeded to alfalfa in Grant county this spring. This is a considerable increase in the acreage of alfalfa for that county. Much of the clover was frozen out. In the severe winter, and the farmers are going toward alfalfa, according to H. F. McKenney.

W. L. Kirkpatrick will have another big auction sale July 7th (county court day) at his place of business in Burlington. See adv. in this paper, per.

SCARCITY OF DOCTORS JUNE MONTH OF BRIDES.

A Serious Matter in Many Counties in Kentucky—Midwives Called In Emergency Cases.

Louisville, Ky.—A scarcity of doctors, so great that physicians in this case of child-birth are difficult to reach, in at least thirty-six Kentucky counties, is revealed in the annual report of J. F. Blackerby, State Registrar for the State Board of Health. The report shows that in one county, Leslie, there is only one doctor which made necessary the calling of midwives in 88 per cent of the cases of childbirth during the last 12 months. Breathitt and Knott counties are a close second in the number of births at which no physician was available while other counties where more than 75 per cent of the births were under care of midwives are Jackson, Magoffin and Owsley.

Mr. Blackerby explained that the scarcity of doctors is not due to any lack of medical students, but to economic conditions, which make the task of practicing medicine difficult. Notably among these conditions are bad roads, in some counties, high but more realization of interdependence. We can develop calmly, smoothly, rationally, or we can exterminate each other so that no one will benefit. The first course is easier and the results are more pleasing. Let us stick to the original principles, and this Fourth of July renew our allegiance to the Declaration of Independence.

When doctors are scarce or difficult to reach, said Mr. Blackerby, midwives are called in such emergency cases and through the percentage of births under their direction, an accurate tab can be made of the counties where a doctor is overworked or is unable to reach his patients.

LOSES AN EYE

RUSHED TO SPECIALIST BUT SIGHT COULD NOT BE RESTORED

It has been reported that Claude Arrasmith, who lives on Ed. Henley's farm out on the East Bend pike lost the sight of an eye last Saturday.

Mr. Arrasmith was plowing corn with a two-horse riding cultivator, and in stooping over to unhoke the plow a root flew out and stuck in his eye.

He was rushed to Cincinnati and examined by specialist, but too late to save the sight of the optic, which was bandaged and the patient returned to his home.

Mr. Arrasmith is an energetic and successful farmer and has many friends in this part of Boone county who sympathize with him in his misfortune.

A FORCE FOR RURAL PROGRESS.

When the country town looks over its various assets, it must place a very high value on its local merchants. The men who own and operate our stores are keenly interested in the progress of our county. They know that if our home town goes ahead, and the country around it becomes more prosperous, their business will gain. Consequently they have a direct personal interest in helping on advance movements. And if anything is doing to work out new ideas, you almost always find them very active in helping it on.

So it is that when you patronize your local merchants, you assist a group of people who keep an incessant effort to develop the community. Backing them up promotes the growth of your home town.

The employer who never loses the viewpoint of his employees is the one who has the best chance to get along.

June, famous as the wedding month, begins a new era of life for many of the young folks. The cost of living is said to place a high barrier in the way of young people who wish to marry, yet it seems as if about the same number as ever feel disposed to enter this normal condition of life. If young people have anything of the same spirit that the folk who settled this country had, high prices won't daunt them, provided the man has a steady job and has shown himself willing to work. They would better start out in a two-room apartment if necessary, or only one, if their affection is tootooty and they are worthy of the responsibilities of matrimony. It is not true that two can live as cheaply as one, yet many fellows could support a family out of the extravagance they have indulged in while single.

Marriage licenses have been issued during the month of June by the County Clerk as follows:

MEN'S BIBLE CLASS.

AT WALTON HAS 175 IN ATTENDANCE LAST SUNDAY.

A contest between the Men's Bible Classes of the Christian churches of Walton, Ky., and North Middletown, Ohio, culminated last Sunday in the disappointing defeat of Walton by the scant majority of thirteen votes.

This contest for total attendance for the period of three months had been waged since the first of April and on Sunday, June 22, the Walton men were 81 behind making necessary a decided fight for the last Sunday, so they got busy behind B. F. Stansifer, Supt., of the Sunday School and J. E. Gross, President of the Men's Class, and by some method or other sent the word to other precincts of the county for a little help. The result was that the attendance of 98 for the Sunday before was swelled to 175 on last Sunday, while North Middletown could muster but 107, but even with this heroic effort they were beaten by thirteen votes.

A photographer was on hand to make a picture of the class, as well as the entire school, after which all were conducted to the basement of the church and made the recipients of the best hospitality that any community could offer.

Men were in attendance from practically every precinct in the county, and while some came a great distance, all expressed the wish that the contest could have lasted for at least one more Sunday.

The Erlanger Department Store, successors to H. Schanker & Son, are carrying an adv. in this issue, which it would be advisable for you to examine before you make up your mind to buy the things you need in their line.

CAUGHT IN A SHOWER.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry L. Fowler, of Hebron, were given a shower party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Hughes by their many Burlington friends, last Saturday evening. These fine young people were the recipients of many useful presents. Following is the list:

FARM SITUATION BETTER

It's no easy matter to attempt to tell a farmer that the average condition of the American Farmer has improved ten per cent during the last year.

But that's what the department of agriculture is doing, and if it succeeds in making some farmers believe that their business is on the up grade, it will be better for them and the country as well.

Revised estimates, the department says, show that the 1923 crops had a total value of about ten billions of dollars, an increase of more than a billion in one year.

Total value of exports of principal agricultural products from United States for eight months ended Feb. 29, 1924, was $1,308,338,000 as compared with $1,233,716,000 for the same period during the preceding year, an increase of 6 per cent.

In a recent statement the Department of Agriculture says: "The general agricultural outlook for 1924 indicates that farmers are undertaking a normal production program. It is apparent, however, that agricultural production this year will still be attended by difficulties arising from high wages and other costs."

"Domestic demand for agricultural products is at a high level. Foreign markets on the whole, seem likely to maintain about the present level of demand."

KELLY-TANNER

Courtney G. Kelly, 29, and Miss Maud E. Tanner, 23, both of this county were married Saturday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock p. m., at the home of Rev. G. A. Royer, on the Dixie Highway. The young couple was accompanied by Galen S. Kelly, brother of the groom and Miss Hazel Senour, of Florence.

The groom is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. T. Kelly of the Burlington and East Bend road, while the bride is the eldest daughter of Mr. H. S. Tanner, of Hebron neighborhood. These young people were among the most popular of the social set of this section of the county and will be greatly missed from among their number.

After the ceremony the bridal party drove to Cincinnati where they attended a theatre, after which the attendants returned home. The bride and groom returned the next day, going to the home of Mr. Chas. Kelly, where they were entertained at a family dinner in their honor. They were entertained Monday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Tanner.

Attends State Bar Meeting.
Judge and Mrs. Sidney Gaines returned to their home in Walton last Saturday after several days visit in Estill Springs, Ky., where Judge Gaines was attending the annual meeting of the Kentucky State Bar Association. They both report a great meeting and a pleasant trip.

"AN OLD FASHIONED MOTHEK"

Visits Petersburg and Is Hailed with Delight by Appreciative Crowd.

The Circle Girls of Petersburg Christian church presented the play entitled "An Old Fashioned Mother" before a crowd that almost filled the Theatre building at that place last Wednesday evening.

The resemblance of this play to "Over the Hill" was exceedingly striking and its presentation could not be surpassed by any amateur talent. An ever present touch of pathos, effectively brought out by Mrs. A. L. Stephens as the mother and Miss Emma Nixon, as her son John, was the continual cause of dimmed eyes, as while Miss Cordelia Berkshire, as "Jerry," Miss Nell Stephens, as Bro. Jonah Quackenbush, Miss Mary Hensley as Lowly Loviny Custard, furnished the audience with a continuous vein of meriment. Miss Emelya McChord as "Widder" Bill Findle, Olava Hensley as Isabel Simpson, Laura Mae Mathews, as Gloriana Perkins, Mary Walton, as "Sister" Finkle, Fanny Berkshire as Charley Underhill, Mrs. Wilson White as Enoch Kone, and Miss Alpharetta Nixon as Quintus Todd, portrayed their parts, both individually and collectively, as stars of the first water. In fact if one were to attempt to pick an individual star from this cast he would find himself very much like the old negro who said "they wum't no sich animal." They were all good, they deserve great credit, and we again say, as we have said on other occasions, that such affairs should be encouraged in every community in Boone county. In addition to many other good features, they serve as a medium through which we may build up community spirit and good fellowship.

GIANT KONKLAVE

ABOUT 5,000 ATTEND DEMONSTRATION OF KU KLUX KLAN AT FLORENCE FAIR GROUNDS.

Last Saturday afternoon and evening the Ku Klux Klan held a meeting at the Florence Fair Grounds on the Dixie Highway which was attended by a crowd estimated by eye witnesses to be about 5,000 people, and from the number of automobiles parked on the highway and inside the grounds in sight of the highway, there must have been fully that many in attendance.

For some time traffic on the highway was so congested that passage north and south was an utter impossibility.

About five hundred candidates were reported to have joined the organization during the evening. A brass band was in attendance and gave a concert inside the show ring, while a great fireworks display was put on outside, with a giant fiery cross about 40 feet high burning about 100 feet from the highway.

This meeting was advertised as being under the auspices of the Kenton county Klan.

ELECTRIC LIGHT MEETING

HELD LAST SATURDAY AT PETERSBURG IN THE THEATRE BUILDING.

Last Saturday afternoon, immediately after the base ball game, the citizens of Petersburg and of the Petersburg and Burlington pike held a meeting in the theatre building at Petersburg in the interest of a proposed plan to extend the high tension electric light line from Burlington to Petersburg.

Quite a number of the citizens turned out to the meeting, and while no subscriptions were actually taken President Ketchum of the light company was very optimistic for the success of the project after the meeting adjourned.

The plan is very similar to the one recently carried into effect at Burlington and Hebron. The light company proposes to sell $15,000 worth of bonds, which will be secured by a first mortgage on the line from Burlington to Petersburg.

Men present at the meeting took blank applications for service which they will circulate in the community after which another meeting will be called to ascertain results.

In conformity with one of the policies of this paper, namely, better homes for Boone county, we stand unqualifiedly for this movement.

URNS TURTLE

While on the way to Burlington last Friday afternoon William Nixon from down on Gunpowder stopped his Ford roadster to fix his emergency brake. As he was doing so his emergency brake suddenly let loose and the machine started on its way. Mr. Nixon succeeded in getting under the wheel, but could not prevent the capsize of the machine, which resulted in a broken top and windshield, and the destruction of a large basket of eggs, which he was bringing to market.

ROUGHING IT ON MOTOR TRIPS.

The American people are said to be getting soft and fussy about having their luxuries. For all that there are probably more people today than ever before who go out on trips where they have to rough it and get along without the comforts of civilization.

Innumerable people get out with automobiles and little camping outfits and sleep along the roadsides. Many of them never thought they could get along without soft beds and home cooking appliances. But the chance to see the country was given to them when automobiles became popular only to do it at little cost; they had to plan for roadside camping.

They responded to the opportunity and have seen more of the country than they ever thought possible. And what is more valuable they have had a little experience in getting back to pioneer conditions. It makes people independent and self confident to feel that they can thus live in a very simple way.

THE INDEPENDENCE OF COUNTRY LIFE.

It is a great thing for a man to be his own boss. In country life he either is, or if he shows ambition and energy, he can expect to accomplish that end. If he prefers to work for some one else, relations are usually so friendly and helpful that he does not suffer from that feeling of servitude that so many city people have.

It is a sense of satisfaction to men of independent temperament, to feel that they are their own masters, they can plan their own work, and their individuality is not stifled in some great industrial machine. This sense of independence is worth a good deal of money to a lot of people. It is a stimulus to effort, and an encouragement to a man to improve himself, as he knows that he will get the full fruition of his labors.

TEN POINTS OF A GOOD TOWN.

Sixteen towns near Chicago recently engaged in competition to determine which is the best place in which to bring up young people. The Chicago Evening American offered a prize of $1,000 to the winner. The publicity gained in such a contest will be a wonderful help to a community.

It is interesting to note the ten points on which scores were given, as follows: 1, Facilities for play and athletics; 2, Educational advantages; 3, Industrial and vocational training; 4, Health and sanitary measures; 5, Home life and housing; 6, Community morals and social direction; 7, Encouragement of religious training; 8, Coordinated efforts of workers; 9, Publication and propaganda; 10, Organization and mode. These suggest lines none of which the progressive community can neglect.

SIZING UP THINGS

In sizing up things, especially those having a bearing on local conditions, it is well to remember that there is more than one angle from which a question may be viewed.

Far too many people err in judgment purely from haste and over-zealousness.

Impressions are often formed at first glance, and unless a person is willing to examine beneath the surface and consider all available facts, those first impressions will remain and become fixed convictions, irrespective of whether they are right or wrong.

Injustice to a good cause is often done by this method of sizing up things and immeasurable harm to an individual, a group of individuals or a whole community may result.

Then there is a class of citizens who, shying formed a hasty conclusion, refuse to recede from their position, even when confronted with indisputable proof of their error of judgment. That is pure and unadulterated stubbornness.

Best results are obtained by taking a calm survey of the situation, from every conceivable viewpoint, before taking a definite stand.

Communities prosper and grow when their citizens adopt this plan.

RABIES PREVALENT IN KENTUCKY.

There is considerable rabies among the dogs of the State, according to Dr. L. A. Brown, in charge of the Public Service Laboratories, University of Kentucky, Lexington. The records of the laboratories up to June 1st of this year show that 27 dog heads have been received at the laboratories for examination and of this number 15 or over 50 per cent have been positive reactors for the disease. During the week of June 24, four specimens were sent to the laboratories of which three gave positive reactions. Practically all of the specimens examined at the laboratories were from dogs which had bitten human beings. Since these specimens come from all sections of the State would indicate state-wide distribution of the disease. It is further significant that these specimens were received during the winter and spring months, a period during which it is commonly supposed that there is little or no rabies or hydrophobia.

The average man of today is more than the breadwinner—he has to pay for the gasoline and oil, too.

ALL WELCOME!

County court, first Monday.

W. Lee Cropper is having his residence painted.

The days are getting shorter at both ends. Had you noticed it?

There is more fun in pursuing happiness than in catching up with it.

Earl Cropper is spending a week with his mother, Mrs. Lorena Cropper.

Say, you women! Look out for Tom Judge's sale which is advertised in this issue.

A good many Burlington people enjoyed the National Convention over the radios.

Mr. Karl Botts went to Cincinnati on Tuesday of this week to accept a position at that place.

The man whose conscience hurts him is much better off than the man whose conscience is dead.

C. A. Fowler and wife spent last Thursday evening with their son, Jerry and wife at Hebron.

Frank Maxwell and wife, of Covington, spent Sunday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Weaver.

Mr. and Mrs. Marce Riddell spent Sunday with their daughter, Mrs. Walton Dempsey, at Erlanger.

Walter Brown and wife, of Covington, spent Saturday night and Sunday with home folks in Burlington.

T. B. Adams, a former Boone-co. citizen, but now living at Erlanger, was a Burlington visitor last Saturday.

The supper given by the members of Burlington colored church Saturday night was well attended and a nice sum was realized.

One popular method for keeping the boys on the farms is to put them on the dustiest hayrack in the barn to stow away the hay.

Mrs. Sarah Carpenter and granddaughter, Miss Bessie Baldon, returned Sunday evening from a visit with friends at Petersburg.

In 1749 Benjamin Franklin electrocuted a turkey for his dinner. Begins to look like most of the new ideas are old ones worked over.

Dr. A. P. Walton and wife, of Ft. Thomas, F. P. Walton and wife, of Covington, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Blythe, last Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Case, of Burbon county, were Sunday guests of J. O. Bonta and family, of near Cominsbury. Mrs. Case is a sister of Mr. Bonta.

Base Ball!

Burlington vs. Hebron

4-JULY-4

At Burlington Park.

These two games are not scheduled in the County League, and each team will be greatly strengthened. Bring your Dinners and See Both Games.

Morning Game at 10 a. m. Afternoon at 2:30 p. m.

BASE BALL.

The fight for the lead in the County League race was waged in desperation last Saturday afternoon on the Petersburg lot with Bellevue as the visitors. After nine rounds of real exciting base ball the Petersburg club emerged the victors, thereby dislodging Bellevue and themselves climbing upon the exalted seat of league leadership.

It was a pitcher's battle most of the way, although both Huey and Brady had a few rounds that did not savor of the best in the pitching art, however with perfect support each would have pitched a better game.

Each pitcher was favored by some excellent support at times which helped to offset the other. Cox and Ruth playing excellent ball in the field for Petersburg, while for Bellevue Roberts was easily the best. The batting stars were Keim, M. McWethy and White for Petersburg, and Joe Brady, Berkshire and Black for Bellevue.

The sensational features of the game were Cox's catch of Roberts' fly to left, and Ruth's quick return of Black's drive to right, catching him off first base.

These two teams will meet at Petersburg on the Fourth in an exhibition game.

Hits off Huey 10; off Brady 11.

Hit by pitcher by Huey (Black); by Brady (M. McWethy and Keim); Struck out by Huey 8; by Brady 6.

Two base hits—M. McWethy (2); Cook.

Three base hits—Berkshire, Ruth White.

Hebron defeated Burlington by the one-sided score of 16 to 5 last Saturday afternoon at Hebron. This making the eighth straight loss for the Burlington club.

Wilson pitching for Burlington was in good form at times, but at others was not so good, and poor support killed him off with a one-sided score resulting. Bullock started for Hebron and retired at the end of the third and Beacom who took up the burden pitched it out and won. In short it was a ragged free hitting contest with Hebron being the harder hitting as indicated by the score.

Stanley Graves assumed the leadership of the Hebron club and won his first game. Ed. Acra was in the Hebron line-up for the first time.

RED CROSS NEWS.

The Red Cross Chapters of Boone and Kenton counties are operating with the management of the Junior Camp at Florence this year as last. Kenton county is supplying the nurses for the duration of the camp and Boone is furnishing the First Aid Kit.

The Red Cross at Cleveland had arranged for tents for 1,000 people to be sent to Lorain, Ohio, immediately following the storm of Saturday night.

Each applicant for adjusted compensation should have two witnesses having known him at least two years, to sign his claim.

SMITH—ROUSE

Chas. H. Smith, 20, and Ella Marie Rouse, 17, obtained a marriage license last Saturday. Mr. Smith is a farmer and lives on J. C. Layne's farm, while Miss Rouse is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ben A. Rouse of Florence neighborhood.

Mrs. W. C. Weaver has been quite ill for several days with tonsillitis.

BOONE COUNTY MEN ATTENDING SUNDAY SCHOOL

The large attendance at the Men's Bible Class of the Walton Christian Sunday school last Sunday but recalls to one's mind the fact that a few years ago two dozen men could not be found at Sunday school in the entire county of Boone, but now, in the year 1924, we find one hundred and seventy-five in attendance at one class.

Of course one might say that this was an especial occasion, which is indeed true, but the record at Walton will show that there were ninety-three on the Sunday previous, and one hundred and seven the Sunday previous to that.

And Walton is not the only example, as the condition exists in every community, although in a more or less marked degree. The Mens class at Burlington can boast of over one hundred in attendance on several occasions, while Petersburg and others have more or less large attendances every Sunday morning.

Several years ago when a boy reached the age of fifteen or sixteen years it was time, in his estimation, for him to cease his attendance at Sunday school, but now, in the face of the existing facts, and in the words of the immortal John Paul Jones, "he has just begun to fight." These incontrovertible facts fling back at us the unanswered question—"What has caused it?"

BIRTHDAY DINNER

Mrs. Loulah B. Walton, whose beautiful home overlooks the town of Bellevue, was given a complete and pleasant surprise last Sunday by a number of relatives and friends, it being the occasion of her 51 birthday and according to her own version, one of the most pleasant she ever spent. Among those present were John Rogers and family, Bernard Rogers and family, Mrs. Frank Walton and daughter, Mrs. Eliza Walton and daughters Ruth and Helen, Joe Walton and family, Robert McGlasson and family, of Hebron, Jno. Clore and wife and Dr. M. A. Yelton and family, of Burlington. The guests carried out the surprise in a befitting manner by bringing well filled baskets, the contents of which were heartily enjoyed by all.

SOME "WEDDIN"

We received an account of the Acra-Siekman wedding, very beautifully written by Rev. H. C. Runyan and a list of presents received by the bridal couple, but inasmuch as we published an account of the wedding last week, and as the list of presents is the longest ever received at this office, we regret to say for want of time and space that they cannot be published. From the length of this list and from other accounts this must have been "some weddin." They received 130 useful and valuable presents.

NOTICE OF MEETING

BASCOM SLEMP, astute Virginia politician for the past ten months to President Coolidge, is the first casualty of the Republican campaign. Not liking the way things were being run in the Republican party by Chairman Bill Butler, Slemp kicked to the President and demanded a showdown, threatening at the same time, to resign as the White House Secretary. Coolidge made him promise not to resign, as that would have looked bad at this time, but Slemp has been relieved of all duties at the Executive Mansion, the Secretary in name only, and Butler reigns supreme as the Republican chieftain.

GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS are greatly interested in the trial in New York of Gaston B. Means, the famous detective who is charged with conspiring with others to bribe Harry M. Daugherty while the latter was Attorney General. Means' chief defense is that what he did was in the direction of the late President Harding, who wanted to find out if Daugherty and Secretary of the Treasury Mellon could be trusted where liquor matters were concerned. Attorney General Stone had ordered the trial speeded up, and the outcome is awaited with some anxiety in certain quarters for it is never known what Gaston Means might have up his sleeve.

SECRETARY OF STATE Chas. Hughes is stumped to know what to do about China. Almost weekly news reports of American citizens being slain by bandits in that country, and the protests of this Government, have passed almost unnoticed at Peking. Now comes the crowning blow, the Chinese Government having denied that the United States has any right in the Chinese Eastern Railroad, in which American investors sunk $5,000,000 shortly after the war. China has turned the road over to Russia and told the United States that the American claims are of no value. It is a perplexing problem, but at this writing it appears that the five million is lost forever.

SOME IDEA OF the extent of federal prohibition enforcement operations is given here by the announcement that fines collected in cases involving conspiring to violate the Volstead Act have totalled fourteen million dollars during the past two years. The jail sentences meted out to offenders, if placed end to end, amount to 450 years.

DEMOCRATIC SENATORS who got together here to talk over the platform plank on the League of Nations found out that there would be a row over this declaration before the platform was finally adopted by the New York convention. One faction, embracing the so-called Wilson Democrats, wanted a straight out and out pledge for American entrance into the League of Nations, while the other wanted a plank that would pledge the party to work for world peace and international understanding without mentioning the League by name. The platform discussion went on here until 48 hours before the time set for the opening of the convention in New York.

FREDERICK MARTIN, the Army aviator who jumped into sudden fame when he was named to head the flight around the world, has sunk to obscurity since his place was wrecked in Alaska and he was forced to return to the United States while the other fliers continued the epoch-making trip. The Air Service wanted to send Martin to Europe while another plane to lead the fliers across the Atlantic or the return trip, but Secretary of War Weeks objected and Martin has been assigned to ordinary duties down in Virginia.

The governor of Nebraska is determined to have gasoline at what he believes to be a fair price, 15 cents per gallon, and has authorized municipal stations for this purpose. Meanwhile the attorney general has instituted proceedings against 15 oil companies on a charge of price fixing and conspiracy to drive competitors out of business. They are cited into court on July 1.

Some people will probably claim that the American people are fundamentally dishonest, as they steal many bases in the national game.

Although popular feeling runs high over base ball in many places, no players have been jailed so far for making errors.

The people who are resting on their vacation have plenty of time in which to fret about the weather.

It works!

The new immigration law has made its influence felt abroad to such an extent that the tide of immigration to this continent has changed its direction to the south. According to news dispatches, the tide of continental emigration has come up against the breakwater of the new United States alien restrictions, and is making a sweep southward to South America. This first effect of the new American immigration bill is being felt by the transatlantic passenger liner companies operating to South American ports, who already have booked their third class lists for the next two months and have announced their intention to place more ships in the passenger service. Most of the bookings come from steamship agents in the Latin countries where emigration to the United States is so restricted that American consuls are refusing to grant visas until Washington authorities issue the new quotas and regulations. This is all as it should be. Our melting pot has filled to the overflow point, and until we can ladle off some of the scum, or transmute it from the base metal of the Red, the Bolshevik and the ignorant, into the tested steel of true Americanism, we don't want to put any more Europeans into it to melt up!

The Monroe Doctrine has held the American for Americans. The immigration laws, which reduce to a minimum the influx of unassimilated and unassimilable human material, will keep this America American. What less restricted immigration may do for South American countries, is, of course, their affair, but it must be kept in mind that many South American nations have large undeveloped resources, huge areas to cultivate, wildernesses yet to be won; such conditions did upon immigrants to this nation in its earlier days. At any rate, we haven't so much metal to melt for a while!

LESSON FOR BOTH PARTIES

Every newspaper and every private citizen has been demanding reduction in taxes during the past year, yet the congress successfully prevented any reduction for a long period of years and then passed a bill which gives temporary relief, but is entirely different in most respects from the one recommended by treasury experts.

Instead of working for tax reduction, congress used up the most of its time in passing or debating measures which would increase national taxes.

This most peculiar state of affairs is due to the fact that congress seemed to have worked on the theory of the ostrich in its blind effort to have its own way. Instead of listening to the people, it stuck its head in the sands of its own egotism and kicked its pet hobbies and political schemes down the throats of the American people.

Few politicians in office have the ability to read the signs of the times but to those who have such ability, the recent presidential primaries offer a valuable lesson. Some political leaders in Washington advocate radical change in government, and many new schemes and theories have been offered—but what did the people answer when they cast their vote?

The "ultra progressive" Republican candidate who would have given the people anything they wished in promises, was absolutely snowed under. The "ultra conservative" Republican candidate of the type that the Progressive class as reactionary and an enemy of the people, received an almost unanimous vote.

If this primary election teaches anything, it shows that the sentiment of the American people is for conservative and sound ideas of government and business. It should show both Republicans and Democrats alike that the men they put up for public office should be capable of impressing the voters with the fact that they will give, if elected, a sound, economical and business-like administration of public affairs and the tendency to expand the functions of government to various fields.

GOVERNMENT BY DEFAULT

In an athletic tournament, some players usually default. They get cold feet when the day comes to play, or business engagements prevent. It would not be considered a very satisfactory tournament if half the players defaulted. A lot of fellows would go into the next round who were poor players and were not entitled to meet on that higher level.

So in our politics we have much of the time a government by default. Probably not more than a third of the voters on an average participate in the primaries. They default, and the practical result is that many competitors who could not possibly win on a fair test of strength and ability will advance to the next round.

Similarly a large portion of the voters also default at the elections, which frequently permits unfit candidates to get into official position. And then the defaulting voters turn around and groan about the high cost and inefficiency of government.

Repeated suggestions on the same topic make a path in the mind just the same as walking across the grass in the same place every day. Hence advertising.

SUMMER CARE OF BABY

The care of the baby during the summer months differs a little from the care during the rest of the year. This difference is largely a matter of degree, the mother must be more careful in her care of the baby. She should be more careful about his diet and about keeping baby clean, cool and quiet. By so doing she can prevent hot weather ills and discomforts. Cleanliness during the hot days is essential for the baby's well being. If he plays on the floor spread a clean sheet over the floor for him to play on. A baby allowed to crawl over a dirty floor collects on his hands and transfers to his mouth germs which may cause so called "summer complaint."

In extremely hot weather sponge the baby off two or three times a day in addition to his daily bath. Give him plenty of cool boiled water to drink; children need an extra amount of water during hot weather as the water acts as a heat regulator.

In the summer time many babies are covered with prickly heat. This may be due to too much clothing or by all wool clothing next to the skin. To soothe the prickly heat either of the following may be helpful: A starch bath made with one cup of cooled laundry starch in a gallon of water, a soda bath with two tablespoons of baking soda to a gallon of water or a bran bath made by filling a six inch square cotton bag half full of bran and soaking it in a gallon of water until it becomes milky. Place the baby in the bath, then pat him dry with a soft cloth. A band, as thin cotton shirt, a diaper and a slip is all the clothing baby needs for out of doors. In the house the band and diaper will be sufficient if it is very hot. If, in spite of your care, the hot movement of the baby is unusual, if he has fever or diarrhoea or is vomiting stop all food and call the doctor immediately. Give the baby plenty of cool boiled water until the doctor comes but nothing else.

The public spirited citizen need not think that all the public celebrations have been noted, as he has not probably observed the Garden Week, Spray the Trees Month, or Weed the Flower Bed Day.

During the first 15 days of May the Canadians sent thru the Panama Canal 682,528 tons of wheat. The price of this wheat is fixed in Liverpool and the price of American wheat is fixed at the same place.

LOST MOTION

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Miami University of Illinois

I needed a little information at Providence, and as there was a young woman ahead of me, I had both time and opportunity to watch the young man in charge of the booth. All his actions were slow and deliberate. He had no nerves, apparently, and no appreciation of the fact that anyone might be pressed for time. He did nothing with directness. He would dip his pen into an ink bottle out of sight somewhere under the desk and then shake it once or twice in the direction of the floor to remove the surplus ink and wave it in the air before beginning to write. Constantly he was stopping to turn something over or to push something aside in search of a lost notation of some sort. He would open a drawer and then shut it, he would wander off to some remote and hidden part of the office for a blotter or a writing pad, or some esoteric fact of which he seemed to be in need; he would hesitate in his work and look up as some one passed, and all this as time was passing. His task was simply to copy a name and a number and a date in the paper he was making out—a task that he could have accomplished in one-tenth of the time it took him had he gone directly at it.

Most of his activity was merely lost motion; it was a little flourish before he began really to do anything; it had little or no connection with the main task in hand. As a worker he was worth about fifteen cents an hour, and he caused me nearly to miss an engagement.

His method is not an uncommon one. Any one who watched McCarter at his books would see that he studied in this same way. Most of the time that he was supposed to be studying, he was filling his fountain pen, or he was looking for his pipe or asking irrelevant questions of his roommate. He talked or sang snatches of the latest song or dozed over his book. There was no concentration, no getting directly at the point. Most of his mental activity, if it could be so called, was lost motion; most of his time was wasted.

Men tackle moral problems in much the same way. They edge round them, they evade a definite issue, they play with moral principles as the man in Providence played with the material on his desk. They get nowhere, because they have no definite objective in view. Their moral activities are mostly lost motion.

Gov. H. L. Fuqua

Henry L. Fuqua of Baton Rouge, who has been inaugurated governor of Louisiana, succeeding John M. Parker.

If Labor takes control in Great Britain and bans knee breeches from royal receptions it will mercilessly rob a lot of American paragraphs of a grand little joke.

What has become of the hitching posts of yesterday? asks a newspaper inquirer. Some too, as to the carriage blocks which formerly gave distinction to the residence avenues.

A citizen struck by an automobile was found to have $3,000 in money sewed to the lining of his clothing, but it isn't everybody, of course, who can afford a wad like that for a bumper.

There is nothing to be done about the weather. It is self-winding and automatic. It requires less care than an oil-burning furnace. It has no more use for argument than a Missouri mule.

THE BLUEGRASS-SEED CROP IS LIGHT

Present indications for the Kentucky crop of bluegrass will be approximately 175,000 bushels of cured seed. This is about the same as the 1921 crop, which is the smallest crop since 1918. For the past two years the crop has been good and the seed of a fairly good quality. This year many fields are badly infested with weeds and in many cases the grass is short, and the yield of seed per acre will vary considerably, but in general it will be low according to Mr. D. G. Card, Field Agent in Marketing, College of Agriculture.

Weeds gathered with bluegrass at the time of stripping increases the loss of weight when it is cleaned and they also make curing and cleaning more difficult and expensive. The rainy spring seems to have encouraged the growing of weeds so that farmers should give special attention to remove these weeds before stripping.

Missouri bluegrass seed is often superior to that produced in Kentucky. This seems to be due to the fact that in Missouri they allow the seed to become more mature before stripping. This gives the Missouri seed greater weight per bushel and higher percentage of germination. Bluegrass seed that is stripped green is usually lower in quality and in germination. Kentucky could improve in the quality of bluegrass seed by stripping the seed just at maturity and by exercising greater care in curing so as to prevent heating. Heating kills the seed or at least it lowers its germinating qualities.

THE LEVEL OF PRICES

The majority of economists would probably consider that the level of prices is still much too high and that it is likely to undergo a slow decline over a fairly long period of time.

It seems hardly likely that prices will ever go back where they were before the war. There has been a gradual rise for a period of 15 years before 1914. If there had been no war, very likely that rise would have continued slowly. Yet after the Civil war in 1861 to 1865, there was a steady decline in prices which did not reach its low point until thirty-two years after that war ended. The same result seems likely to occur during the coming years. War produces inflated conditions, and the usual thing after a war is for a gradual return to a more normal state.

The increase of population and consequent increased demand for food products, tends to make food-stuffs cost more. But improved methods of production should offset this tendency. On manufactured products, it should be possible as years go on, and new machinery is invented and new methods perfected and better industrial relations created, to reduce prices somewhat.

The shortage of dwellings has increased rents, which calls for higher labor costs to enable the working people to find homes. An abundant supply of homes would be followed by lower rentals and eventually by lower wage rates and lower cost of living.

Any decline in prices that may occur is likely to be very slow, and no one need hesitate to buy needed stock or supplies for fear of any such sharp recession as took place in 1921. But if the United States is to hold its own in world competition, it needs to get its production costs considerably below the present high level.

The people of Michigan, under a new law, cannot obtain table salt in any form except that which has been adulterated with iodine. This is for the purpose of reducing the prevalence of goiter. How about the personal liberty equation in this proposition.

Washington and Ottawa, the capitals of the United States and Canada, were connected last week by through train service for the first time in history.

GOOD PEOPLE NEED ENCOURAGEMENT.

The tendency of the times is too high flying, fast going, and deep diving.

The preacher devotes eight years at least to college and seminary courses and then begins to preach by telling the people about the last things he studied, things which they could not comprehend without similar courses of study. If the preacher is earnest and diligent, and really desirous of reaching the people, and of rendering them real aid and assistance he may, after eight years' preaching, reach their level. He does this by forgetting the second-hand stuff learned at school.

Art galleries, as a rule, are but curiosity shops to the average visitor, those whom they have been established to instruct and to improve in taste, and to develop a love for the beautiful.

Instructors should be teachers in the sense of being leaders of way or the more direct and safer.

Specialists in art, music and literature seem to abominate the term popular, and that in spite of the fact that it expresses the spirit and the taste of the populace—the people.

The popular taste is for that which is good, the best within its reach. But when the good music, and literature is placed out of its reach—beyond its conception—it takes to rage, to caricature, to the cheap novel and the yellow journal.

Can you blame the populace for being unappreciative when its reasonable demands are not respected?

There isn't anything too good for the good people. As for the bad you may think what you will. It is the good people who need to be helped and encouraged.

Good people in these times are those who are desirous of better things, and doing what they can to help themselves, and others, to get more and better returns for the time, talent and energy expended.

HOW DOES THE HOUSE FLY PASS THE WINTER MONTHS?

Where does the annual crop of flies come from, is a question frequently asked of the Bureau of Entomology, United States Department of Agriculture. The prevailing opinion that the house fly lives through the winter as an adult, hiding in cracks and crevices of buildings, appears to be erroneous. Under outdoor conditions house flies are killed during the first really cold night—that is, when the temperature falls to about 15 degrees or 10 degrees F. In rooms and similar places protected from winds and partially heated during winter, flies have been kept alive in cages for long periods; but they never lived through the entire winter. There is no reliable evidence whatever that adult house flies emerging during October and November pass the winter and are able to deposit their eggs the following spring, although they may continue active in heated buildings until nearly the end of January. On the other hand, there is evidence that house flies pass the winter as larvae and pupae, and that they sometimes breed continuously throughout the winter. In experiments at both Dallas, Tex., and Bethesda, Md. house flies have been found emerging during April from heavily infested manure heaps which had been set out and covered with cages during the preceding autumn. In the Southern States, during warm periods in mid-winter, house flies may emerge and become somewhat troublesome; they frequently lay eggs on warm days.

The second way in which the house fly may pass the winter is by continuous breeding. House flies congregate in heated rooms with the approach of the winter season. If no food or breeding materials are present they eventually die. However, where they have access to both food and suitable substances for egg laying they will continue breeding just as they do outdoors during the summer. Even in very cold climates there are undoubtedly many places, especially in cities, where house flies would have opportunity to pass the winter in this manner.

Modern Blouse Features Fanciful Collar Effects

The modern blouse specializes in novelty collar effects. Very unique is the collar and rever combination designed in this blouse. The yoke and long sleeves are also distinguishing characteristics of the newer blouse modes. The pin-plait plaid panels inset at each side of the front give a drowsy aspect to this model of flat crepe, which is developed in that highly favored color, powder blue. The blouse worn with side plaited skirt is a favored ensemble this season.

HEADACHE

Headache is one of the most common ills of civilized life; yet it is in a sense a mystery, which throughout the centuries doctors have failed to solve. Many of the causes of headache have been discovered, and it is comparatively easy to arrive at the main by means of drugs, but just what headache is and how the various causes act to produce it are puzzling questions.

It has been held that headache is always the result either of congestion or of an increase of cerebrospinal fluid exerting pressure upon the brain. But the anemic often suffer with headache, and when surgeons tap the canal in the spinal cord and remove much of the cerebrospinal fluid, thus reducing the pressure in the brain, severe headache may ensue nevertheless. The most common cause of periodical or almost daily headache is eyestrain, but it is by no means the only cause. One form of headache caused by eyestrain comes on in the evening, persists through the night and disappears in the morning. In other instances the attacks come on at irregular intervals and are then often exceedingly severe—"crashes" the patients sometimes call them. In those instances the patients are resistant to headache, and it is only when the evil influences of the eyestrain have been acting for some time that their accumulated force breaks down the nervous resistance of the sufferer. The attacks are much like migraine, but they are not that, for they all cease when the eyes are properly fitted with glasses, whereas glasses do not help migraine, which is believed to be a condition allied to epilepsy. Another common cause of headache is intranasal disease, or sinus disease. Trouble in the ear or in the throat may also, though less frequently, excite headache. A disordered stomach, so-called biliousness, is another cause; other causes are constipation and kidney trouble.

Headache is a prominent symptom at the beginning of all the infectious fevers and also in meningitis and brain tumors. A severe headache often ushers in an attack of apoplexy. Workers in artificial light often suffer from the actinic rays, and the same cause is active in the headache produced by reflection of the sun from water or from snow. Such cases may be relieved by wearing glasses made of Crookes glass. Finally, headache is an almost constant symptom in neurasthenia.

Much headache, as the sufferers know, can be relieved for the time being by the powders and potions for that purpose that fill the druggists' shelves, but such relief is only temporary. The cause behind the headache must be discovered and treated if the headache is to be permanently banished.

WHY THE MAPLES BLUSH
Many years ago, so long the nobody remembers, except the little fairy who told me, Jack Frost wished to woo Mildred Maple. Miss Maple didn't like Jack and told him so. This made Mr. Frost angry and he froze Miss Maples leaves.

The next day, when Mother Nature was walking through the woods she said, "why Mildred, what has happened to your leaves?" Mildred told her. Mother Nature exclaimed, "I am really ashamed of you for doing such a thing to one who was treating you so nice."

Miss Maple was very sorry now and she blushed so much that some of her leaves turned crimson, some scarlet and some became as sickly yellow because they were so ashamed.

To this day Miss Maples' ancestors blush every fall as they think of the disgrace of their great, great, great grandmother.

CROW SHOOTING CONTEST
A great powder company of this country is offering $2500 in merchandise prizes in a three-month's crow-killing contest.

The Audubon Societies of our country are protesting against the wholesale slaughter of the crow, claiming that while it destroys some corn when it first sprouts, the crow is engaged all the year round destroying insect pests that are harmful to the farmer.

Governor Baxter, of Maine is out in a vigorous protest against boasting the powder business by this method. He said this shooting contest will result in destroying most of the birds beside crows that are not protected by law.

Prominent naturalists all agree that the crow is one of the farmer's friends and should be entitled to the protection of law. They say that any extensive interference with the balance of natural life as nature has adjusted it is likely to have serious consequences.

Investigation has proved that where one species of wild life, particularly a bird like the crow which destroys insects, is driven away or killed in large numbers, the insects on which it lives are likely to become pests.

MILLIONS of DOLLARS

Were Lost by Growers of Burley Tobacco in 1923.

In selling dark, dingy, discolored tobacco. This condition can be prevented by using CLIMAX TOBACCO SAVER, a compound the fumes from which prevent sweat and houseburn, assisting nature in curing tobacco bright, sweet and sound. Used under tobacco when housed. Full and explicit directions on each package. Price $1 per acre, parcel post prepaid. Order now for July or August delivery. Place your order now and we will collect on delivery. Don't wait until too late. It is a PREVENTATIVE and not a cure for houseburn. Have it ready before you house tobacco. It will pay you to use it regardless of weather conditions as it cures tobacco uniformly and bright, saving many times its cost in stripping alone. It cures tobacco from one-half to one shade brighter in color, which gets you the high dollar when you sell. It has never failed.

RURAL Y. M. C. A. WORK

Henry Ford made an interesting gift recently, of $25,000 a year for three years, for promoting Young Women's Christian Association work in rural communities. As announced, it would appear that the money is to go into investigations to determine what forms such work should best take.

A movement like the Y. W. C. A. is in a position where with a moderate amount of money it could do a great deal of good in country life. What the young people in many country towns need is a little boosting to assist them to get out and form activities of their own. Left to themselves, they will often stagnate. In many communities there may be no one who has sufficient confidence, experience, or leisure to go ahead and organize these young people into lines of work and play that will be helpful to them.

But it has been demonstrated in many places, that by a little pushing from some experienced leader, young women and girls can be induced to go ahead, form useful organizations and accomplish worth while results. After a little experience these young people will run these organizations themselves, with perhaps a little assistance from outside. Often they will go it entirely alone.

If young people get accustomed at an early age to running their own organizations, they get into the habit of becoming community workers. Just what work such organizations should attempt varies in different communities. Probably this investigation for which Mr. Ford has provided will demonstrate what kind of work produces the best results. In some places it may take the form of garden or canning clubs, in others something of a more literary nature, in still others something to arouse the play spirit. Anything that brings the young women and girls together in a useful activity does a great deal for a country town.

LITTLE THINGS OVERLOOKED

What a blessing that we not all see alike. Were it not so every man would think your wife just as handsome as his own. Then there would be no fun in love, courtship and matrimony.

Truly it has been said that variety is the spice of life. In short, variety is what causes the wheels to go around, and makes life worth living.

The earth would soon weed-grow, and the people return to savagery. We talk about the earth growing older as the years go by. And so it is, according to the almanac, but the world is becoming newer. At least, there seems to be no end to new things, new phases of old things and old phases of new things.

Of topics worth studying there is no end, at least not in sight. The why and the wherefore of things is forever challenging us to discussion and the final outcome gives the mind a shunt from the present into the future.

The average mortal spends a lot of time looking into space, speaking to the echoes and listening for whispers from dark mystery-land, while the earth is filled with interesting, even thrilling events, to say nothing of the curious things, and startling conditions that comfort us at every step.

What a pity we are not taught to look downward to the interesting things of the earth on which we live, and not to sit and gaze into mysterious space through which an occasional meteor flits.

The average individual, young or old, has only the merest inkling of the interesting things that surround him wherever he may be. Had children been taught to look for the curious, the beautiful, the good, in nature, men would be reveling in the very heart of wonderland just now, for June time is the lifetime of the year.

A CONVENTION AFTERMATH

As a result of the Cleveland Convention it is currently reported in more or less authentic Washington circles that C. Bascom Slempp, secretary to President Coolidge, will drop out of the official family. Mr. Slempp is charged with having misrepresented the President in regard to Mr. Frank O. Lowden resulting in the humiliation of the managers.

It is also said in some quarters that John W. Weeks, Secretary of War, who is greatly dissatisfied with the way some things were done in Cleveland may soon drop out of the Cabinet.

Friends of Herbert Hoover whose name was presented at the last moment, under some misunderstanding, or mismanagement, are very bitter toward those responsible for "getting them in wrong," and it is intimated that Mr. Hoover is indifferent as to the tenure of office.

Neither of these gentlemen, however, will take any action that may have a tendency to handicap the president in his campaign.

While crop conditions over the county have been materially improved in the past few weeks many crops do not seem to be growing off as well as they have done in a normal season. The frequent rains continue to interfere with the cultivation of crops and a great deal of the corn is getting weedy and shows a yellow undesirable color. Tobacco is practically all set now and is growing off very well. The acreage is not believed to be nearly as large as was first planned. Many in ended tobacco fields have been planted in corn and others have been partly planted in corn. Practically all the tobacco will be set by the latter part of this week.

A warning to residents of the county living along the highways to cut the weeds and grass on property near the road is published in this issue by order of the Fiscal Court. Read and heed.

Farmers and gardeners are complaining that vegetation is rotting because of the abundance of rain.

Mr. Henry Wingate, who resides on the Florence place, is very ill.

Holland Is Not Progressive

Holland, a highly civilized nation, has few bathrooms and still fewer automobiles. Even the telephone is an exceptional addition to the house and is a mark of distinction to its owner.

WHY IT PAYS TO PRODUCE FOWLS OF QUALITY

It's the extra pound of flesh on the fowl that cheapens production costs and commands a premium price for the poultryman. According to the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation the extra pound can be put on for from 5 to 7 cents, which increases the value of each pound to the consumer by making the entire carcass more plump and attractive, so it commands a fancy price over lighter birds. Heavy hens sell from 5 to 11 cents more than light hens. It's true all down the line—turkeys, ducks, capons, hens and young fry—the extra pound brings the extra dollar.

Over a period of three years the New York market shows heavy fresh-killed milk-fed fowls or hens weighing 5 pounds or over to average from 4 to 11 cents higher per pound than the light fowls weighing 3 pounds. The five-year average for the month of September shows the heavy fowls to average 9 cents over the light weight, the margin broadening during October and November, reaching its height in December, when the heavy fowls range to 11 cents a pound over the light weights.

The average weight of the ordinary fowl as it comes from the farm is 3 1/2 to 4 pounds. The poultryman with the eye for business will add an extra pound or so and receive the top prices. The farmer who takes thin, underfed poultry to market is beating himself.

WHY IT PAYS TO PRODUCE EGGS OF QUALITY

That everything with a shell on goes, isn't the rule any longer. On the market today, it still goes, but at a price below a first-class egg. Opportunity for the greatest success in egg production lies in producing an article that is better than the average, then selling it as such. It isn't hard to find a market willing to pay a premium of 6 to 7 cents a dozen over firsts and from 9 to 13 cents a dozen over seconds, according to the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation.

The premium on fresh-gathered firsts at New York City during a three-year period over fresh-gathered seconds was substantial as shown by the accompanying chart. During February, March and April, when practically all eggs are good, the prices of extra firsts average only from 1 to 4 cents higher than for seconds. In May the spread begins to widen. In August the margin on extra firsts is around 9 cents. It continues to widen until in November, when the high peak is reached, with extras at 62 cents a dozen and seconds at 41 cents. It costs a little more and it takes a lot of extra effort to market high quality eggs. Yet the gain is ample return for the extra expense and labor.

Farm Production Falling Off

Population is gaining on crop production, according to a study made over a period of thirty-four years by the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation, based on figures of the United States Department of Agriculture. The accompanying chart shows crop production per capita is falling.

Taking the average of 1910 as 100, total crop production in the last three years averaged 106.3. Owing to the growth of population, per capita production has been only 92.8 when 100 represents the 1910-1914 average. The chart shows index numbers of both total and per capita production of crops from 1880 to 1923. The production record is based on the total yield of 10 crops—corn, wheat, oats, barley, rye, buckwheat, potatoes, hay, tobacco and cotton, which include more than 95 per cent of the total acreage of all crops. Since yields are expressed in various units, bushels, bales, tons and pounds, the crops are combined by applying a constant average price to the yearly production of each crop.

What Makes The Price of Butter

Evidently production, consumption and feed prices, all play an important part in regulating butter prices in a tariff-protected market like the United States. The cost of feed may regulate in the long run, but over periods of a few years it has little to do with the selling price of butter.

"But when I tell him he hates flattery. He says he does, being then most flattered."

—Julius Caesar.

"Ay, ay, vanity is truly the motive power that moves humanity, and it is flattery that greases the wheels," writes Jerome K. Jerome in his most entertaining dissertation on flattery. "Every one can be got over by flattery—whatever particular kind of an earl a belted earl may be, he is, I assert, get-over-able by flattery, just as every other human being is, from a duchess to a poet—and the poet far easier than the plowboy, for butter sticks better into wheaten bread than into oaten cakes."

"There are various ways of flattering," continues this author, "and, of course, you must adapt your style to your subject. Some people like it laid on with a trowel, and this requires very little art. With sensible persons, however, it needs to be done very delicately, and more by suggestion than actual words—those fine sturdy John Bulls who 'hate flattery'—'Never let anybody get over me by flattery' etc., etc., are very simply managed. Flatter them enough upon the absence of vanity and you can do what you like with them."

Bacon, in writing of the different varieties of flatters, says that if a man "be a cunning flatterer, he will follow the architect, which is a man's self; and wherein a man thinketh best of himself, therein the flatterer will uphold him most; but if he be an impudent flatterer, look wherein a man is conscious to himself that he is most defective and is most out of countenance in himself, that will the flatterer entice him to perform."

Aesop has a fable of a fox that wanted a piece of cheese that a crow held in her beak. The fox began to flatter the latter upon her singing, and the crow became so delighted that she opened her beak to sing for the fox, and so let fall the bit of cheese that the fox wanted.

Long before Aesop lived, writers had been warning mankind against the dangers of flattery. Bacon, however, points out one service done by flatterers—"when by telling men what they are, they represent to them what they should be." This is the variety of flattery in which women are especially adept—telling the small lad that he is too brave to cry, and so stopping the tears that come in his eyes; and assuring the older lad that he is able to conquer the world, and so spurring him on to the attempt.

The bonded indebtedness of the municipalities of the United States continues to increase, and new securities are being issued at the rate of about a billion dollars annually, according to a commentary upon the debt of more than two hundred cities, by C. F. Rightor, Chief Accountant, Detroit Bureau of Government Research. The average per capita debt of all cities of 2,500 or more is $70.30, but the per capita debt ranges from $258.62 for Norfolk to $10.96 for Quincy Ill. The per capita indebtedness in general, however, is below that of thirteen principal Canadian cities, in which it ranges from $363.05 in Edmonton, Alberta, to $112.02 in Hamilton, Ontario.

Rope of Human Hair

Egg gatherers of St. Kilda, a Scotch island in the Atlantic, consider themselves rich if their prospective brides can give them a rope of human hair. The ropes vary in length, a really good one is 40 or 50 feet, being especially prized. To manufacture such a rope is the work of years, but the St. Kildan girl saves her hair combings religiously.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

Some years ago it used to be said that country towns did not need any parks, as they were all surrounded by open country. But today many progressive rural villages are realizing that they need public recreation places.

Gregory, South Dakota, is a town where the need for park privileges has been felt, and that place years ago set aside 88 acres for this purpose. In this tract was high land on which reservoirs were placed for a water supply. Trees were planted, and swimming pools have been built, with bath houses. There are open places for games. The place is very popular with towns-people and tourists. A place with such facilities is doubly attractive for residence purposes.

Crops in Boone county are all doing well despite the fact that they were planted from 15 to 30 days later than the average. Early set tobacco is showing splendid growth and the late set is living nicely and starting well. The corn crop is very much later than the average but the hot weather in June and the frequent showers have served to give it a good start. Garden vegetables are coming on rapidly and will be abundant in a few more days. Early potatoes are extra early.

Raspberries and Dewberries have made their appearance, but we have not been able to secure enough to make a cobbler yet.

If you are very busy, be sure to plan a vacation. Vacations most often are taken by those who need them least. Those who need them most are executives and others who are away because of the tremendous pressure upon their time and attention. If any accurate record could be compiled of American men of affairs who commit suicide by overstrain, the public would be appalled. It isn't worth it.

Three hundred and forty-six summer schools and camps are to be held during the coming months throughout North America. Of this number, 286 are to be conducted in the United States. Institutes held by young people's societies, summer camps of various movements, and many other gatherings of local significance are not included in this tabulation.

Uncle Add Robbins, who has passed his 95th birthday, was in Burlington, last Saturday morning the first time since the death of his wife, who died last December. Although badly crippled up he manages to get around with the assistance of two canes, and for one of his age looks well. He claims he will live to be 100.

The following was received from Mrs. B. L. Stephens, of Ashland, Kansas:

"Enclosed please find check for amount due you and to extend my subscription to 1925. South west Kansas is in the midst of the finest wheat harvest she has had for years, both as to quality and quantity of grain."

Russell Doan and wife, after a week's visit with friends and relatives in Boone county, left Sunday for their home at Detroit, Michigan. They motored through in their auto passing through Illinois and Indiana on their way here.

Don't forget the picnic and all day outing at the Florence Fair grounds next Saturday, given by Garfield Post No. 2, G. A. R. of Covington. All the old soldiers and young soldiers and the public in general are invited to attend.

William Walton, who joined the U. S. Marines about two years ago, and is stationed at Paris Island, is at home with his mother, Mrs. Eliza Walton and other relatives for a 30 day furlough.

Luhn & Stevie, Covington's hustling merchants have an advertisement of their July Clearance Sale in this week's issue. Read it and when in Covington call in and see them.

The people who have been worrying for fear there would not be any summer this year, will probably now be worrying for fear the crops will all be burned up by the heat.

The young people have learned a great deal in their school and college courses, and many of them are sure that they know more than their fathers.

Don't forget the mid-summer spray for apples. This will help keep the worms out of the winter supply.

The painting of the tin work on the court house has added very much to the looks of the building.

A sale of the personal property of the late Jerry C. Conrad is advertised in this issue.

ROYAL CELEBRATION

OF INDEPENDENCE DAY IS HELD AT PETERSBURG, PATRIOTIC ADDRESS PARADE, BRASS BAND, AND BASE BALL.

Perhaps the most elaborate program in commemoration of July 4th that has been put on in Boone county in recent years was carried out this year at Petersburg. It was a program that not only required a lot of planning, but execution as well. The credit for the planning must go to R. H. Carter, while that for the execution must go to the citizens of the community, who are ever ready to help him in a worthy cause. To the casual observer the work that is necessary to arrange the details of a program, such as this one, is not so apparent, but to one that has attempted the same sort of thing, it is impossible for it to be overlooked.

The first event of the day was a junior base ball game between Petersburg and Bellevue, which was won by the local team by a rather one sided score although the Bellevue boys had trimmed Petersburg at Bellevue the week before in a twelve inning game. It was during this game that the brass band arrived from Lawrenceburg and began a concert, and let it be said right here that they were generous with their music, which cannot always be said of a band on a hot day.

Immediately after the lunch hour the parade formed on Front street led by Luther C. Surface, overseas hero, mounted on horse back, in true cavalier style, carrying the stars and stripes, and directly following him in their respective order was the band and several beautifully decorated floats and machines, which by the way, required quite a lot of preparation. In this parade were also about fifty small children decorated in red, white and blue hats and small American flags, and they lent quite an additional touch of picturesqueness to this feature.

At the conclusion of the parade the Rev. J. G. Duncan, Baptist minister of Aurora, who seems to have won a place in the hearts of Petersburg people, took the speakers stand and delivered a well chosen and inspiring address, which was highly appreciated by all, as it was truly American.

Then followed sack race, potato race and other events of equal nature which were indulged in by the junior element, but were about the most enjoyed events of the day.

At the conclusion of these events the Petersburg and Bellevue base ball teams took the field and began to do their stuff, and after they took the field the band was excused for the day, for as all county fans know, you don't need a band to stir up excitement when these two teams are on edge, and there was plenty of excitement as several among those present will testify. A more detailed account of this event will be found in the baseball column.

The refreshment stand was ably handled by the Circle Girls, the proceeds of which were applied to the expenses of the day.

CROP NOT SO LARGE

REPORTS OF POOL DIRECTORS SHOW PROBABLE DROP OF 10 TO 15 PER CENT IN THE DISTRICT'S PRODUCTION, AS COMPARED WITH 1923.

Lexington, Ky., July 3.—The 1924 crop of Burley tobacco will not be as large as that of 1923, and hardly more than 85 to 90 per cent of the 1923 crop, according to estimates of the directors of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association reported at the regular monthly meeting of the board here, counties reporting reductions in acreage varying from 5 to 25 per cent, with a probable average shortage of 10 to 15 per cent in the crop as compared with that of a year ago.

LIGHTNING

STRIKES AND KILLS TEAM FOR J. B. ARVIN.

Lightning killed the team of horses belonging to J. B. Arvin, Monday afternoon on the farm of A. L. Nichols about a mile south of Burlington. Mr. Arvin had the horses hitched to a harrow and stopped under a small locust tree during the rain. He was standing at the head of one of the horses at the time of the lightning flash which killed one of the horses instantly and the other lived only a short time. He was knocked down, slightly burned on the shoulder and stunned for a few moments. When he regained consciousness he found the horses were gone from the horses. The horses were insured in the Boone County Co., and the adjuster and members of the board of directors were in town and went to the scene and paid the loss in a very short time. How Mr. Arvin escaped being killed is a mystery.

What Will It Be?

KILLED UNDER AUTO

READING (OHIO) WOMAN DIES AFTER CRASH NEAR DEVON STATION—OTHERS IN ACCIDENT.

Mrs. Mollie Kirby, 28 years old, 206 Third street, Reading, Ohio, was killed near Devon Station, five miles south of Erlanger, Ky., early last Friday morning, when an automobile in which she, her husband, Robert Kirby, and three small children were riding, overturned in a ditch beside the Dixie Highway.

Passing motorists observed the overturned machine, under which Kirby and members of his family were pinned. They righted the motorcar, and after giving first aid, called Dr. C. R. Slater of Erlanger.

Mrs. Kirby expired a few moments after the arrival of the physician. She had suffered severe internal injuries and the children suffered slight cuts and bruises.

Mr. and Mrs. Kirby were on the way to Mt. Vernon, Ky., to pass a vacation at the home of relatives.

The body of Mrs. Kirby was removed to the funeral home of Philip Taliaferro, in Erlanger, who later removed it to the Kirby home in Reading.

BUSIEST PHONE HOURS

More telephone receivers come off their hooks between 9 and 10 o'clock in the morning than any other time of the day in the typical city. This "peak of the load" is due to the opening of business houses and orders being placed with the butcher, grocer and baker by housewives.

Between 12 and 1 o'clock the telephone traffic again rises while lunch engagements are made, then drops off until between 3 and 4 p. m., which is the busy period in the shopping districts.

Another peak is reached between 4 and 5 p. m., when the offices begin closing and again at 7 o'clock when evening "dates" are made. After that the traffic dwindles away and at midnight the switchboard is practically idle.

FARM FACTS

Special care and attention should be given to tomatoes during July. If the plants are staked they should be tied about every 10 days, if they are not staked plenty of good clean straw should be placed around the plants so as to keep the tomatoes out of the dirt and to conserve moisture. Be sure to keep all the suckers cut off the vines as they take the strength from the plants.

During July is the time to plant your late potatoes. The ground should be well prepared, the best possible seed secured and the potatoes given thorough cultivation with frequent applications of Bordeaux spray to control disease.

Either spray your cows to keep flies away or furnish some dark, well ventilated barn for them to go in the day time during the months of July, August and September.

Watch your sheep carefully to see that they do not become infested with worms.

THE POPULATION KEEPS GROWING.

The population of the U. S. increased by 1,762,000 in the latter half of 1923, according to an estimate by the national bureau of economic research. In spite of all that has been done to limit immigration, population keeps going ahead by long jumps.

At one time this increase would have been considered a reason for great jubilation. It does not arouse so much enthusiasm now. The question arises as to how we are going to feed and find work for all this swelling crowd. However, conditions must be fundamentally prosperous, or the population would remain nearer a stationary point.

HENRY WINGATE DEAD

AFTER SPENDING NEARLY THREEScore YEARS IN COUNTY OF BIRTH—A GOOD CITIZEN GONE.

Henry Wingate, aged 89, a well known farmer, died at his home on the Burlington and Florence pike, at 10:30 o'clock Saturday morning, July 6th, 1924, from a stroke of paralysis he suffered about a week ago. Mr. Wingate was born in Boone county near Bellevue in 1835, and was a son of the late Samuel and Rebecca Wingate.

He was united in marriage to Miss Lida Rue on August 31, 1891, and to this union six children were born, five sons and one daughter, Herman, Frank, Rue, David and Leonard and Mrs. Cabel Beemon. He spent his whole life in Boone county and followed the vocation of a farmer.

The remains were taken to Bellevue Monday afternoon, and after a short service at the grave, by Rev. W. W. Adams, were laid to rest in the cemetery at that place.

FAMILY REUNION

July 4th a reunion of the D. M. Snyder family was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Carpenter on the Burlington and Petersburg pike.

The sun smiled his pleasure upon the happy family thereby helping to complete their joy. Gathering from far and near bringing well-filled baskets for the inner man, there assembled at the table twenty-five persons. After enjoying a sumptuous repast the afternoon was spent in social conversation, music and singing. Among those present from a distance were Grover Snyder and wife, of North Madison, Ind., and Cleveland Snyder, wife and son, of Walnut Hills, Ohio. Among those present were the following: R. S. Lamp and wife, J. A. Kite and wife, L. T. Clore and family, C. L. Gaines and family, Mrs. Alice Snyder, Miss Arne's Cortin, Mrs. Craig Baldon and daughter, Grover Snyder and wife, Cleveland Snyder and wife, N. W. Carpenter and wife.

May they all assemble again, if not on earth, under God's throne in heaven is the sincere wish of the writer.

WHAT IS A KILOWATT HOUR?

Users of electricity—and that includes just about all of us—find it difficult to understand the term "kilowatt hour."

"Kilowatt hour" is a term used to indicate the electrical unit of work and is a thousand watt hours.

A watt represents the rate of work done by one ampere under the pressure of one volt. A volt is the unit of electromotive force. An ampere represents the quantity of electricity which will flow through certain resistance when one volt of pressure is applied.

Voltage is equivalent to pressure. Amperage is equivalent to volume. The product of the two indicates quantity, called the wattage. Line voltage for lighting purposes is usually 110 volts. An ordinary electric lamp requires about five-eighths of an ampere for proper operation. Multiplying 110 by 5/8 gives the quantity of electricity necessary to heat the filament of the lamp to incandescence. In this case 50 watts would be necessary, and if the flow continued one hour, the meter would register 50-watt hours of current. Burn the lamp for 20 hours and the electricity consumed amounts to 1,000 watt hours, or one kilowatt hour, kilowatt meaning one thousand.

The most nearly self-supporting nation in America is said to be that of North Carolina where farms on the average produce 75 per cent of all food used by their occupants. In the nation at large farms produce slightly more than 60 per cent of the needs of farm families.

AMERICAN LEGION

CELEBRATES IN APPROPRIATE FASHION, DANCING, GOOD MUSIC, FIREWORKS.

Boone Post No. 4 of the American Legion showed to citizens of this county that it is not asleep, nor anywhere near it, when it comes to appropriate observation of Independence day.

About six o'clock p. m., machines began to roll into the historic Harvest Home grounds near Limasburg, to indulge in a fitting climax to an already well spent fourth.

Those in charge of the affair had prepared everything for a good time. A well handled refreshment stand was stocked with everything necessary for such an occasion, and the Keim Orchestra, composed of five young men from Petersburg and Bellevue, were on hand with excellent renditions of popular dance air.

The crowd increased in numbers until about 9:30 when there were approximately seven or eight hundred people on the dance floor and gathered about the pavilion.

At this juncture J. P. Brothers, one of the chief promoters of the occasion, announced the fire works display in a field adjoining the picnic grounds whereupon all adjourned to said spot and witnessed the display of about one hundred dollars worth of bombs, skyrockets, etc.

After this dancing was resumed and continued until the closing hour.

This was the first picnic of the season on these grounds and from all reports was a clean one, when plenty are conducted as this one there can be no objection to them.

Those promoting the affair deserve praise for its success.

MASONIC LODGE INSTITUTED

Last Saturday night a number of Masons from Newport journeyed to Petersburg to help the Masons at that place to institute and set to work a Masonic lodge.

C. S. Rankins, Grand Junior Warden of the State of Kentucky was present and acted as the installing officer, assisted by other members of his local lodge.

The following officers were duly installed:

Otway Deck, W. M.
Wilson White, S. W.
Claude McWethy, J. W.
Chas. Cox, S. D.
Weindel Keim, J. D.
Perry Mahan, Sejm.
J. C. Bolen, Treas.
Jesse Louden, Tyler.

After the installation ceremony refreshments were served and greatly enjoyed by all present.

The Petersburg membership expressed their gratitude to Brother Rankins for the interest he has taken in them and for the advice he has given. He has advised and consulted with them many times since they first started the movement to get a lodge at Petersburg.

WEEDING THE GARDEN.

One of the traditional jobs that used to be handed over to the young crowd was to weed the garden. The older folks said that the youngsters with their good strong backs, were the ones to do this hard work. It did not look so to Johnny and Billy, as they bent over the dusty ground on a hot July day, and thought longingly of the cool swimming pool and whether his wife would bite.

These youngsters however learned lessons at the old weeding job that they never forgot. One was that a poorly mended weed, with its head merely cut off, springs up again in about two days, and thumbs its saucy nose at you. Better make a thorough job of him, and pull him up by his dirty old root, so he will never bother you again.

The boy that went over his garden patch so thoroughly that no weed dared show his head for a fortnight, is the fellow who today is living on Easy street, on a success built on thorough work and service.

RED CROSS NEWS.

Mr. Davis, Field Representative A. R. C. visited the local chapter this week. There are now only two field representatives in Kentucky so they are able to give only a small portion of their time to a chapter.

Prizes were given by the Boone county chapter to the boy and girl at the Junior Camp, at Florence having the most perfect teeth.

The winners of the miniature First Aid Kits were Emma Lipcomb of Kenton county, and LaVerne Sullivan, of Union, Boone county.

South Dakota makes two cents profit on each gallon of gasoline sold at the State distributing points, after paying 2 cents tax per gallon. The State officials declare that the State has already made a profit of $3,000,000 and gasoline users have been saved millions of dollars.

DOG-CATCHER CAUGHT.

A gang of poachers from Cincinnati stole a dog from L. C. Weaver's farm down on Gunpowder last Sunday afternoon a week ago, the dog being in custody of Glen Crisler, who occupies Mr. Weaver's farm. It was a fine beagle hound and Mr. Weaver was very much incensed over his loss, so last Sunday, when some one recognized the same truck passing thru Burlington going west, they notified Deputy Sheriff Utz and Mr. Weaver, and in less than three hours they had captured the guilty party, taken him to Pleasant Ridge, Ohio, recovered the dog and returned to Burlington, which is quite some action we would say. Boone county people extend a welcome to tourists from adjoining states if they are the right kind of people, but this kind make it hard on those who come out intending to have a good time and behave themselves. When a few incidents take place such as this it makes local farmers a little bit leary of everyone.

BURGLARS

BREAK INTO ERLANGER POST OFFICE BY FORCING ENTRANCE THRU APERTURE.

The Erlanger postoffice was broken into by burglars last Sunday night or early Monday morning by what apparently seemed to be amateur yeggmen.

The back window had been "jimmied" and entrance forced thru the aperture, but upon investigation postal employees did not miss more than eight or ten dollars in stamps and money.

The safe containing about nine hundred dollars, was left untouched by the burglars, for which reason it might be deducted that they were either surprised or very green at the business.

WHAT THE COUNTRY DISTRICTS NEED.

For several years past, a viti tide of country people have been removing into the cities. This migration is justified by some thinkers, on the theory that there have been more people living in rural communities than can find profitable work there. They claim that these folks are practically forced to get into the larger centers, since there are more people engaged in the rural industries than can make a living on them.

Yet it is generally admitted that country life is more healthful than city life, that it creates an environment in which children come up with more practical ideas and better standards of conduct, and that the rural communities as a whole stand for sounder conceptions of government, and more honest service than prevail in a rule among the masses of the cities.

Hence it is a public misfortune if to any extent rural life seems to lack that general prosperity and well being which it must have if the nation is to make steady progress.

CHILD LABOR IS WRONG

Child labor is worse than the 12-hour day. Neither has any place in this country. Judge Gary and most steel leaders long argued that 12-hour day was necessary. Some manufacturers and others argue that child labor is necessary. That which is wrong is never necessary. Congress has done its duty by authorizing the States to vote upon an amendment to the Constitution which would allow the passing of effective Federal laws to regulate the hours and working conditions of children under 15. Business should not block such desirable, humane reform. Business men, in fact, should take the leadership in arousing State legislatures to act favorably. Private enterprises will not be allowed to continue indefinitely unless it compels itself to the quickened conscience of the rank and file of Americans.

HOWARD J. ECKLER DEAD

Howard J. Eckler, aged 28 years passed away Sunday at the home of his sister, Mrs. Albert Sickmeyer, Erlanger, after a lingering illness of tuberculosis.

Funeral services were held from the late residence Tuesday at 2:00 p. m., by the Rev. Stambaugh, in the presence of a large concourse of relatives and friends, interment following in Highland cemetery.

Mr. Eckler is survived by his widowed mother and one sister. Funeral arrangements were in charge of Philip Taliaferro.

LUTHERAN LEAGUE PICNIC

The Lutheran League of Cincinnati, gave a picnic at the Florence Fair grounds on Friday, July 4th. Quite a number of people from Florence, Lebanon and Hopeful neighborhoods attended the picnic and helped make the day enjoyable.

A newspaper exchange speaks of the cabbage growers organizing in its locality. Now if the cabbage growers should organize, the political speakers should watch out.

JUNIOR CLUB CAMP
COMPLETE SUCCESS

The Junior Club Camp which was held at the Florence Fair Grounds, June 30 to July 4th was one of the biggest successes of the year, according to H. J. Matson and C. A. Wicklund, County Extension Agents of Boone and Kenton counties who were in charge.

Fifty boys and girls assembled Monday morning for a week's good time and when they left they voted unanimously that everyone had had an excellent time every minute.

Mr. E. E. Fish was camp manager again this year and brought with him Misses Gormley and Prewett who instructed the girls along home economics lines. Mr. Ashby as nature study man, Mr. Graham as Agricultural teacher, Mr. Ewald of Fort Thomas as Y. M. C. A. man and Miss Hoffman as Red Cross Nurse. This staff along with the county agents was responsible for the fine time that everyone had.

Each day the morning was spent in classes and the afternoons in playing games. Eleven o'clock speakers were as follows: Tuesday A. B. Renaker, Cashier of the Peoples Deposit Bank, Burlington, spoke on Thrift, Wednesday Dr. M. A. Yelton of Burlington spoke of First Aid and Thursday Mrs. J. C. Layne of Erlanger Route 4, who has had a wide experience in woman's organizations spoke of her travels through the West and offered several fine selections on her banjo.

Each night was crowned with a very inspiring vesper service which were in charge of the following ministers: Monday, Rev. Gillespie, Burlington, Tuesday Rev. Garber Union, Wednesday, Rev. Rogers of Erlanger and Thursday Rev. Carter of Petersburg, who brought a quartet of girls who sang sacred hymns which added much to the services.

Thursday was visitors day and many parents turned out to see and share in the good times that the boys and girls were having. Over 500 gathered that evening for vesper and for the stunts around the enormous bonfire which burned all night.

Friday morning after breakfast prizes were awarded and camp broke leaving many tired but happy boys and girls return again to their homes.

In the athletic contests, Adelia Riddell of Hebron scored highest as the best girl athlete and John Crigier of Hebron scored the highest number of points as the best boy athlete.

Star Campers this year were Ann Miller and Grant Maddox of Florence, Virginia Yelton, Burlington, Virginia Utz and Ralph Barlow of Union.

IDLEWILD.

Mrs. Esten Snyder is in Erlanger with her aunts, the Misses Kirtley, of Home street.

Mr. V. W. Gaines is recovering rapidly from an operation for the removal of her tonsils.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Grant and children spent Sunday in Burlington with Mrs. Lorena Cropper.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dove will move in a few weeks to their handsome new home in Erlanger.

Mrs. Wm. Stephens has with her, her sister, Mrs. F. L. Haden and small grandson of Indianapolis.

Dr. Henry Lee Grant and Mrs. Grant left Sunday for Louisville after a pleasant two week's visit with H. H. Grant.

After spending several weeks with her Boone county kinspeople Mrs. Sallie Calmes, has returned to her home in Lexington.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Davis, of Erlanger, were among the guests at a delightful dinner given Sunday by Mr. and Mrs. James T. Gaines.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Kreylich and Miss Mattie Kreylich spent Thursday in Ludlow with Mrs. Kate Riley. Mrs. Riley accompanied them home for an indefinite visit.

Mrs. Thomas Grant, who has been confined to her home for a number of years with rheumatism, is much better and able to be out again, to the delight of her many friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben H. Berkshire, Miss Cordelia Berkshire and their guests, Mrs. Stanley Palmer and Master Bobby Palmer, of Auburn, Indiana, and Mr. Norris Berkshire, of North Carolina, spent Sunday near Lawrenceburg with Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Norris.

NOTICE.

All persons having claims against the estate of G. G. Hughes deceased, will present same to me proven as the law requires. All persons owning said estate will pay same to me.

WHY BLAME THE POLITICIANS?

There never was a time when the politician was more unpopular or held in such low esteem as he is today, not only in the United States but throughout Europe. But while the politician may not be living up to the high responsibilities which rest upon him, in a great measure the crimes attributed to him are the crimes of the electorate. A well known Congressman once frankly confessed that it cost him $80,000 to be elected, besides painting half the school-houses and churches in his district, and he wondered if those who took his money were not the ones really responsible for his efforts to get some of it back. Every year or two we have contests and investigations involving the use of "boodle" but the fact remains that the electorate itself was at least a party to the crime. Discussing this phase of our democracy the Christian Science Monitor asserts "democracy is but a means to an end, and that end is the growth in understanding and character of the electors themselves, because democracy forces them to learn from their own mistakes. No country can have a government better than the people will elect, and progress, therefore, depends on improving not so much the politicians as the people."

The real way to get rid of the type of politician that now afflicts the world is not to abuse him with folded hands, but for good citizens to stand on sound programs and for the people themselves to show by their votes that they respect state-manship and are willing to support it wherever it appears.

THE SILENT COUNTRY FOLKS. It has often been remarked by city people that country folks are as a rule silent, and seem stiff and ill at ease in conversation. If they had ever attended a genuine country picnic or other merry-making, they might have discovered that the country folks can talk fast enough when there is anything to say.

It is perhaps true that country people are not masters of small talk. The city folks have many social occasions where they talk for the sake of talking, and become highly skillful at making conversation out of nothing. The country people are glad to talk when anything needs to be said. Social polish is a fine thing, but the country people would as a rule prefer to spend their time doing things rather than in aimless conversation.

Ladies of Presbyterian Church Will Serve Ice-Cream and Lemonade.

CIVIL AND RELIGIOUS EQUALITY FOR WOMEN.

During the closing session of the General Council of the Presbyterian Church in Atlantic City, a petition by women church members demanding equal recognition with voting power, in the synods and presbyteries, or as a separate body of the church was flatly refused. For women church members to sit with full voting power, in a synodical or presbyterial meeting, would necessitate their first being ordained as ministers or elders, and the question of ordaining women as elders was opposed by the Presbyteries themselves two years ago. The constitution of the church prohibits the ordination of women as ministers.

This question is but the entering wedge of what promises to necessitate a radical change in many religious organizations. It is admitted that were it not for the women the church would not amount to much—either socially or financially, and they are beginning to resent the restraint placed upon them because of an ancient and obsolete custom. It will also be admitted that many women are better qualified to officiate as elders and trustees, and perhaps preachers, than many men who now fill these positions. With civilization and education comes increased demands for equality, religious as well as civil, and the procession moves ever onward and forward. Old customs must go to the scrap heap if we are to keep step with the hand wagon.

LEGION NOTES

Buffalo, Wyoming.—The American flag presented by the late President Wilson to the Mountain Lion Patrol Troop 3, Boy Scouts of Buffalo, Wyoming, for distinguished service in aid of the second Liberty Loan, was recently presented by the scouts to Powder River Post of The American Legion here. In making the presentation of the flag, Samuel Adams, ex-scout of the troop honored by President Wilson, remarked: "This flag has meant and still means very much to the Mountain Lion Patrol of the Boy Scouts, but since you fought for it and all we did was work for it, we believe that this flag should belong to you."

The women are urged to "enter" politics. With the opposition of some old line politicians to encounter, it may take a burglar's jimmy to get in.

A person who can entertain depressed views about the future of the short-cake season needs to take some tonic.

As President Coolidge is to have a back porch campaign, he must realize that the back yard must be kept thoroughly cleaned up.

Notice.

Boone County Fiscal Court.

Special Session, May 6, 1924.

It is ordered by the Court that every owner, controller and manager of lands bordering and abutting upon the public highways of Boone Co. for the distance for which land abuts and borders, to cut, clear away and remove from along the said highway, all bushes, weeds, shrubs, and overhanging limbs of trees, and all other such obstructions along said highways, and also keep all hedge fences along such highways, so trimmed and cut back that the same at no time will become more than five feet high.

The same to be done between July 1st, 1924 and August 1st, 1924.

AS PUNISHMENT FOR having punched out of the assembly's barons' chamber in the eye during a row at the exclusive Chevy Chase Golf Club, Secretary of War Robert H. Tamm has been suspended by the Board of Directors and may be expelled for good. Robinson has been ordered to appear before the board to make a formal explanation of this bombardment to the directors.

THE CABINET WILL BE expected to the four winds in a few days, with no reference intended to the great Chinese game. Secretary of State Hughes is going to London to attend the convention of the American Bar Association. Secretary of Commerce Hoover is going to his home in Palo Alto, Calif., to spend the summer. Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, with his daughter, will spend his usual summer vacation in Europe. Secretary of War Weeks will retire to his Massachusetts farm, and others will disappear elsewhere. The President intends to stay here most of the summer, on the ground that the White House is about as comfortable a place as he could find—with a radio station handy to broadcast campaign speeches.

THE IRISH FREE STATE is to have a full-fledged Minister Plenipotentiary in Washington. He is Dr. Timothy A. Smiddy, a former professor at Cork University, who has already been in the United States for several months. In diplomatic matters, however, which affect the British Empire in addition to the Free State, the British Ambassador will be prepared to step in as usual. The Smiddy appointment is expected to be followed soon by an exchange of Ministers between the U. S. and Canada.

USE OF POISON gas by mail robbers in the Chicago district recently will lead to the furnishing of gas masks to railway mail clerks, according to plans of the Postoffice Department. The clerks already have revolvers and saved-off shotguns, but these are not enough. The War Department has been asked to provide 5,000 gas masks for the mail force.

ATTORNEY GENERAL STONE has leaped into the trust-busting class with his anti-trust suit against 50 of the nation's greatest oil companies and refineries. Stone has been working on this suit night and day ever since he followed Harry Daugherty into the Attorney-General's office. It is really his premier in his new job as attorney for the United States. Reports are heard that one of the results of the suit will be a reduction of gasoline prices throughout the country, but it may be a year or more before the issue is finally decided in the Supreme court.

JOEL T. BOONE, Chief Medical Officer of the Presidential yacht MAYFLOWER is slated to succeed Brig. Gen. Sawyer as the White House physician. Both Boone and the President are graduates of Amherst and are good friends.

THE INTERDEPENDENCE OF SECTIONS

Much has been said at the two national conventions as to the needs of this or that section that has been suffering from some special economic difficulties. Politicians realize, when a national election comes on, that they must relieve such conditions, although if the elections were more remote, they might feel less the need for action.

People ought to realize, whether an election is impending or not, that the interdependence of sections is very close. If conditions are bad today in one section, all other sections soon feel the result in the lowered demand for their products.

The complaints that come from a depressed locality are some times viewed with indifference and even amusement in others. People do not wake up to the difficulties of other localities, until they begin to suffer themselves. They should realize that we are all one great country, and that the welfare of our own locality is closely dependent upon the prosperity of people thousands of miles away. We must all look out for each other's interests.

The Communists claim they are "forward looking" people. If they would look backward as well as forward, they would know a little more about how their ideas have worked in the past.

Principal trouble with Congress is that the time which should be spent in passing laws is spent in passing the buck.

Hegeman Laboratory is Dedicated To Conduct War On Tuberculosis

The dedication of the Hegeman Memorial Laboratory at Mt. McGregor near Saratoga Springs, N. Y., marks a step forward in the fight on tuberculosis, according to the medical authorities who participated in the ceremony recently.

The new stone structure is a harmonious architectural feature of the sanatorium group of twenty-two buildings, which the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company maintains for the benefit of the sick among the 20,000 of its field and home office staff.

It was provided for by a fund of $300,000 in the will of the late John Rogers Hegeman, president of the company from 1891 to 1913, to whom the building is a memorial.

"We hope—we even expect," declared Halsey E. Fiske, now president of the company, "that some discovery will be made here that will be connected with the name of the donor and will be of lasting benefit to future generations."

Dr. Edward R. Baldwin, head of Trudeau Sanatorium at Saratoga Lake and one of the foremost authorities on tuberculosis, welcomed the new laboratory into the field of scientific research. "The sanatorium represents what we know about tuberculosis," he declared.

The laboratory represents what we do not know, but must find out. An interesting figure at the ceremony was the Rev. Father P. M. Waggott, famous British scientist and theologian who studied with the great Pasteur, foremost scientist of the nineteenth century. "Only today are we beginning to understand the greatness of Pasteur," he said. "The world knows nothing of its greatest men, the unseen workers, secret, cloistered, hidden, studying tirelessly until one day the world learns that they have discovered a cure for some disease." The Metropolitan sanatorium has been the chief means, directly through its treatments, and indirectly, through the instruction passed on to fellow workers by former patients, in reducing by 60 per cent the death rate from tuberculosis among the company's employees, within a period of ten years.

ITALY SKIDDING ON "OIL"

Italy is going through a similar experience to that of the U. S. and the bottom of the trouble seems to be "oil" and the Sinclair interests.

On June 10, the Italian Socialist Deputy Giacomo Mattotti was seized by four men in a public street and dragged into a waiting automobile. He may still be alive, but, if so, he has not been able to communicate with his family or his party, of which he was the secretary. An expert in financial matters, he was a legislator on whom his country had counted and therefore was a menace to the party in power. Many clues point to a political crime, not the least of which is the attempted flight of prominent members of the Fascisti, some of whom are under arrest.

Like the oil scandals in Washington, this outrage has touched the ruling faction very closely. As in the United States, the Minister of the Interior, accused of having accepted money from the same American oil company, has resigned. As in the case of Daugherty the Perfect of Police has been forced out of office. In both countries editors of newspapers supporting the administration have become involved. In each country, full and even-handed justice has been promised by the head of the government, and it is a strong tribute to the force of public opinion that a dictator like Benito Mussolini cannot afford to ignore it any more than an American President elected by a record-breaking majority. There are certain limits beyond which it is not safe even for the most highly placed politicians to go in any country.

CRITICISING CONGRESS

Congress has been severely criticized in certain influential quarters for its failure to adopt measures advocated by the President, and for enacting laws which the President did not approve. These critics seem to overlook the fact that Congress, not the President, is the law-making power. There is hardly a monarch in the world today who would dare to presume to dictate to parliament. The only places where the head of the government imposes his will upon a subservient legislature are Russia and Italy, and a little in Spain, but it will hardly be claimed that this represents democracy as defined by the Constitution of the U. S.

While it is lawful and proper for the President to suggest legislation, it is extremely unlikely that Congress will take kindly to the argument that it should vote as directed by the President. Elected directly by the people of their states and districts, they have a mandate to support such legislation as their constituents may think desirable, and cannot justly be blamed if they refuse to surrender their prerogative. They may be mistaken as to the wishes of their constituents, but that is a matter that will be adjusted in their own districts for the electorate will have the last say.

While the Ten Commandments represent the eternal law of righteousness and wisdom, and ought to be obeyed, it is a safe bet that there are people who think they should be repealed because they are not obeyed or enforced.

"For man is man and master of his fate."—Lydell of the King.

This is the spirit that we find set forth in Henley's "Invictus":

Out of the night that covers me,
I think whatever gods may be
My unconquerable soul.

It matters not how strait the gate,
How charged with punishments the
I am master of my fate:

I am the captain of my soul.

Few men, however, are satisfied to be masters of their own fate; they wish to be masters of the universe and its fate as well—as Epictetus puts it:

"When it is in our power to take care of one thing, and to apply to one, we choose rather to take care of many, and to lumber ourselves with many; property, property, brother, friend, and slave; and by this multiplicity of incumbrances we are burdened and weighed down. Thus, when the weather does not happen to be fair for sailing, we sit screwing ourselves, and perpetually looking out. What have we to do with that? When will it be a west wind blow? When itself, friend, or Aeolus please; for Jupiter has not made us dispenser of the winds, but Aeolus."

Just as Descartes arrived at his philosophy of belief through first doubting everything, even mathematics, so man becomes master of his fate through being able to say sincerely: Conduct me, Jove, and thou, O Destiny, Wherever you decrees have fixed me. Or through meaning what many millions say by rote, meaningless: "It will be done in earth, as it is in heaven."

Epictetus points out Diogenes as an example of a man who was master of his fate and captain of his soul: "Not because he was free of parents, for he was not; but because he was so himself, because he had cast away all the handles of slavery, nor was there any way of getting at him, nor anywhere to lay hold on him to enslave him. Everything sat loose upon him, everything only just hung on. If you took hold of his possessions, he would rather let them go than follow you; if on his leg, he let go his leg; if his body, he let go his body; acquaintance, friends, country, just the same. But he would never have forsaken his true parents, the gods, and his real country."

California fruit growers have set the pace in America for more than 30 years in the co-operative marketing of farm products. They early faced the problems of a large and increasing production of perishable commodities, at a great distance from the large consuming centers of the country. In 1891, with 400 carloads of citrus fruit to sell, if already appeared that the growers faced overproduction. Thirty years later 56,000 carloads were marketed without trouble. Local co-operatives came first and as they grew in number they federated to form the strong sales agency they now have.

We shall advance when we have learned humility; when we have learned to seek truth, to reveal it, and publish it; when we care more for that than for the privilege of arguing about ideas in a fog of uncertainty.—Walter Lippmann.

WHAT TO EAT

Canned corn is such a wholesome vegetable and is so well liked that a few dozen cans put on the cellar shelf will be enjoyed during the winter. After serving the corn with butter, cream and seasoning of salt and pepper, if any is left over make some fritters to serve with the fried chicken.

Peas a la Francaise.—Cook three tablespoons of butter with one slice of bacon for five minutes; remove the bacon and add two cups of peas and eight small peeled onions. Cover with boiling water and cook until the vegetables are soft. Drain, add one-fourth of a cupful of cream and one egg yolk slightly beaten. Season well with salt and pepper.

Mushroom Soup.—Brush one-half pound of mushrooms, break caps into small pieces and chop the stems. Add to three parts of chicken broth, bring it gradually to the boiling point and let simmer thirty minutes. Cool and clear with the whites and shells of two eggs. Season to taste and serve hot.

A platter of overlapping slices of cold roast lamb may be garnished with mounds of hot cooked spinach in which is placed a seasoned poached egg—the whole finished with a border of watercress.

Allen Potato Salad.—Cut cold boiled potatoes into one-half-inch cubes. Take one and one-half cupfuls. Add three chopped hard-cooked eggs, one and one-half tablespoons of chopped pimiento, one-half tablespoonful of finely chopped onion. Moisten with a cream salad dressing and serve in nests of lettuce.

Hashed Brown Potatoes.—Try out fat salt pork cut into small cubes and remove the scraps; there should be one-third of a cupful of fat. Add two cupfuls of cold boiled potatoes finely chopped, pepper and salt if needed. Mix potatoes thoroughly with the fat, cook three minutes, stirring constantly, then let stand to brown underneath. Fold as an omelette and turn out on a hot platter.

A Kansas farmer has a mowing machine he has used every season since 1861 and a binder that he has used for 40 years with a total repair bill of 90 cents. The secret of such economy in equipment is good care, he says, which means first of all a tight tool shed for machinery, and covering for expensive equipment when it is not in use.

The people who used to sing "Wait till the clouds roll by," now spend about all their spare time waiting for the automobiles to roll by so they can get across the street.

DAIRY POINTS

Requirements Outlined for Good Dairy Ration

The requirements of a good dairy ration are: 1. It must be balanced. 2. It should be palatable. 3. It must be laxative. 4. It should be sufficiently bulky. 5. It should contain a variety of feeds. 6. It must be adapted for milk production. 7. It should be of lowest possible cost.

In order to feed cows economically it is essential that the roughage be produced on the farm. Home grown feeds cost less than if purchased. Many farms can also produce some grain feeds.

A good cow will require the following feed for a year:

Roughage—4 tons silage, 1½ tons less for hay—alfalfa, cowpeas or peanut; 1 ton sudan sorghum or kaffir, fed green when pastures are dry or an extra ton of silage provided for the dry season; 1 acre wheat, oats or rye, for winter pasture.

Grain Ration—700 pounds corn, kaffir or barley chop; 400 pounds cottonseed meal or peanut meal; 200 pounds wheat bran. (Some ground oats can be substituted if desired, or the amount of bran increased, depending upon the roughage available.)

Heavy milk producers may need some grain even when on a good grass pasture. A Jersey cow giving the following amounts of milk per day can probably be fed grain as indicated: 20 pounds milk, 3 pounds grain; 30 pounds milk, 5½ pounds grain; 40 pounds milk, 8 pounds grain. Holstein cows: 25 pounds milk, 3 pounds grain; 35 pounds milk, 5½ pounds grain; 45 pounds milk, 9 pounds grain.

A balanced ration for dairy cows may be calculated by consulting a table of digestible nutrients usually found in books on feeding and considering the feeds available and obtainable.

Here are a few helps in making a dairy ration, suggested by Professor Dyer:

1. After balancing the grain mixture for the average cow in the herd, mix enough for a week's supply.
2. Have at least two laxative feeds in the ration (alfalfa hay and bran are laxative).
3. One-third of the grain by weight should be of bulky character.
4. Add one pound of salt to each 100 pounds of grain.
5. Adjust the amount of grain for each cow to the amount of milk.
6. Silage may be fed at the rate of 2½ to 3½ pounds per 100 pounds live weight of cow.
7. Feed one pound good dry roughage for 100 pounds live weight of cow.

Cheese Lags in Bigger Use of Dairy Products

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

While the consumption of dairy products in the United States is increasing, there is still room for dairy interests to expand through creating an increase in the consumption of cheese, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Although the American people are large eaters of butter compared with European peoples, they consume relatively small amounts of cheese. The consumption of cheese is approximately 3.8 pounds per person, while in some European countries the consumption is four or five times this amount. Cheese of the American Cheddar type is chiefly manufactured in this country, but there is a demand for cheese of foreign varieties, especially by persons who have come from foreign countries. Before the war more than 60,000,000 pounds of cheese, or approximately one-fifth as much as was produced of all varieties in this country, was imported annually.

Increasing the consumption of cheese offers large opportunities for the development of the dairy industry. If the people of this country would consume as much cheese per capita as the Dane, the Englishman, the Hollander, the German, or the Frenchman, or half as much as the Swiss, it would create a market for 9,000,000,000 pounds of milk more than is required at the present time.

Observation indicates that most men would freeze their ears rather than wear ear muffs. However, this is a free country.

Automobilists who have abstained from running down pedestrians say that the custom is quite conducive of peace of mind.

There would seem to be material enough at large at the moment in Europe to organize an Association of Dropped Pilots.

This new microphone that makes the conversation of insects audible is clearly an accessory that comes with every mosquito.

How to Remove Old Wax
Mix equal quantities of sal soda and slaked lime, using about one pound of the mixture to a pailful of water. Apply this with a mop, and afterwards scrub the floor with sand, soap and water. If necessary, apply diluted sulphuric acid, one part of acid to ten parts of water. Afterwards rinse in water containing a little ammonia and wipe dry. Remove any remaining traces of wax by means of turpentine, otherwise shellac will not adhere.

HIVES

Hives, a form of skin trouble medically known as urticaria, is often spoken of by its popular name, nettle rash, because the distinctive type of the eruption looks like it is caused by the sting of a nettle; that is to say, it occurs in the form of wheels, which are red or red and white slightly raised patches, and is usually accompanied with intense itching. The wheals may appear in the course of a few seconds and may last any time from a few seconds to a week or longer; then, if the sufferer has not broken the skin by scratching, they will disappear and leave no trace. In some cases the trouble will persist for a long time; the wheals will appear and disappear here and there, but never quite clear up. That condition is named chronic urticaria. The acute attack often lasts only for a few days or at most for a day or two; during that time evenscented crops of wheals come and go.

Hives may occur at any age, but is more usual in children. In most cases it can be traced to some error in diet or to some digestive disturbance. Personal idiosyncrasy must be taken into account; there are articles of food that certain people cannot eat without having hives immediately. Most prominent among these articles are shellfish, strawberries, pork and all highly seasoned foods. There are also drugs that bring on attacks in persons who are predisposed—opium, quinine, valerian, turpentine and in some people any of the coal tar products. In chronic urticaria there is often the so-called gouty diathesis or some other condition in which the balance between assimilation and excretion is disturbed. Hives may also accompany violent emotional disturbance in people of unstable nervous balance.

Local treatment is directed to curing the intense itching that generally accompanies the trouble, and systemic treatment to correcting errors in diet. It should be needless to add that, if a personal susceptibility has declared itself—if, for example, a meal including shellfish is followed by an outbreak of wheals—the victim may just as well make up his mind to eschew shellfish or the particular form of shellfish that he has just eaten. For allaying the itching an alkali or an acid lotion may be used. Epsom's bonate of soda in water is almost always speedily efficacious.
So is common salt. But whether bicarbonate or salt, it must be used freely so that the solution may be strong. Similar baths in which vinegar or some other acid is used are almost as efficacious, but are not quite so pleasant; nothing is to be gained by substituting them for the alkalis.

SUMMER FEEDS FOR THE DAIRY COW

Many farmers do not realize the importance of feeding the cow during the summer months, July, August and September. They depend entirely upon the pasture to furnish all the feed necessary. This is a serious mistake according to J. J. Hooper, Head of the Section of Dairying, College of Agriculture. If the cow is not properly fed during the summer months she will lose weight and her milk production will drop. She will go into winter in this condition and will not be able to produce anything like the pounds of butter fat that she should. A good summer mixture to supplement pasture is as follows:
Three pounds corn meal, 2 pounds wheat bran and 1 pound cotton seed meal. The quantity of the mixture to be fed the cow will depend upon the pasture that is available and the amount of milk that she is giving.
The cow may not return immediate profit for this feed, but next winter you will observe that the cows that are fed this summer will, as a rule, give more milk during the winter.

The American people must be highly original, as no other country ever celebrated a birthday by burning up a lot of valuable property and injuring a large number of its children.

Looking Through the Fence

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Man, University of Illinois

IT WAS an interesting crowd at the game, but those who filled the bleachers to the topmost row and followed the cheer leader in wild shouts were not more interesting than were those outside the field trying to see the game without paying the customary tribute to the gatekeeper.

There were delivery boys perched on top of their wagons, middle-aged men on stepladders, out-of-town sightseers standing on their cars, and scores of the local riffraff swarming in the trees or looking through the fence in an endeavor to see the game without paying for it. Occasionally, more's the pity, one could detect a stray student, impecunious, or frugal, or improvident, whose face lighted up as Jack caught a difficult foul, and once I caught sight of a high-browed instructor, stoop-shouldered from the heavy books he was carrying, crane his neck as he paused to satisfy his curiosity as to why Phil Armour was jumping into the air and waving his arms so frantically.

It was a popular sport, this trying to get something for nothing, but it has its dangers. A young chap who was balancing himself on the top of a motorcycle, unable to restrain his enthusiasm when the "ump" pronounced "Slip" safe on second, lost his equilibrium and in falling pulled the stepladder from under one of the middle-aged gentlemen and they both fell in the dirt.

It has its dangers, I say, it does not always win one respect, whether it be the man looking through the fence at a ball game or the student getting a passing grade by copying from the neighbor's paper.

There are various ways of looking through the fence. The man who is always broke when it is his turn to pay, the fellow who borrows and forgets to return the amount, the man who accepts an office or an honor without assuming the accompanying responsibilities, the employee who loafs on his job, are all watching the game through the fence.

"It is easy for the man to talk," you say, "who has the money to get into the game; but how about the fellow who is broke?" An old neighbor of mine never saw a baseball game nor held office, yet he lived an honorable happy life and died respected. One Savoy or stay at home and read
O. Henry or work in the garden.
It is more honorable not to see any of these games of life at all than to see them through the fence.

"In vain the learning of the age
Unclasped the sable-lettered page;
Even in its treasures he could find Food for the fever of his mind."

—Lady of the Lake.

According to an old story, three men, a lumberman, a botanist and a poet, went for a walk together through a forest. After the walk, the lumberman could discuss the sort of lumber the trees would make, and how much it would cut to the acre; the botanist could name the species of trees and undergrowth, and could discuss the ecology of the region; the poet could talk of the arching of the branches, the decking with light and shade of the forest floor, and the coloring of the tree trunks and leaves. All had looked at the same things; but each had seen just what his interest and training had fitted him to see.

It is much the same with reading.
Three men may read the same book and get from it three totally different messages; or the same men may read a book at three different ages and get from it three different messages. We can understand of any book or poem only what our experience has fitted us to understand. We cannot comprehend a thought that is outside our knowledge. When a man evolves a new idea the rest of the world is unable to understand it until intellectual bridges have been built to connect our old ideas with the new idea.

When people find Shakespeare and Milton and Thackeray dull, it merely means they lack knowledge to enable them to enjoy the works of these writers. Pupils who find Shakespeare a bore while they are in high school are likely to find him a most fascinating writer when they reread his works fifteen or twenty years after they are out of school; because they will have gained in knowledge and experience in the meantime.

If a man has a mental obsession, a "fever of his mind," he will find food to feed it in whatever he reads. A believer and an unbeliever, for example, can read the same book, and one will find in it arguments to strengthen belief and the other arguments to strengthen unbelief. They will have read the same thing; but each will have made mental note only of what interested him, and each will have construed doubtful passages according to his own obsession.

"LIBRETTO"

The small paper-bound volume which contains the text and words of an opera or extended musical composition is known as the "libretto." This word is a diminutive of the Latin word
"liber" which means book. Familiarity with the "libretto" of the opera. The pronunciation is "lib-rett-o," with the accent on the second syllable.

All Old and Young Soldiers are invited to attend and take part in the day's pleasures.

EVERYBODY : IS : INVITED.

Largest Army and Navy
Russia has the largest standing army, numbering 1,500,000 men. Her reserves, including militia, amount to 5,500,000. Great Britain has the largest navy in the world—712 vessels with a tonnage of 2,412,140.

Sugar Used in Candy
Three hundred and fifty thousand tons of sugar are used each year in the making of candy in the United States.

Maintain Purity of Blood
Among the Hovas, the reigning race of Madagascar, the two higher castes are constrained by social law to maintain a certain purity of blood, the taking of a wife from outside the clan being prohibited.

Mining Heavy Freight
The mining industry contributes more than one-half of all the freight carried by the railroads of the United States.

Mrs. Harriet McLellan

Mrs. Harriet McLellan, aged eighty-six years, of Atlanta, Ga., friend of the wives of the Presidents since Lincoln. She remembers Mrs. Lincoln by her wide-swinging hoopskirt; Mrs.
Harrison by her huge leg-of-mutton sleeves; Mrs. Cleveland by her enormous bustle, and Mrs. McKinley by her pompadour. The first Mrs. Wilson was a schoolmate of one of her daughters. Of Mrs. Coolidge she says,
"There's a real White House lady for you. Of all the 'first ladies' I've ever met she is the most broadminded and natural."

The politicians who are double crossing each other would better look number of single crosses opposite their names on the ballot.

CHEMICAL KILLS HOUSEBURN.

Considerable interest has been manifested, throughout the Burley district, over very favorable reports from the use of a new chemical compound, the fumes of which are said to have wonderful curative properties on tobacco after it has been housed. A small quantity of this compound placed under each bin of tobacco and lighted, is said to produce fumes which destroy the fungus bacteria, the cause of sweat or house-burn. This compound has been used in Mercer and Woodford counties with remarkable results, for the past five or six years and the growers who have used it are enthusiastic in its praise, claiming it has passed the experimental stage. We have felt for years that chemistry would develop some counteractant to save the growers the immense loss sustained from sweated or houseburn tobacco. We have every reason to believe these reports are from reliable sources.—

Mr. R. L. Huey, Union, Ky., is the agent for the chemical referred to in the above article, and he will be glad to explain to you the merits of this chemical.

GUNPOWDER

Shelby Aylor and family entertained with a dinner the fourth.
Clarence Norman went to Covington on business last Saturday.
Harmon Jones surprised his children with a sheep and pony.
Mr. and Mrs. Sam Cummins visited friends in Covington last Saturday.

A few of the hustlers began harvesting hay in this neighborhood last week.

Harmon Jones and family had for guests Sunday Ernest Hartman and family, of Walton.

Mr. Cummins and wife, of Covington, visited his parents Mr. and Mrs. Sam Cummins last Sunday.

Mrs. Alice Daughters and daughter, Miss Effie, spent the week-end with friends in this neighborhood.

U. O. Richards and family, of Covington, spent the fourth with his father-in-law John Beall and Mrs.
Beall.

We are under many obligations to
Mr. Sinner for special favors. Mr.
S. never passes an opportunity to accommodate a neighbor.

The fourth passed off very quietly here. There was nothing out of the ordinary.

Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Utz and their friends ate a good dinner with Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Utz.

The following guests broke bread with this scribe last Sunday: Mrs.
Alice Daughters and daughter, Miss Effie; B. C. Surface, Miss Mary Utz and P. J. Allen and wife.

E. K. Tanner had the misfortune to lose a valuable horse last week. It was badly crippled in one of its limbs, and there was no possible show for it to ever get well, and he had it killed.

Miss Anna Miller of Price pike and Harold Aylor, Virginia Pearl Jones and Bro. Ira Huey, attended the Junior Agriculture Club Camp at Florence Fair grounds last week and reported a delightful time.

SELL THE POOR

CHICKENS THIS FALL

Between July 15 and September 15 is the time for the farmer to go over his flock of chickens and cull out the non-layers. Five years records kept by the Poultry Department, College of Agriculture show that at least one-third of the hens of the flock culled have been sold as unprofitable hens. This would mean that $5,000,000 hens would go to waste, that is fall off the farms of the State of Kentucky since the hen population is 10,500,000. This is a very good business as the farmer would not only save the feed that would be fed to 3,500,000 hens but also the expense of taking care of them.

D. W. Newman, one of the good citizens of Richmond neighborhood, lington, Mr. Berkshire is boarding with L. C. Weaver.

Mr. and Mrs. Newton Sullivan, Jr., and Mrs. Sullivan, Sr., spent the 4th in Petersburg with Mr. and Mrs.
Willis Hensley.

Leon Loder and family and Mrs.
Nora Davis and daughter Frances, of Bromley, spent last Sunday with relatives and friends in Petersburg.

A much needed rain fell in this section of the county Monday afternoon, and will be worth hundreds of dollars to the growing crops.

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Akin and children and Mrs. Ed. Easton and daughter Mabel, spent the fourth in Covington with friends.

H. E. White and wife, of the East Bend pike, spent Sunday with Richard and Marshall and wife, of Salers Pidge, Ind.

Earl Walton, of Petersburg, was in Burlington on county court business last Monday.

Prof. E. S. Ryle and family spent last Thursday with Mr. and Mrs.
Newton Sullivan, Sr.

W. T. Light and daughter, of Cincinnati, are the guests of his sister, Mrs. E. L. Hickman.

BASE BALL.

Burlington and Hebron played two games of ball at Burlington
July 4th. Both games were won by Hebron, the morning game by a score of 17 to 12 and the afternoon game by a score of 24 to 2. The Hebron boys had on their slugging clothes, and they used their legal artillery during the morning game, and after they had enjoyed a good dinner brought into use their heavy artillery, Sprague, who pitched the afternoon game for the visitors had the home boys at his command at all times as he only permitted them to reach counting territory for two runs.

Brady of Bellevue had a shade the better of a pitcher's battle with York of Hebron last Saturday in their regularly scheduled League game.

The features of the game were the hitting of Black and York, and a jumping catch of a line drive by R.
Brady. Black drove out a homer with Cook on base, which cinched the game for Bellevue.

By winning this battle Bellevue stayed in striking distance of first place.

Struck out by Brady 6; by York 9.

Hits—Hebron 5; Bellevue 9.
Bases on balls—Brady 1.

Two base hits—R. Brady, Black, Berkshire, W. Ryle, Aylor, Morehead, York.

Three base hits—York.

Home Run—Black.

Petersburg and Bellevue hooked up in an exhibition game at Petersburg on July 4th. This game was an old timer in every respect as the "hitting" was plentiful in several ways.

McCarty started the game in the box for Petersburg with Johnnie Presser opposing him, but as both teams had on their hitting clothes they did not last long. McCarty was relieved by Huey and Presser by Black. About this time the game was delayed for several minutes over a disputed decision and when play was resumed Brady took the hill for Bellevue.

The outstanding feature of the game was the all-round playing of Cox, for Petersburg, who got three home runs and a single out of five trials to the plate, besides fielding and running well in excellent fashion.

Final score was 12 to 9 in favor of Petersburg.

Struck out by Huey 9; Presser 5;
Black 2; Brady 2.

Hits—Petersburg 14; Bellevue 11.

Two base hits—Cook, Ryle, Keim, McWethy, Klop 2.

Three base hits—Ryle, White, Ruth, Huey.

Home Runs—Cox 3.

Burlington and Petersburg played their regularly scheduled League game last Saturday at Petersburg with Petersburg coming out on the long end of a 15 to 5 score.

Norris Berkshire was on the hill for Burlington with Roger McCarty starting his second game in as many days for Petersburg, but this time having better luck than on the previous one.

Both pitchers put up a nice brand of base ball but the support accorded to Berkshire of Burlington was indescribable in its hideousness. Burlington's errors totaled 15, which must certainly be a record.

The hitting of Pettit, N. Berkshire and Conner was the high light for Burlington, while for Petersburg the all-round work of the whole team was good, but special attention should be called to White, McWethy and Cox, a fast relay knocking Cox out of his fourth homer in two days.
Shinkle of Petersburg was also deprived of a homer for his failure to touch second base.

Struck out by McCarty 5; by Berkshire 2.

Bases on balls off Berkshire 1; off
McCarty 1.

Hits—Petersburg 10; Burlington
10.

Two base hits—Finn, Conner, N.
Berkshire, White B. Shinkle.

Three base hits—Pettit, Cox.
Home Run—White.

RECOGNITION FOR SERVICE.

A newspaper reporter recently wrote an article in which he described a certain invention in the automobile line. The next time he saw the inventor, the latter expressed warm appreciation of the publicity that had been given him. He had had letters from a considerable number of people, and evidently he had been given much help in his effort to make his discovery profitable.

This is the kind of thing that is going on all the time, in which an incalculable service is rendered by the newspapers. News writers are so on the alert to find new subjects that a person who thinks up a useful idea will often get a lot of entirely free publicity.

Were it not for the service of the newspapers, such an inventor might have to spend weeks or months to find ways to make use of his new process. But through newspaper publicity, he is likely to come in touch at once with people who can assist him.

It is often just as difficult to get recognition for service as to render it. The business man may spend the best of his life perfecting himself in his own line, and then he may grope around for years without getting public recognition for what he has done. But newspaper advertising furnishes the means by which quick recognition can come.

A merchant may be so shrewd that he is in a position to offer goods at low prices. But if he neglects to advertise what he has done, the majority of the people may never know what the service is which he could offer. In that way many business men have had all the qualities of success except one, that they did not quite know how to push their goods. If they had devoted due attention and a reasonable proportion of their receipts to the art of advertising, they could have achieved much greater success.

INCREASE OF FARM PRODUCTION.

For many years the farmers have been exhorted to increase their production. The government, agricultural and other newspapers, agricultural schools and experts, have been preaching increased production. As a result of this propaganda, production has increased 40 per cent.

This gives reason for congratulation, for it shows increased efficiency and more modern methods. Yet the immediate result on some classes of people is very hard. In some cases it has produced a surplus of food products, reducing the price so low that the farmer can not sell at a profit.

One of two results must happen. First, the situation may be relieved by changing production from some lines where too much is being grown, into some line where no surplus exists. Or, the situation may be helped by people who quit farming and go into other occupations.

It will be better for the rural districts if the problem can be solved by the former method. We have none too many people in the country districts now. We need them all to maintain social institutions. When an extensive migration to the cities takes place, those who will go largely be active young people who are badly needed at home.

It is possible that the situation can be relieved in a third way, and that is by creating a better foreign market for farm products. The depressed condition of Europe has been one leading cause why certain farm staples did not sell. Our government should do everything in its power to help Europe recover from the war troubles. Continued depression over there means that the farmer's normal market is sharply restricted.

THE IDEALS OF BUSINESS.

Some writers of a cynical temperament are inclined to scoff at American business men of the present age, and to represent that as a rule they are governed by selfish and grasping motives, and that the standards of business are sordid.

While the world is full of selfishness, and plenty of greed can be found for criticism of modern business, it would seem that its standards are getting higher all the time. The day when people could expect to win success by smart tricks and clever games has passed, and the public expects and it gets a higher degree of service.

As a rule the men who succeed in business are those who have merited their success by the efficiency they have shown in the work of distributing commodities to the people.

Business, instead of being a mere sordid trade, is tending to become a profession with high standards of work and honor.

If the young intellectuals will only devote their great intellects to the problem of getting the corn, hoes and the wheat harvested, the country might become more prosperous.

The Smart Set seem to be prejudiced against country life. Nothing to do but read and think, they say, and many of them never did either.

As the congressional candidates are expected to shake hands with everyone in their districts, they need not look for much.

Properly Prepare Fowls for Holiday Marketing

While November is generally regarded as turkey month, there is also a strong demand for fowls of all kinds and good prices can be realized for almost any kind if they are properly prepared for market.

In this connection it should be remembered that careful grading of poultry pays. All fowls should be sorted according to age and condition, size, color and shanks. Never mix good and poor stock in shipping to market, as the poor birds always reduce the value of the lot. In other words, uniformity of appearance and quality must be considered.

Poultry should be fattened quickly to be tender and juicy. If the fowls have been kept in good condition during the summer and fall, two weeks of liberal feeding should put them in excellent condition for marketing. After they have commenced to fatten give them all they can eat four or five times a day.

Turkeys ought not to be confined for any length of time, but for just a short time prior to marketing. If fed liberally while they have a free run, they can be put in condition for marketing within ten days.

This is the time of year when the chicken flock should be culled closely. The undesirable fowls will bring better prices now than later, and if kept throughout the winter will only be an expense and a detriment to the rest of the birds.

Uniformity in Fowls Is of Utmost Importance

For those who are breeding standard fowls it is essential that they look out for type in the first place, and not allow their flock to run to the dogs in this particular, as some we have seen recently.

What is a Rhode Island Red good for in the breeding yard if he has a snort wyandotte of Cochin back on him? You might just as well put him in the pot and be done with him, for he is worth more there than anywhere else. Then there is the Orpington standing upon shanks almost like a game. He is of good color, perhaps, but that is all you can say about him. No matter what breed you are attempting to breed or handle, your first duty to that breed and yourself is to get in line with the best possible type to be had. If you find that you do not have that kind, better get rid of them and get the right kind before you waste any more valuable time in experiments. Study the type that goes to make a good one of your kind, both in males and females, and get in line. Get the best color, of course, that is consistent with the right type, but get type at any cost first. Be sure you know your breed or variety as that is of the most importance. Work intelligently at all times, and you will be surprised how well things will go along.

Dealers Can Stop Much of Waste in Egg Supply

How the dealer can help stop the waste in eggs is pointed out on a poster recently issued by the extension service of Colorado Agricultural college in line with a campaign for better quality. Dealers can help by:

Encouraging production of infertile eggs by paying more for them.

Packing eggs only in good cases, using new flats and fillers.

Placing excelsior pads on top and bottom of each case and not using any straw.

Keeping eggs in cool, dry place, away from kerosene and never allowing a shipment to stand in the sun.

Shipping at least once every other day, because holding eggs in temperatures above 60 degrees causes rapid deterioration.

Dried Whey Fed Laying Hens on Government Farm

New uses for dried whey are being revealed by a series of investigations by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Four pounds of crude sugar and 1½ pounds of dried whey containing about 30 per cent of albumin were obtained from 100 pounds of whey. The dried whey was sold to a laboratory making baby food, at a price giving a satisfactory return for the whey.

Dried whey and dried buttermilk are being fed experimentally to laying hens at one of the department farms.

In the first half of the twelve-month experiment the pen of hens receiving dried whey produced eggs at a rate comparing favorably with results obtained with other kinds of feeds.

Get Maximum Production of Eggs During Winter

If you are planning to add more pullets to your laying pen get them as soon as possible, in order to get the maximum production of eggs this winter. Just as a hen's milk production is decreased by moving her from one place to another, disturbing her routine, laying is delayed when pullets are disturbed by moving them from one farm to another or from their regular quarters. Disturbing pullets also retards growth.

The Future of Farm Land Values

When farmers are making money on their crops the value of plow land runs high and bankruptcies are few. Reverse the situation and the bankruptcy line takes a straight upward turn. That's what is happening now. Farmer bankruptcies are on the increase, land values are sliding down the scale due to the slump of agricultural prices since the war.

What does the future hold for farm land owners? Is this the time to buy or sell?

The Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation, after completing a survey of land values covering a period of sixty years, predicts that high land values are coming back and that within a decade farm land prices will again be on the climb. From the days of the Civil war to around 1900 farm land values showed little change. Land was considered a safe investment. Beginning in 1900 values began to rise; by 1910 the acre price had doubled. Still land continued to rise chiefly because of the advance in the prices of farm products.

The war brought higher prices for farm products, crop values increased. The result was a land boom. By 1920 the average price of land per acre was $60, $30 higher than in 1917 at the opening of the war. Farm bankruptcies dropped from 2,000 in 1917 to 1,000 in 1919.

During the prosperity period of the war many farms were bought. During the land boom it is estimated that 10 per cent of the country's farms changed hands. Following the war the collapse in prices of grains and live stock sent land values tumbling for the first time in twenty-five years. Average plow land decreased in value from an average of $60 per acre in 1920 to $40 in 1923. Crop values per acre fell from $36 in 1919 to $15 in 1921. During the past two years there has been a gradual increase, the average for 1923 being $20 and last year the average rising to $22. Farmer bankruptcies proceeded in the federal courts jumped from 1,000 in 1920 to 6,000 in 1923. More than $14 per cent of the land owners in 15 corn and wheat producing states in the upper Mississippi valley lost their farms.

In twenty-five years the United States should be producing on a domestic basis in practically everything, unless production makes material increases. People are moving from the land. Then the farm-to-city movement will reverse itself. Land values will increase with the price of farm products. Prices will decrease with the fall in land values. The present tendency in prices is down. They may continue down for a decade. During this time land prices may be considerably. But with a return of production prices of farm land will go up.

THE TREND IN FARM LABOR SUPPLY AND DEMAND

Farmers are cutting down hired help. The demand is estimated at only 80 per cent of normal as compared with 95 per cent a year ago, according to a statement issued by the Washington office of the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation based on data from government sources. The low purchasing power of farm products has forced the farmer to rearrange his operations. He is coming to depend largely on his own and his family's labor. In many cases the hired man is being dispensed with entirely.

Farm help costs more today than at any other time in the past sixty-one years. Wages demanded are higher this year ago and rates for 1923 averaged above all preceding years. The peak year in the wage scale was in 1920. That year labor was scarce. According to the accompanying chart, in June of 1920 the supply was but 73 per cent of normal, while the demand was 105 per cent of normal. During the latter half of 1920 and through the first six months of 1921, the labor supply curve took a sudden upward swing, and in June of 1921 it was 95 per cent of normal, while demand had dropped to 87 per cent. Until in June of 1922 the supply curve continued to rise, reaching its height at 105 per cent of normal, while the demand was but 80 per cent normal.

With the beginning of 1923 city labor wages improved. Large industrial centers drew farm help cityward. Farmers had to pay wages out of proportion to what the farm could earn to hold their men. In June of 1923 the demand saw 95 per cent of normal, while the supply curve was sagging to 84 per cent. The latter half of the year demand lessened, due to excessive labor costs and the increasing supply. This year demand has made still further decline, until now it is but 81 per cent of normal, while labor supply, which is gradually increasing, is estimated around 80 per cent.

PER CAPITA PRODUCTION OF EGGS.

So rapidly is the poultry industry expanding that within a short time over production may cut the farmer's poultry dollar unless production can be maintained at a lower cost, according to the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation.

A recent survey shows that more than 5,000,000 farms in this country produce poultry and eggs. It is estimated that there were 401,000,000 chickens on farms before the hatching season started. This is an increase of over 50,000,000, or nearly 12 per cent over figures of a year ago and 121,000,000, or over 82 per cent increase since January 1, 1920.

Production of eggs increased 38.5 per cent between 1920 and 1923 while the population increased only 5.2 per cent. In the past five years the estimate of egg production have shown a close correlation with the estimated number of chickens on hand at the beginning of the year, the ratio being 4.6 dozens per fowl. If the same ratio holds good, egg production in 1924 will gain 10 to 13 per cent over 1923 when it showed a gain of 38 per cent over four years ago.

Profitable poultry production at the present stage of expansion is dependent upon the present high level of demand. Up to date consumption has kept pace with production. In 1923 enough eggs were produced to furnish 30 dozens for every man, woman and child in the United States. This would mean 100 dozens for the average family of five.

T. W. FINCH, DEAD

A Former Well Known Boone County Citizen Gone to His Reward.

Thomas W. Finch died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Fannie Griffith, of Los Angeles, Cal., Monday, June 30th, 1924. He had been confined to his bed for thirteen weeks. Funeral services were held July 2nd, 1924.

Two years ago Mr. Finch was awarded the fifty-year medal by Washington Chapter No. 4, Royal Arch, of Muscatine, Iowa, in which he had continued as a member, notwithstanding the fact that he had been a resident of Los Angeles for twenty years. He also was a member of Muscatine Lodge No. 2 and of the De Molay Commandry No. 1, of the Knights Templar.

The deceased, who was 82 years of age, leaves his widow, Mary P. Finch, and one daughter, Mrs. J. J. Griffith, one brother, John Finch, of Florence and a sister Miss Sophia Finch, of McComb, Mo. He formerly resided in Burlington and was prominent in politics when he resided here. He held the office of Deputy Sheriff and sheriff.

T. W. Finch was born at Forence, Ky., May 2nd, 1842. He was a son of Adam Finch and wife. He was united in marriage to Miss Mary P. Griffith, daughter of James M. and Betty White Riddell, Jan. 15, 1873, and to this union two children were born a son and daughter. Charles, who died during the Spanish-American war, and Mrs. Francis Griffith, of Los Angeles, Cal., at whose home he died.

About twenty-five years ago he left Burlington, going to Muscatine, Iowa, where he lived for several years, going from there to Los Angeles, Cal., with his daughter and husband, where he made his home until called by death.

Tom Finch for many years was a prominent and leading citizen of Boone county. He was a kind and loving father, a good neighbor, a friend to everyone, and his passing is greatly deplored by all. Much sympathy is extended to the bereaved wife and daughter by their many Boone county friends.

EASY TO KNOCK.

It's the easiest thing in the world to knock.

It's the easiest thing in the world to stay away from the primary election and then complain about the nominee of your party.

It's easy to take no part in the Parent-Teacher association meetings and then knock on the schools.

It's easy to play golf or go picnicking all day Sunday and then criticize the church because it does not draw crowds.

It's just the easiest thing in the world to degenerate into a sour-faced, disagreeable, self-satisfied, chronic grumbler.

Every city, every town, no matter how large or how small, has its chronic pessimists, who see nothing but the bad in everything and do nothing to correct it.

A certain number will always exist, no doubt, as a horrible example for the rest of us, and even though they do no good, they at least for ever will stand out as a living manifestation of what forward-looking people should not be.

BOB JONES CONVICTED

IN QUARTERLY COURT UPON A CHARGE OF BREACH OF THE PEACE.

Bob Jones, colored, tenant on the farm of C. W. Reagan, near Florence, was arrested and tried before Judge N. E. Riddell of the Boone Quarterly Court last Saturday morning.

The facts developed in the trial were that Jones had had an altercation with Geo. Miller, a neighbor, and had taken a gun and dared Mr. Miller out into the road. Upon these facts and others of a minor nature, Jones was fined $25 and costs, from which judgment of the court Jones filed an appeal to the circuit court, giving an appeal bond before the circuit clerk with C. W. Reagan, his landlord, as surety. The appeal will be tried before a jury at the August term of the aforementioned court.

SUMMER IS HARD TIME ON CHICKENS.

Special attention should be given to make sure that lice are kept off of young chickens during July, August and September. In warm weather lice increase rapidly and unless special pains are taken the lice can lower the vitality of the chickens so that they will not grow and develop as they should during the summer season. This is important since it is necessary that the pullets attain good size and make steady growth in order to have them produce eggs next winter. Badly diseased and poorly grown pullets become a liability rather than an asset.

WHAT IS A NEWSPAPER?

What do most people think a newspaper is?

Postmaster General Harry S. New said recently "A newspaper is what people generally think of as a newspaper."

Plain as mud. Having been in the aim of every newspaper, to know, but does anybody know? The dictionaries seem to agree on one thing: "A newspaper is a paper containing news."

The word newspaper indicates that, but what is news? News is something that people want to read—something that they did not know about the activities of other people.

But there are different kinds of news and no one kind always appeals to all people.

Some newspaper readers pick up a newspaper, glance through it hastily and put it down with the thought that there is nothing in it.

There may not be anything of particular interest to them in that issue, but to their neighbor, several items may have a particular appeal.

It is the business of the newspaper to print the news that they believe the largest number of their readers are interested in, and that is the aim of every newspaper.

So a newspaper is something that gives news, and in addition, it has come to be regarded as the official town or county bulletin.

When everyone else becomes so absorbed in their own affairs, that they have no time for giving attention to the general welfare of the community, the newspaper is expected to be on the job constantly, working for the benefit of all the people.

Good newspapers look upon this added responsibility as their job and they work at it constantly.

BOONE COUNTY PRODUCT

BEING GROOMED FOR CIRCUIT JUDGE OF KENTON.

Prominent Democrats of Kenton county are of the opinion that Samuel W. Adams, popular attorney of Covington, will succeed Judge Frank M. Tracy as Circuit Judge of the Criminal common law and Equity division of the Kenton Circuit Court.

It has been mentioned for some time that Judge Tracy was contemplating retiring from the bench and entering active private practice, but was not generally known until recently that his successor had been practically decided upon.

Mr. Adams has served Kenton county for three terms in the State Legislature and was elected by that body as their Speaker at the last assembly which was featured by some extremely tumultuous sessions, but however some very important legislation withal.

Boone county boasts Mr. Adams as her favored son, as he is a son of the late Will Adams of this county and was born in Hathaway neighborhood near Union, moving to Covington when still very young, where we are glad to say he has been highly successful.

BENJ. C. RICE

Dies at Lakeland Hospital—Remains Brought to Bellevue for Burial.

Benjamin C. Rice, 22, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Rice, of the Waterloo neighborhood, died last Tuesday at Central State Hospital, Lakeland, Ky.

Mr. Rice, who had been suffering with a mental affliction for some time, was taken to Lakeland only two weeks ago but his condition was so serious that physicians there could not help him.

His remains were brought to Bellevue by C. Scott Chambers last Thursday for interment. The bereaved ones have the sympathy of their many friends in this neighborhood.

SUNDAY SCHOOL

OF LOCAL M. E. CHURCH HAS OUTING AT THE CINCINNATI ZOO.

The M. E. Sunday school gave the junior members of their organization a fine trip to the Zoological Garden at Cincinnati last Saturday, with quite a number of the children's parents as chaperones.

W. L. Kirkpatrick's truck was loaded to the guards, while some few went in machines. All expenses were paid for the children by the Sunday school while at the noon hour the entire party enjoyed a bounteous lunch served on the grounds.

This outing was given by this school last year, and was such a success that it was repeated this year. The children could not be taken to a better place, as it is both a pleasure and an education for them.

SELLS JERSEY BULL

Thos. W. Rice shipped, one day last week, to a Mr. Whitener, of Ashburn, Ky., a fine 2-year-old Jersey bull for which he received a handsome price.

Vacation Time

A BOONE COUNTY BOY

Attended Washington and Lee Universities With John W. Davis, Democratic Nominee for President.

(Atlanta Journal)

John W. Davis, of West Virginia, democratic nominee for president, is well known in Atlanta and has many personal friends here.

Although many friends have been gained through his identification with federal court proceedings in this city, Mr. Davis has a number of personal acquaintances in Atlanta. Among them is Walter McCreath, Atlanta attorney, and W. W. Gaines, well known educator, who shared class honors with the democratic nominee at Washington and Lee university, and who still remembers him as a "congenial, courageous and superior student."

Mr. Davis and Mr. McCreath were close friends and classmates at Washington and Lee, and in 1892 were the only two students at the senior class to receive a special distinction in "moral philosophy."

Mr. Gaines, who is a well-known Atlanta attorney, a member of the board of education, of which he served as president for several years, attended at Washington and Lee with Davis in 1890. Davis was recognized as one of the finest students in the school, Mr. Gaines stated, and was extremely popular with the entire student body.

Mr. Gaines has watched his former schoolmate's progress with great interest, and expressed gratification at the latest honor bestowed upon Mr. Davis.

WHAT'S A MAN WORTH?

Is any man worth more than $10,000 a year to any organization?

The United States congress doesn't think so.

The new revenue law defines "earned income" as any sum not in excess of $10,000 a year. A taxpayer who receives a salary of $20,000, for example, can claim only $10,000 as "earned income."

Congressmen were astute enough to make their arbitrary definition of "earned income" high enough to permit their salaries to come within the meaning of the term.

But statutes do not fix a man's worth to any business. Only the man alone can determine what he is worth to the place where he draws his pay every Saturday night, every two weeks, or every month, as the case may be.

Some men have trouble in earning a very small salary and others seem to draw many thousands of dollars a year with ease.

The majority of those in the former class keep their eyes on the time clock too closely and their thoughts on something else beside their job. Men in the latter class work all the time, regardless of hours, and thus draw about their profits at night. They are born executives.

No one complains about the president of the United States drawing $75,000 a year. The man at the head of an executive department that has general supervision over the expenditure of billions of dollars a year, earns his salary.

"Earned income" is a relative term not to be limited by any fixed sum, but by the ability of a man to produce results.

Farmers on the average made money on corn, cotton and potatoes last year, but lost on wheat and oats, the Department of Agriculture announced today. A compilation of reports showed that wheat cost averaged $1.24 per bushel, with sales value of 99 cents; corn cost 68 cents with a sales value of 81 cents, oats cost 54 cents with a sales value of 40 cents, and cotton cost 22 cents per pound with a value of 80 cents. Potato costs varied in different sections.

MAKING GOOD

IS GEORGE ROBBINS, A BOONE COUNTY BOY AT BEREA.

George Robbins entered college in the fall of 1921; he was a typical freshman, ignorant, awkward, bashful and green.

But, along with these Freshman characteristics, he had some other qualities, more or less potential—modesty, agreeableness, humor, and wit. George's (for everybody calls him by his first name) coming to college was a red-letter event in his life, for since that happening those pesky characteristics have been disappearing.

GEORGE ROBBINS.

appearing while those desirable qualities have rapidly grown. Truly, George Robbins of yesterday is different from George of today—until now there are few better all-around good fellows on the campus. His speeches are always in demand, and his company also—with the girls.

George worked hard to make the debating team, and he made it; he fought hard against Maryville, and he beat her. But, the story is not finished. He shot at Bowling Green and he missed her.

While on the team his agreeableness and multitude of ideas were invaluable in working up the question, and his pleasant, humorous method of speaking gave the team a good lead-off on the evenings of debate.

In view of this, George was not only an asset to, but an important part of the team.

The above is from the Citizen published at Berea, Madison county, issue of June 12, 1924. George Robbins is a son of Mr. Steve Robbins, of Florence precinct, and his many friends in Boone county are pleased to hear of his success.

MINISTER STRICKEN

Suffers Nervous Breakdown While On Trip to Holy Land

Rev. H. C. Runyan, pastor of the Latonia Christian church, was compelled to abandon a voyage to Palestine and return to his home last week, due to a severe nervous breakdown caused from over worry prior to his departure. Upon receiving the news his son Hous on C. Runyan left at once for Montreal Canada where he met both father and mother, returning to Latonia on Sunday.

Rev. Runyan is very intimately known by many Boone county people and fairly well known by practically every Boone county citizen having addressed in his masterly fashion audiences in all parts of the county at different times.

He has done such a great work at Latonia that his church there recently raised $5,000 to cover the expenses of the voyage on which he had just started.

His host of friends and admirers in Boone county trust that he will soon recover and be able to resume his proposed journey.

GREEN APPLES

CAUSE ILLNESS

Health Expert Cites Instance Where Child Dies From Eating Unripe Fruit.

Green apples and hot summer days often bring to the little child illness. The child awakes in the night crying with the stomach ache, he is hot, fretful and as his temperature rises he may begin to vomit and have diarrhoea. The mother may think it is just the hot weather, but in nine cases out of ten green apples or other unripe fruits are the cause of the trouble.

Last summer while holding child health conferences in one of the rural counties a mother sent for me and saw her little child who was quite ill. As the doctor lived many miles away and was not available I answered the call. I found a two year old baby desperately ill. I asked the mother what the child had eaten. She assured me that he had eaten nothing out of the ordinary. I continued to question her. I asked about baby's milk, about fried foods and meats and finally about green fruits. "Oh, yes," the mother told me, "We did have some peaches they weren't very ripe so I only let the baby have half a peach." The next morning that baby died and the cause of his death might have been written—"half a green peach."

Do not allow the children to eat unripe fruit. Such fruit cannot be digested and will invariably cause intestinal upsets. With the little child the result may be a serious illness, such as diarrhoea, "flux," etc. Ripe fruits in season are healthful for children, but green fruits are poisonous. The nine months old baby is given diluted orange juice; as he grows older he may have prune juice, then cooked apple or other cooked fruits. The older child may have raw fruits which must be ripe—but not too ripe.

Children need fruits in their diet for several reasons. From them they obtain mineral substances needed for building the body and keeping it in good condition. The acids which give flavor are laxative and the bulk which fruits give to the diet make it laxative as well as satisfying the appetite.

FALLS FROM TREE

And Is Seriously Injured—Fortunately No Bones Were Broken.

Mr. Geo. Blythe, who lives just out of town on the Bellevue pike, was seriously injured last Thursday when he fell out of an apple tree while picking apples.

He had set a ladder against a limb and climbed to the top, a distance of about twelve feet, causing the foot of the ladder to slip, causing him to fall the entire distance. A two bushel sack tied about his neck and about half filled with apples caused his neck and back to receive a serious wrench in addition to other bruises from the fall.

Mr. Duncan was called and relieved his suffering sufficiently to allow him to be carried to the house. Fortunately no bones were broken, but he is suffering considerably from wrenches and strains sustained and it will be several days before he can be up and about again.

MEMBERS

OF EVERGREEN REBEKAH LODGE SPEND A PLEASANT DAY.

Sunday July 13th, members of Evergreen Rebekah Lodge, Bellevue, Ky., and other friends, met at the pleasant home of Mrs. Jessie Maurer and sons, near Burlington. At the noon hour tables were placed under the shade trees and every good thing to eat was placed thereon, which had been so carefully planned and prepared by the good ladies present.

After a pleasant afternoon spent in conversation and a good time in general ice lemonade and cake was served, after which the guests departed with expressions of the good time they had and the anticipation of meeting again on just such an occasion some time in the future.

Those present were: Mrs. W. Rice and nephew, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Kelly, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Stephens, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Cason, Mrs. Grace Scott, Mr. Will Sutton, Mr. and Mrs. Pep Smith, Rev. and Mrs. B. C. Bush and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Scott and son Lillard, Mr. and Mrs. Thos Rice and son Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Maurer, Mrs. Henry Cleary and son, Mrs. C. E. McNeely and son, Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Lankin, Mr. Lewis Cleary, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Berkshire, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Rue and son, and two daughters, Mrs. Manie Berkshire and three daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. G. Smith and son, Miss Sara Cropper, Miss Zelma Rue, Miss Kathryn Maurer, Miss Mary Edgington.

DAUGHTERS OF TODAY

Have parents been concentrating on the so-called boy problem to the exclusion of the girl?

Once upon a time everyone accepted as fact that the boy was a problem, until someone suggested that he was not a problem, but an opportunity—a chance to improve the manhood of the next generation.

Countless organizations far and near have been devoting their best efforts to develop better boys, but there are still bad boys, and always will be.

And now people are beginning to recognize that there is as much a girl problem as there ever was a boy problem.

Prejudiced minds have been accustomed to condemning boys without trial, to deciding in advance that when an evil mischief was done, some boy was to blame. In sum, all boys were judged with the worst as a standard.

Very much the same thing has been brought about the present-day idea that girls, too, offer a problem.

Some girls have done indiscreet things that, measured by the social standards of another day, appear to be bad.

Evil-minded persons have repeated chance stories heard about girls and hypocritical gossipers have villainously enlarged upon them. This is not to say there are no bad girls.

But the daughters of today are no worse than their mothers were. They are the product of modern civilization. They will have to be accepted as they are, but they are not half as bad as they are pictured.

As long as human nature continues to run true to form, there will be bad girls and bad boys, but there is no doubt that improvement of the environment, which is controlled to some extent by parents, will reduce the number.

However, the elements of birth, and inherited instincts still influence lives, and they are beyond control of society, because the law has not yet reached the right to give birth to children.

VIRGIL W. GAINES

FINISHES COURSE OF INSTRUCTION—WILL SOON RETURN TO CALIFORNIA.

Virgil W. Gaines, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Gaines of the Petersburg pike, finished last Saturday a six months' course of instruction in salesmanship with the National Cash Register corporation, at Dayton, O.

Mr. Gaines will return to California in about two weeks to resume activity in his chosen line as salesman for this company, which he has represented in the above territory for several years.

Salesmanship with this company requires not only a thorough knowledge of the article to be sold, but in addition the salesman must have an intimate acquaintance with every line of business with which he would come in contact as a salesman.

Contractor J. J. Kirkpatrick having completed work on L. T. Utz bungalow, has begun work on another immediately across the street from the one just finished. The building is being constructed on a lot belonging to Mr. Kirkpatrick himself, but in this day of multiplicity of weddings and house-building one cannot tell whom the occupants will be.

In this issue will be found the reports of the banks in this county, and the two banks at Erlanger, showing their financial condition at the close of business on June 30th, 1924. Read them over carefully, and when you run short of funds you will know where to go to get them. From the reports these institutions seem to be in a flourishing condition.

M. L. Aylor, of Hebron neighborhood, salesman for Starke Nursery, was a Burlington visitor last Friday afternoon. Mr. Aylor had with him an apple—Golden Delicious of the 1923 crop that showed it was a splendid keeper, but as to taste we could not say, as he would not let us sample it, although it made our mouth water to look at it.

Kentucky's total acreage of tobacco of all types is approximately 491,000 acres compared to 578,000 acres last year, and the Kentucky wheat crop only about 3,284,000 bushels compared to 7,688,000 bushels produced last year; these are the features of the July crop report for Kentucky.

At a meeting of the Directors of the Farm Bureau, Monday July 7th, Mr. L. C. Weaver was chosen as manager of the Burlington office in place of Marce Biddle, who held the position since January 1st.

Mr. C. W. Reagan, of Price pike, Florence precinct, was a business visitor to Burlington, last Saturday. He called at this office and had his farm posted against all kinds of hunting and trespassing.

SUCH IS LIFE

By Van Zelm

Body Found

IN OHIO RIVER AT LAWRENCEBURG FERRY.

Edward Witham, owner and operator of the Lawrenceburg Ferry found the body of a small boy, apparently about four years of age, floating near the middle of the Ohio river last Tuesday morning.

The body was that of a white child, clad in a bathing suit, and its name and parentage had not been ascertained at this writing.

Undertaker Fitch, of Lawrenceburg who was notified, took up the body and removed it to his establishment where it was embalmed.

From its appearance the body had not been in the water very long. Police authorities at Cincinnati were notified of the occurrence.

GEO. CLARKSON DIES AT HIS HOME NEAR UNION

Geo. Clarkson respected citizen of Union neighborhood, died at his home on the Big Bone pike last Saturday July 12, after an illness of but a few days duration.

Mr. Clarkson was 53 years of age and leaves a wife and three children to mourn his departure to that better life. That Mr. Clarkson possessed a host of friends was attested by the number that attended the funeral and burial services.

The funeral service was held at the Union Presbyterian church and conducted by Rev. Spears after which the service was adjourned to Hopeful cemetery where the remains were laid to rest after an appropriate ceremony by Rev. Paul Gillespie, of Florence. The service at the cemetery was attended by a very great number of friends and relatives, as well as about fifty Klansmen in full regalia.

Undertaker Philip Taliaferro, had charge of the funeral arrangements.

ELLA F. BENDER

Ella F. Bender aged 31 years, of Clay Street, Cincinnati, passed away at the General Hospital last Saturday. The remains were brought to the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Morehead, Erlanger, where funeral services were held by Rev. Miller at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon, interment following in Highland cemetery. Mrs. Bender is survived by her husband and one daughter, besides her parents and several brother and sisters.

Undertaker Philip Taliaferro had charge of the funeral arrangements.

JOHN B. BRAMLAGE

John B. Bramlage, aged 65 years, beloved husband of Anna Bramlage, passed away at his home "The Beeches" on the Dixie Highway near Erlanger last Wednesday. Funeral services were held from St. Henry's church Saturday at 9:00 a. m.; with interment in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mr. Bramlage is survived by his widow, three daughters, Bertha, Olive and Mrs. Leroy Whitson; also two sons Robert and John Henry. Funeral arrangements were in charge of Undertaker Philip Taliaferro.

The heavy storm which swept across the northern part of the county last Saturday and caused considerable damage, wrecked the large front porch on the beautiful home of Mrs. E. L. Grant overlooking the historic Cliffs below the mouth of Woolper creek.

Mrs. Grant was in Burlington last Monday and obtained the services of J. B. Berkshire and J. M. Botts to reconstruct the porch, and they returned home with Mrs. Grant in order to begin work at once.

Mrs. Edgar C. Riley and children who are spending their vacation at their summer home below Petersburg have been quite ill for the past week. Dr. E. W. Duncan, of Burlington, has been attending them.

B. W. Campbell and nephew, Russell Carpenter, of Cincinnati, were visitors to Burlington Tuesday. Mr. Carpenter is a son of the late S. W. Carpenter, formerly of Florence and Burlington.

Mrs. Minnie Smith entertained a number of relatives and friends at dinner last Monday evening in honor of Rev. and Mrs. W. W. Adams.

Mr. and Mrs. I. A. Guley and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hitt entertained a number of relatives and friends Sunday.

C. T. Claunch, of Erlanger, sold during the last year fifty-five parcels of real estate at more than $2,000,000.

"Everything can't be done in a day." True, but something can.

A Mr. Kalb and family of near Independence, attended church at Hopeful, last Sunday.

A much needed rain fell here last Saturday accompanied by considerable wind but there was no serious damage done.

Harvest is on and a very light crop of hay is being harvested, but the cats and soy bean crops will supplement the shortage in the hay crop very greatly.

Mrs. H. L. Tanner, who underwent a severe surgical operation at a hospital some time since, has been removed to the home of her brother in Newport. She is not improving very rapidly.

Mrs. Ed. Clegg, a highly respected lady died very suddenly at her home in the Union precinct on Wednesday of last week the 9th inst. While she had been in rather poor health for quite a while there was no cause for alarm until she became seriously ill about 9 p. m. when they called the doctor but he was too late as she had passed away before he arrived. She had reached the advanced age of 66 years 10 months and 7 days and had been an exemplary member of Hopeful church since Nov. 13th, 1898. The remains were brought to Hopeful on Friday where a very appropriate funeral service was conducted by Pastor George A. Royer.

Besides her husband she leaves one son Lewis, two granddaughters and one grandson and a host of relatives and friends to mourn her departure. After the service the remains were buried in the Hopeful cemetery in the presence of a large concourse of sorrowing relatives and friends. The family have the sympathy of the entire community in their bereavement. C. Scott Chambers had charge of the funeral.

HOPEFUL

Several from here attended the party at Sam Blackburn's of near Hebron, Saturday night.

Mrs. Ambrose Easton and Mrs. Thos. McFerry spent Monday with their father H. L. Tanner.

Miss Charlotte Bradford has returned home from Richmond, where she has been attending school.

Mrs. W. P. Beemon had as guest a few days the past week her aunt, Miss Betty Acra, of Burlington.

W. P. Beemon wife and daughter Myrtle, visited Lloyd Weaver and wife, of Burlington, last Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Barlow spent Sunday with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Will Moore, of Kenton county.

Ethel Mae Barlow has returned home after spending several days with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Barlow.

Mr. and Mrs. Tanner Garnett and daughter Helen, of Latonia, spent the week-end with her brother Ernest Horton and family.

The remains of Mrs. Ed. Clegg who passed away at her home near Union were buried in Hopeful cemetery last Wednesday.

There will be a Seven Cent Social at Hopeful Lutheran church Friday night, July 25, 1924. Given by the Hopeful Lutheran Sunday School. Come and enjoy the evening.

Mrs. and Mrs. Ben Tanner, Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Easton and children, Mrs. Annie Beemon and family, Mrs. Naomi Burdge and Everett Hays, spent a delightful day Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Easton.

POOL TO FOLLOW UP VISIT ABROAD OF ITS OFFICIALS

INTELLIGENT ACTION TO BE BASED ON GROUNDWORK ESTABLISHED BY COMMISSION—MORE RE-DRYERS PROVIDED FOR BY BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Directors of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative at the regular July meeting received a detailed report from President and General Manager James C. Stone in regard to the visit of the American tobacco commission to Europe, decided to follow up intelligently the groundwork established by the commission by making the proper connections to enlarge the outlet of Burley tobacco, and authorized the construction, or purchase of five additional re-drying plants in order to take care of the 1924 deliveries to the association that may have to be re-dried.

President Stone's report, which was exhaustive, told of the visit of the commission to the various tobacco manufacturers and government monopolies of Europe and the reception given, which in every instance was declared to be courteous in the extreme, even from one concern known to be unfriendly to co-operative selling. Mr. Stone said that in every country they visited the anti-co-operative propaganda had been industriously circulated and that some of the big buyers actually had been told that the American associations did not process or pack for European buyers.

On motion of John E. Brown, of Shelby county, it was decided to follow up the visit of the commission and to take advantage of the opportunities and information derived by methods of contact which will meet the situation, and develop Burley markets in Europe.

Mr. Stone said that, in his opinion, the visit had been beneficial to the Burley industry. In that it had been helpful in establishing more direct contact with the European manufacturers in disabusing the minds of European buyers of false notions of the American co-operative system of selling, and in leaving, their stead, true impressions of the aims and purposes of co-operative marketing associations in America.

John Barnes, one of the Recorder's good friends from out on rural routes, was a visitor to the Hub last Friday, and while in town called in to watch the printers work, and donated $1.50 toward buying oil for another year in order to keep the machinery running.

Ed. Snow, of Limaburg neighborhood, was a business visitor to Burlington, last Saturday morning. He made the printers a pleasant call while in town.

BASE BALL.

Due to a heavy rain storm last Saturday afternoon it was utterly impossible to play the scheduled game between Burlington and Bellevue at Burlington. Quite a nice crowd was in prospect when the storm struck but after it was over only a few ventured out to the ground hoping that they might yet see a contest.

The game was about to start even under very adverse conditions when it again began to rain and managers Weaver and Clore readily agreed upon a postponement. There have been more postponements this year than ever before known in Boone county base ball.

Hebron's victory over Petersburg brought the Petersburg team back into a tie with Bellevue for first place, which is a very interesting circumstance in view of the fact that these two teams meet in a double header next Saturday at the Bellevue grounds. Black will be in the box for Bellevue in both games, while managers Ruth and Clore have agreed on Hubert White, of Burlington and Hubert Brady, of Burlington, as special umpires to handle the games, and these two will no doubt impartially if not faultlessly, decide every play.

Hebron will visit Burlington where an interesting contest is expected.

Game called in a drizzling rain with Huey in the box for Petersburg and York for Hebron.

Fast fielding by the Petersburg team was the cause of Huey remaining in the box until one man was out in the second, when he was forced to retire after walking Acra and Riley followed by two base hits by York and E. Goodridge. While taking the burden at this time and pitching good ball for the remainder of the game.

York was in his usual form and held Petersburg well in hand at all times.

Hits off Huey 2; off White 2; off York 2; Score Hebron 4 Petersburg 3.

RED CROSS NEWS.

Any ex-service man who has not secured blanks for his compensation or who wishes help in filling the application may receive either or both by applying to the local chapter.

In an address at a session of the National Association the following was said of the Junior Red Cross: "Two great purposes underlie the work of the American Red Cross in the schools. One to nourish an ideal and a habit of service in school children by providing motive and opportunity, the other to improve the health of school children through inculcating the ideal of fitness for service and through helping to make fitness possible."

An act of the 1924 General Assembly of Kentucky exempts any person who has at any time served as a member of the army, navy or marine corps from payment of the legal fee (50c) for a certified copy of a birth or doctor certificate registered with the State Board of Health.

AN OLD BURLINGTON BOY

Celebrates Fiftieth Anniversary at His Home in Hyde Park, Ohio

The following is from the Cincinnati Enquirer of Tuesday, July 15: A family reunion and reception at their home at 3443 Weston place, Hyde Park, Monday night, marked the celebration by Mr. and Mrs. Milton L. Campbell of their 50th wedding anniversary.

Five children, three of whom now live in distant cities, and six grandchildren were among the relatives who gathered for the occasion.

Mr. Campbell is 81 years old, is one of the few surviving members of the Morgan Raiders, having fought with the Confederate forces in the Civil War. At the close of that war he moved home to Burlington, Ky., to Cincinnati, where he has resided since. For 40 years he was a member of the Cincinnati Fire Department and retired as Assistant Chief about 15 years ago. Since that time he has devoted himself to the management of the real estate holdings of B. W. Campbell of the Perkins-Campbell Co.

Mrs. Campbell, who is 70 years old, formerly was Miss Sophia Heinberger, of Cincinnati.

Children of the couple present at the reunion are Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Shaw, Indianapolis; Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Sargent, Glendale, Cal.; Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Campbell, Canton, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Campbell and Miss Helen Campbell, of Cincinnati.

ENTERTAINS BRIDGE CLUB

Mrs. Bernard C. Gaines entertained her bridge club at luncheon last Wednesday afternoon at her beautiful home on the Petersburg and Burlington pike.

Those present were Mrs. Theodore Walker, Mrs. R. G. Williams, Mrs. Roy Heyser, Mrs. Raymond Heizer, Mrs. Will Simrall, Mrs. Paul Stevens, Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Arthur Hubbard and Mrs. Robert Hackney, all of Georgetown and Ft. Mitchell and Mrs. R. S. Hannah of Los Angeles, Cal., and Mrs. Stanley Palmer of Auburn Indiana.

STRICKEN WITH PARALYSIS.

Wm. J. Carpenter, prominent citizen and farmer of the Dixie Highway, near Richwood, who was stricken with paralysis Tuesday morning of last week, is still in a critical condition and there is very little hopes for his recovery. Mr. Carpenter had gone to the barn to milk the cows when he was stricken.

Boone County Recorder,
Burlington, Ky.

Gentlemen:

I am anxious for information on the following matter:

As you know, my parents were Burlington people. Something like twenty years ago there were three portraits made of my father, and my uncle, Mr. Braxton W. Chamblin, and my cousin, Mr. Ferdinand Leeb. These portraits were made about the same time or during the same year by Mr. Edward Wedd, who lived on mile from Burlington.

I now have in my possession two of these oil paintings, but I have not the one of my father, Mr. Morgan Campbell, and I thought perhaps some one in or near Burlington might have in their possession at this time this portrait. If so, I am willing to pay for same $50.00 provided it is in any kind of shape for me to have put in good condition as to refinish and framing. And I wonder if you would be willing to make a statement in your paper to this effect.

Special Correspondent of the RECORDER

WITH ALL THE entries in for the national campaign, Washington is getting back to normal again and is preparing to take its usual important part in the presidential campaign. At least two of the candidates—Coolidge and LaFollette—will pass most of their time in the capital, resorting to the radio to carry their pleas and views to the voters.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE had planned to start off his campaign with a radio speech on an reduction, but the Democratic National Convention was on the air, so he had to content himself with giving the speech to a thousand officials and bureau chiefs who make up the business organization of the Government. Plans have been made, however, for broadcasting his address on July 24, in which he will formally accept the presidential nomination. It is also expected that similar plan for letting the public in on the proceedings will be made for the Dawes notification monies at Evanston, Ill., on July 29.

HIS ADVANCED YEARS have compelled Senator LaFollette to make arrangements for using the radio for many of his speeches. His managers want him to make a number of personal appearances in the ten or so states in the west and north west which he has a chance to carry, and he may decide to make a swing into this territory.

SENATOR BORAH has served notice on all the political parties that their campaign funds this year are going to undergo his closest scrutiny. Both the Republican and Democratic National Committees have been asked to report how much money they are reporting throughout the campaign where their funds are coming from. At a later date, the Borah committee, which was authorized by the Senate to investigate campaign expenditures, will meet in Chicago to inquire into any violations of the corrupt practices act, should charges be made against any candidate or political organization.

HERE'S A CHANCE to make some money. All you have to do is to capture a mail robber. The Postoffice Department, because of recent attacks on postal officials, is offering rewards ranging from $50 to $2,000 to anyone who brings in a mail bandit. The joker is that the rewards are offered contingent upon the appropriation of the funds of Congress at the next session.

JUSTICE MAY BE BLIND. BUT

Justice is blind, too often to blind. This is particularly true in relation to the thousands of fake stock swindlers who beat the law and "get away" with the money. A very few are punished, but fewer still are compelled to disgorge or restore the money stolen from widows and weak-minded individuals with the assistance of lurid literature distributed through the United States mails.

An isolated case that ought to be an example for the other courts is that of G. F. Redmond & Co., Inc., whose treasurer admitted in open court that he had amassed a fortune of more than $2,000,000 since 1920. It is admitted that he has some $300,000 hidden away, and the receiver demands that it be produced. Judge Martin has sent him to jail in "close confinement" until he obeys the court order to turn over these assets.

Throughout the United States there are millions of men and women who have contributed funds—perhaps the savings of years—to profits similarly piled up to profits of fraudulent enterprises. The history of the bankruptcy courts, if it could be written in all its hideousness, would reveal a disgraceful chapter of perjury and misapplication of assets, rightfully the property of creditors and investors. In uncounted instances their money has never been invested at all, but has been used in promoting other fraudulent enterprises or simply appropriated. The difficulty with enacting a remedy seems to lie in the fact that most astute attorneys are unable to draw such a distinctive line between the open shop "bucket shop" and the more or less haloed stock juggling and gambling concerns who place as exponents of purity and protection and belong to the union.

About July 10 is the time to transplant late calery plants. Wait for favorable transplanting conditions rather than set plants out during dry weather.

Fifty Teachers Win Scholarships Offered In National Competition For Promotion of Health Education

Fifty progressive elementary school teachers from as many cities will spend the summer or the next school year in studying health instruction for school-children, each aided by a scholarship of $500 won in the health teaching contest conducted by the American Child Health Association.

These teachers were awarded the scholarships in competition with more than sixteen hundred elementary teachers who were judged on the health instruction and correctional work they accomplished with their classes from December 1, 1923 to May 15, 1924.

The $25,000 for the scholarships was provided by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. Dr. Lee K. Frankel, head of the company's welfare work, pointed out that it was of vital importance to teach proper health habits to children. He said the best methods for doing this were being developed by individual teachers but still remained virtually hidden away from the great mass of teachers. The purpose of the contest is to reveal these methods as well as to give those who are doing the best work an opportunity for special study at accredited universities to make them even more effective. Educational authorities, who have reviewed the reports of the work of the winning teachers and of those who received honorable mention, expressed great enthusiasm for their high quality. Many of the reports, they declared, were equal in value to a thesis earning a Ph. D. degree.

The effectiveness of the competing teachers work was measured by the following standards:

1. Healthier children as judged by improvement in growth attested by height-weight records; and by removal of physical handicaps.
2. Healthier children, as judged by right attitudes, and sound knowledge, as evidenced in good health habits and practices.
3. Sound teaching methods as evidenced in teacher's plans, illustrated by children's work.

FROM STATE BOARD OF HEALTH.

Warning against so-called advertised cures for cancer is issued today by the State Board of Health as a result of the nation wide investigation by the American Society for the Control of Cancer, into these medicines which are said to contain, in the majority of instances, substances that are harmful and leave disfiguring scars without resulting in any relief from cancer.

Dr. A. T. McCormack, State Health Officer, says the sudden flooding of the country with literature advertising these cures is the result of the increasing death rate from cancer. However, he attributes this increase in cancer to the lengthened span of life rather than to any greater inroads from the disease.

"Although cancer is increasing," said Dr. McCormack "this is largely due, in my opinion, to the longevity of the human race as compared to fifteen years ago. Cancer only attacks those persons who have passed two score years except in rare cases. Fifty years ago, few persons passed two score years in the journey of life as compared to today, thus giving cancer a much wider field to prey upon."

In its battle to eradicate preventable diseases from the State, the State Board is holding a number of tuberculosis clinics in various parts of Kentucky. Following a successful clinic at Bardonia where several hundred persons were examined for tuberculosis and many of them treated, clinics were scheduled to be held in Lee County, Graves, Owen, Casey and Allen.

Due to the need for scientific treatment of tubercular patients, Hazelwood Sanitarium has been remodelled and is prepared to accept about fifty more patients. This institution, said to be the most modern in the central states, is a State institution under the direction of the State Board of Health.

"Have you a radio?" has until recently been a query similar to "have you a talking machine?" or have you a player piano?"

But in a very short time, asking a man if he has a radio will be as rude as asking him if he possesses a bathtub, or a telephone, or a clean shirt.

The Cleveland and New York conventions have, for the first time, been participated in by millions of voters. True, the participation was vicarious; the unseen audience was a silent one, but it was an intent one. And the educational result of millions of people having listened directly to the great leaders of both parties discussing questions of national importance unquestionably will be felt in November.

The newspapers, of course, carry full reports. But few people read all the newspaper has to say. The newspaper offers a choice of interesting news, politics and prize fights, base ball and battle, prehistoric discovery and prohibition doing bids for attention.

Listeners take what they get. Theirs is not to choose; theirs is to sit silent and absorb what is "in the air." There is usually choice of entertainment, but what greater entertainment is there than the making of history, the nominations, the baiting; not next day, cold in type, but now, this instant, heard in the home as soon as spoken in the convention? We are having a political rebirth. We are knowing where formerly we guessed. Just what the radio is to mean in citizenship training is only faintly foreshadowed, but already it seems so big and so important that soon, for one to confess he is "not interested in radio" will be the same as saying, "I am not interested in books!"

STATESMANSHIP GONE

A public official in a modern Congressional investigation is covered with political slime, forced to resign, the charges against him dropped, and the mud guns turned on to another victim. Providing charges seems a secondary consideration.

This system does not seem honorable, just as or fair. If continued, it will be impossible to give any man who cares for his family or his name to serve his country in a public office for regardless of guilt or innocence, political enemies can blacken him in such ways that it is practically impossible for him to defend himself.

Statesmanship seems to be a thing of the past except in rare instances, and dirty commercialized politics for the benefit of cliques, groups and blocs has taken its place.

Following a series of addresses in Western and Southern Kentucky last week, several rallies being in counties adjoining Senator John A. O. Stanley's home county, for the nomination of Senator Stanley for the Democratic ticket for United States Senator, has received encouraging reports of sentiment toward his platform based on law enforcement and against bipartisan political control of the State.

He aired Senator Stanley's record as a public office holder and declared Stanley was known in Washington as the "White hope of the illicit whiskey ring." He denounced Senator Stanley for his support of Jack Reed of Missouri, an arch enemy of Wilson, when the late President Wilson asked that Reed be not returned to the Senate. This was branded by Howe as the grossest ingratitude on the part of Mr. Stanley, especially after Wilson had asked the people of Kentucky to elect him (Stanley) to the Senate.

"Yet in her sorrow pleased that one who had suffered was near her."
—Evangelina.

The word sympathy comes from words that mean to suffer, and there can be genuine sympathy only where there has been similar suffering—except on the part of those rare souls who have a genius for sympathy.

Specialists say that when a tuberculosis victim is hemorrhaging, there is nothing better for him than the company of another victim who has hemorrhaged and recovered. If he himself once suffered just as severely or worse and got over it, the assurance does more good than any medicine that can be given. The sympathy of one who has survived the same suffering allays the victim's terrors, calms his nerves and allows nature a chance to exert her healing influence.

It is much the same with all our ills, whether mental, physical or psychological. The presence of some one else who has suffered the same sort of ill and survived it brings us courage. Such presence assures us that we are not singled out by fate for especial torment.

According to the oriental tale, a young mother once came to Buddha, carrying her dead baby in her arms. She told him how the child had been bitten by a serpent, and how it had grown pale and quiet soon afterward. Her neighbors had told her the child was dead, but she refused to believe them. She called upon the great teacher to heal her child and to restore the color to his cheeks. Buddha, to keep her from distraction, told her that if she would bring him a measure of black mustard seed from a house where no "father, mother, child or slave had died," things would be well.

The next day the woman returned without the seed. She told him she had searched everywhere in vain. Everywhere she went they had black mustard seed, and all were willing to give her a measure of it; but in every house some one had died. Then Buddha gently told her she had found

Searching for what none finds—that I had to give thee. He thou lovedst dead on the bosom yesterday; today Thou knowest the whole wide world weeps with thy woe: The grief which all hearts share grows less for one.

SEASONABLE FOODS

As oysters are now at their best, this is the time to serve them occasionally. An oyster stew is so commonly made that it needs little recommendation, but a good oyster stew is not the result of careless preparation.

Oysters should be carefully looked over to remove all shells; the liquor should be reserved after straining to add to the stew, and enough oysters should be cooked to serve the number who dine. Scald the milk, using a quart of milk to a pint of oysters. Drop the oysters into the oyster liquor increased by water to cover the oysters and cook them until their edges curl. Overcooked oysters are tough, and undercooked oysters are anything but palatable. After cooking the oysters remove them to the tureen, add enough butter to season well—the more butter, the better the stew—add salt and pepper to taste, blend the oyster liquor with the hot milk and pour boiling hot into the tureen. Serve at once with crisp oyster crackers.

Grilled Oysters.—Put a large piece of butter into a hot pan and when it smokes drop in the oysters a few at a time. When the oysters are browned remove to a hot dish and pour over them a sauce made of the oyster liquor and the melted butter, thickened and cooked with flour. Season with Worcestershire sauce, salt, cayenne and serve on toast. Garnish with parsley.

Fried Oysters.—Drain and wipe the oysters dry, roll in cracker crumbs seasoned with salt and pepper, dip in egg which has been beaten up with one tablespoonful of milk and then roll in crumbs. Fry quickly in hot fat, drain on paper as fast as they are taken up. Serve hot, garnished with parsley and lemon slices.

Browned Cracker Crackers.—Split milk crackers and spread with butter, sprinkle with grated cheese and cayenne. Put into a dripping pan and bake until delicately browned.

How to Remove Old Wax

Mix equal quantities of sal soda and slaked lime, using about one pound of the mixture to a pailful of water. Apply this with a mop, and afterwards scrub the floor with sand, soap and water. If necessary, apply diluted sulphuric acid, one part of acid to ten parts of water. Afterwards rinse in water containing a little ammonia and wipe dry. Remove any remaining traces of wax by means of turpentine, otherwise shellac will not adhere.

BUSINESS AND SENTIMENT

"I never let sentiment influence me in business." This was the explanation offered by a banker relative to a framed motto over his desk reading: "He laughs best who laughs
last."

Is business something cold, cruel, hard, selfish, utterly mercenary?
Does it demand that during the hours
we spend at it we must be less than human? Is business an invention of the devil?

Or can business be made as human as human nature itself? Can it be a source of satisfaction? Can it afford us an arena in which to cultivate and develop the finest faculties and instincts God implanted in us? Business, after all, is only another name for work. And is it not work that makes men of us all? Is it not work that yields us opportunities to grow and serve? Crush out all sentiment from our daily lives, and think you, would man rise to nobler heights or sink to deeper depths? He who scorns the thought of sentiment in business has miserably failed to learn the art of living.

May Providence preserve you and preserve me from spending our lives in a business into which no sentiment is ever allowed to enter.

LABOR GOING
INTO BUSINESS.

It is announced that Warren S.
Stone, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, perhaps the strongest union in America, proposes to abandon detailed direction of union affairs and devote his time to the banking and financial activities of the Brotherhood, which now controls five large banks, and contemplates establishing others.

Labor has now established twenty five banks in the United States and is actively planning to open ten more. It is taking up real estate and building on a large scale. It is invading other business and financial fields. And it has ambitions to extend such activities as rapidly as its capital, ability and experience will permit.

Do High Finance and Big Business object? Not at all. The largest investment institutions in Wall Street recently joined a labor band in handling a large bond issue. The Armour and other leading grain corporations in Chicago are offering to sell out lock, stock and barrel to farm cooperative organizations, so that our grain growers may be enabled to do their own marketing of their own crops. Utility companies are rapidly becoming owned by their customers.
Almost every progressive industrial corporation is making it easy for its wage-earners to become owners of its stock, and the day is already within sight when wage-earners will acquire control of certain important enterprises if they keep on as they are now doing. While, in its strict sense, this may be classed as "communism," it is a species that will be endored by all classes of Americans.

As a peach-loving city, New York has no equal in the United States. Chicago, with about half the population of New York, finds a demand for 1692 car loads of peaches each year.
New York uses 3939 car loads during the average year. A car load carries about 450 crates of 70,000 peaches.
Pittsburg ranks next with an average record of 1,000 cars per season.

The New York State Industrial
Commission reports a decline in factory employment in April and May amounting to 7 per cent. About 100-000 workers were dropped from factory payrolls during the two months.
The greatest decline has been in the apparel and textile trades with some slackening in the metal industry.

The assessed value of all property subject to taxation under the general property tax in 1921 was $128,667-
000,000, and the true value $178-
306,000,000. This does not represent the total wealth, inasmuch as personal property largely escapes taxation.

Respect for Books

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I RAN across grandmother's geography this morning, "The Village Elementary Geography," standing primly beside Bob's "First Year Latin Lessons." Bob is my nephew. Grandmother's book is yellowed with age, but, save for a few thumb prints, the pages are clean and without dog-ears.
It is still covered with the bright callio which her grandmother sewed on for her to keep the book from being soiled or injured when the little girl carried it to school.

Grandmother's name and the date are on the fly leaf written in a cramped childish hand, for grandmother was only eight when she got the book, and the date is near the beginning of the last century. They had respect for books in those days.
Robert's book presents a somewhat different appearance. It was bought only a few months ago, but the cover is torn and battered and hangs by a thread. Inside pages are mutilated or missing and pen sketches and hieroglyphics are scrawled across the text, making it almost unreadable. As I turn through I find dignified Cicero
wearing sombrero and smoking a pipe, and Caesar with a beard done in India ink.

The book has suffered every insult and indignity possible to be thought of by a child of fourteen.
Robert knows more than grandmother did at his age, but neither he nor the children with whom he associates have much love or respect for books.
As for me, I should as soon see a dear friend abused as a book I have worked with and come to know and to understand. I do not mind the ordinary wear of use and age any more than I am annoyed by wrinkles in the face of my friends who are growing old, but intentional indignities hurt me.
Is it because books are so plentiful or so cheap that we care so little for them? Is it because they cost us now no sacrifice, no struggle, no tender thought or anxious anticipation that we think of them so lightly and treat them about so carelessly? I have heard grandmother tell how happy she was and how proud when her father first put the little geography into her hands.
Neither children nor college students often feel so today.

We give courses in the appreciation of poetry and music and art; we have made rapid advancement in teaching children since grandmother's time.
Why do we not still teach them to love and respect their books?

Don't Trot in Same Class
When a man has more money than he knows what to do with he can't afford to believe that poverty and happiness trot in the same class.

(By Peter Keegan)
Special Correspondent of the RECORDER

WITH ALL THE entries in for the national political sweepstakes Washington is getting back to normal again and is preparing to take its usual important part in the presidential campaign. At least two of the candidates—Coolidge and LaFollette—will pass most of their time in the capital, resorting to the radio to carry their pleas and views to the voters.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE had planned to start off his campaign with a radio speech on tax reduction, but the Democratic National Convention was on the air, so he had to content himself with giving the speech to a thousand officials and bureau chiefs who make up the business organization of the Government. Plans have been made, however, for broadcasting his address on July 24, in which he will formally accept the presidential nomination. It is also expected that similar plan for letting the public in on the proceedings will be made for the Dawes notification ceremonies at Evanston, Ill., on July 23.

HIS ADVANCED YEARS have compelled Senator LaFollette to make arrangements for using the radio for many of his speeches. His managers want him to make a number of personal appearances in the ten or so states in the west and north west which he has a chance to carry, and he may decide to make a swing into this territory.

SENATOR BORAH has served notice on all the political parties that their campaign funds this year are going to undergo his closest scrutiny. Both the Republican and Democratic National Committees have been asked to report how much money they had to start with and to keep on reporting throughout the campaign where their funds are coming from. At a later date, the Borah committee, which was authorized by the Senate to investigate campaign expenditures, will meet in Chicago to inquire into any violations of the corrupt practices act, should charges be made against any candidate or political organization.

HERE'S A CHANCE to make some money. All you have to do is to capture a mail robber. The Postoffice Department, because of recent attacks on postal officials, is offering rewards ranging from $50 to $2,000 to anyone who brings in a mail bandit. The joker is that the rewards are offered contingent upon the appropriation of the funds of Congress at the next session.

JUSTICE MAY BE BLIND. BUT

Justice is blind, too often to blind. This is particularly true in relation to the thousands of fake stock swindlers who beat the law and "get away" with the money. A very few are punished, but fewer still are convicted, and even fewer are restored the money stolen from widows and weak-minded individuals with the assistance of lurid literature distributed through the United States mails.

An isolated case that ought to be an example for the other courts is that of G. F. Redmond & Co., Inc., whose treasurer admitted, in open court that he had amassed a fortune of more than $2,000,000 since 1920. It is admitted that he has some $300,000 hidden away, and the receiver demands that it be produced. Judge Morin has sent him to jail in "close confinement" until he obeys the court order to turn over these assets.

Throughout the United States there are millions of men and women who have contributed funds—perhaps the savings of years—to profits similarly piled up by promoters of fraudulent enterprises. The history of the bankruptcy courts, if it could be written in all its hideousness, would reveal a disgraceful chapter of perjury and misapplication of assets rightfully the property of creditors and investors. In uncounted instances their money has never been invested at all, but has been used in promoting other fraudulent enterprises or simply appropriated. The difficulty with enacting a remedy seems to lie in the fact that most astute attorneys are unable to draw a distinctive line between the open shop "bucket shop" and the more or less haloed stock peddling and gambling concerns who pose as exponents of purity and protection and belong to the union.

About July 10 is the time to transplant late celery plants. Wait for favorable transplanting conditions rather than set plants out during dry weather.

Fifty Teachers Win Scholarships Offered In National Competition For Promotion of Health Education

Fifty progressive elementary school teachers from as many cities will spend the summer or the next school year in studying health instruction for school children, each aided by a scholarship of $500 won in the health teaching contest conducted by the American Child Health Association.

These teachers were awarded the scholarships in competition with more than sixteen hundred elementary teachers who were judged on the health instruction and correctional work they accomplished with their classes from December 1, 1923 to May 15, 1924.

The $25,000 for the scholarships

was provided by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. Dr. Lee K. Frankel, head of the company's welfare work, pointed out that it was of vital importance to teach proper health habits to children. He said the best methods for doing this were being developed by individual teachers but still remained virtually hidden away from the great mass of teachers. The purpose of the contest is to reveal these methods as well as to give those who are doing the best work an opportunity for special study at accredited universities to make them even more effective.

Educational authorities, who have reviewed the reports of the work of the winning teachers and of those who received honorable mention, expressed great enthusiasm for their high quality. Many of the reports, they declared, were equal in value to those earning a Ph. D. degree.

The effectiveness of the competing teachers work was measured by the following standards:

1. Healthier children as judged by improvement in growth attested by height-weight records; and by removal of physical handicaps.
2. Healthier children, as judged by right attitudes, and sound knowledge—taught in good health habits and practices.
3. Sound teaching methods as evidenced in teacher's plans, illustrated by children's work.

FROM STATE BOARD OF HEALTH.

Warning against so-called advertised cures for cancer is issued today by the State Board of Health as a result of the nation wide investigation by the American Society for the Control of Cancer, into these medicines which are said to contain, in the majority of instances, substances that are harmful and leave disfiguring scars without resulting in any relief from cancer.

Dr. A. T. McCormack, State Health Officer, says the sudden flooding of the country with literature advertising these cures is the result of the increasing death rate from cancer. However, he attributes this increase in cancer to the lengthened span of life rather than to any greater inroads from the disease.

"Although cancer is increasing," said Dr. McCormack "this is largely due, in my opinion, to the longevity of the human race as compared to fifteen years ago. Cancer only attacks those persons who have passed two score years except in rare cases. Fifteen years ago, few persons passed two score years in the journey of life as compared to today, thus giving cancer a much wider field to prey upon."

In its battle to eradicate preventable diseases from the State, the State Board is holding a number of tuberculosis clinics in various parts of Kentucky. Following a successful clinic at Bardonia where several hundred persons were examined for tuberculosis and many of them treated, clinics were scheduled to be held in Lee County, Graves, Owen, Casey and Allen.

Due to the need for scientific treatment of tubercular patients, Hazelwood Sanatorium has been remodelled and is prepared to accept about fifty more patients. This institution, said to be the most modern in the central states, is a State institution under the direction of the State Board of Health.

"Have you a radio?" has until recently been a query similar to "have you a talking machine?" or have you a player piano?"

But in a very short time, asking a man if he has a radio will be as rude as asking him if he possesses a bathtub, or a telephone, or a clean shirt. The Cleveland and New York conventions have, for the first time, been participated in by millions of voters. True, the participation was vicarious; the unseen audience was a silent one, but it was an intent one. And the educational result of millions of people having listened directly to the great leaders of both parties discussing questions of national importance—unquestionably will be felt in November.

The newspapers, of course, carry full reports. But few people read all the newspaper has to say. The newspaper offers a choice of interesting news, politics and prize fights, horse ball and battle, prehistoric discovery and prohibition—doings bid for attention.

Listeners in take what they get. Their's is to choose; their's is to sit silent and absorb what is "in the air." There is usually choice of entertainment, but what greater entertainment is there than the making of history, the nominations, the balloting; not next day, cold in type, but now, this instant, heard in the home as soon as spoken in the convention? We are having a political rebirth. We are knowing where formerly we guessed. Just what the radio is to mean in citizenship training is only faintly foreshadowed, but already it seems so big and so important that soon, for one to confess he is "not interested in radio" will be much the same as saying, "I am not interested in books!"

STATESMANSHIP GONE

A public official in a modern Congressional investigation is covered with political slime, forced to resign, the charges against him dropped, and the mud guns turned on to another victim. Proving charges seems a secondary consideration.

This system does not seem honorable, just as or fair. If continued, it will be impossible for any man who cares for his family or his name to serve his country in a public office for regardless of guilt or innocence, political enemies can blacken him in such ways that it is practically impossible for him to defend himself.

Statesmanship seems to be a thing of the past except in rare instances, and dirty commercialized politics for the benefit of cliques, groups and blocs has taken its place.

Following a series of addresses in Western and Southern Kentucky last week, several rallies being in counties adjoining Senator A. O. Stanley's home county, John J. Howe, Democratic candidate for the nomination for United States Senator, has received encouraging reports of sentiment toward his platform based on law enforcement and against bipartisan political control of the State.

He aired Senator Stanley's record as a public office holder and declared Stanley was known in Washington as the "White hope of the illicit whiskey ring." He denounced Senator Stanley for his support of Jas. Reed of Missouri, an arch enemy of Wilson, when the late President Wilson asked that Reed be not returned to the Senate. This was branded by Howe as the grossest ingratitude on the part of Mr. Stanley, especially after Wilson had asked the people of Kentucky to elect him (Stanley) to the Senate.

Will bind these by such vows as is a shame,
A man should not be bound by, yet the which No man can keep."

—Idylls of the King.
In view of the seer's statement that no man could keep the half dozen vows that Arthur required of his knights, it is interesting to consider Benjamin Franklin's experiment in perfection.

Franklin tells us that when he was a young man he "conceiv'd the bold and arduous project of arriving at moral perfection." He listed thirteen virtues—"all that at that time occurred to me as necessary or desirable." The thirteen were: temperance, silence, order, resolution, frugality, industry, sincerity, justice, moderation, cleanliness, tranquillity, chastity and humility—a longer list than Arthur required of his knights and a more difficult.

Franklin felt he could not hope for success in his project unless he could make each of these virtues a habit. He knew he could not form so many habits at once, so he devoted a week at a time to each virtue. The first week he tried to make temperance a habit; the second week silence; and so on through the list. When he had finished his thirteen weeks, he started in again with temperance, thus going through his course four times a year. In time he felt it necessary to go through the course but once a year, later but once in several years, and finally not at all.

He made himself a little book of thirteen pages, allotting one page to each virtue. He ruled each page with a column for each day of the week and a line for each virtue of the list. Each night he reviewed his life of the day, and marked a black spot in his book for each offense of the day.

Franklin says he acquired the virtues in an imperfect state, having had especial trouble with order and humility. He, however, attributes all his success in life to the measure of virtue he did acquire through this experiment, together with the blessing of God.

Franklin planned to embody his own experience in a sort of textbook of life, to be called "The Art of Virtue," a book that "would have shown the means and manner of obtaining virtue, which would have distinguished it from the mere exhortation to be good, that does not instruct and indicate the means; but private and public business kept him so busy he never got his book written.

"PONTIFF" originally was applied to the chief priest of the Roman religion. It comes from "pontifex" and "facere" to make a bridge. The first pontiff was Ancus Marcius, credited with having built the Sublician bridge over the Tiber river at Rome. The name now is chiefly applied to the pope as the supreme pontiff of the Catholic church.

"Yet in her sorrow pleased that one who had suffered was near her."
—Evangeline.

The word sympathy comes from words that mean to suffer, and there can be genuine sympathy only where there has been similar suffering—except on the part of those rare souls who have a genius for sympathy.

Specialists say that when a tuberculosis victim is hemorrhaging, there is nothing better for him than the company of another victim who has hemorrhaged and recovered. If the latter assures the sufferer that he himself once suffered just as severely or worse and got over it, the assurance does more good than any medicine that can be given. The sympathy of one who has survived the same suffering allays the victim's terrors, calms his nerves and allows nature a chance to exert her healing influence.

It is much the same with all our ills, whether mental, physical or spiritual. The presence of some one else who has suffered the same sort of ill and survived it brings us courage. Such presence assures us that we are not singled out by fate for especial torment.

According to the oriental tale, a young mother once came to Buddha carrying her dead baby in her arms. She told him how the child had been bitten by a serpent, and how it had grown pale and quiet soon afterward. Her neighbors had told her the child was dead, but she refused to believe them. She called upon the great teacher to heal her child and to restore the color to his cheeks. Buddha, to keep her from distraction, told her that if she would bring him a measure of black mustard seed from a house where no "father, mother, child or slave hath died," things would be well.

The next day the woman returned without the seed. She told him she had searched everywhere in vain. Everywhere she went they had black mustard seed, and all were willing to give her a measure of it; but in every house some one had died. Then Buddha gently told her she had found

Searching for what none finds—that bitter balm I had to give thee. His thou lovest dead, but thou bloom yesterday; today Thou know'st the whole wide world weeps with thy woe: The grief which all hearts share grows less for one.

SEASONABLE FOODS

As oysters are now at their best, this is the time to serve them occasionally. An oyster stew is so commonly made that it needs little recommendation, but a good oyster stew is not the result of careless preparation.

Oysters should be carefully looked over to remove all shells; the liquor should be reserved after straining, to add to the stew, and enough oysters should be cooked to serve well the number who dine. Scald the milk, using a quart of milk to a pint of oysters. Drop the oysters into the oyster liquor increased by water to cover the oysters and cook them until their edges curl. Overcooking toughens them, and undercooked oysters are anything but palatable. After cooking the oysters remove them to the tureen, add enough butter to season well—the more butter, the better the stew—add salt and pepper to taste, blend the oyster liquor with the hot milk and pour boiling hot into the tureen. Serve at once with crisp oyster crackers.

Grilled Oysters—Put a large piece of butter into a hot pan and when it smokes drop in the oysters a few at a time. When the oysters are browned remove to a hot dish and pour over them a sauce made of the oyster liquor and the melted butter, thickened and cooked with flour. Season with Worcestershire sauce, salt, cayenne and serve on toast. Garnish with parsley.

Fried Oysters—Drain and wipe the oysters dry, roll in cracker crumbs seasoned with salt and pepper, dip in egg which has been beaten up with one tablespoonful of milk and then roll in crumbs. Fry quickly in hot fat, drain on paper as fast as they are taken up. Serve hot, garnished with parsley and lemon slices.

Browned Cheese Crackers—Split milk crackers and spread with butter, sprinkle with grated cheese and cayenne. Put into a dripping pan and bake until delicately browned.

How to Remove Old Wax

Mix equal quantities of turpentine and kerosene, using about one pound of the mixture to a pallful of water. Apply this with a mop, and afterwards scrub the floor with sand, soap and water. If necessary, apply diluted sulphuric acid, one part of acid to ten parts of water. Afterwards rinse in water containing a little ammonia and wipe dry. Remove any remaining traces of wax by means of turpentine, otherwise shellac will not adhere.

BUSINESS AND SENTIMENT

"I never let sentiment influence me in business." This was the explanation offered by a banker relative to a framed motto over his desk reading: "He laughs best who laughs
last."

Is business something cold, cruel,
hard, selfish, utterly mercenary?
Does it demand that during the hours
we spend at it we must be less than human? Is business an invention of the devil?

Or can business be made as human as human nature itself? Can it be a source of satisfaction? Can it afford us an arena in which to cultivate and develop the finest faculties and instincts God implanted in us? Business, after all, is only another name for work. And is it not work that makes men of us all? Is it not work that yields us opportunities to grow and serve? Crush out all sentiment from our daily lives, and think you, would man rise to nobler heights or sink to deeper depths? He who scorns the thought of sentiment in business has miserably failed to learn the art of living.

May Providence preserve you and me from spending our lives in a business into which no sentiment is ever allowed to enter.

LABOR GOING INTO BUSINESS.

It is announced that Warren S.
Stone, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, perhaps the strongest union in America, proposes to abandon detailed direction
of union affairs and devote his time to the banking and financial activities of the Brotherhood, which now controls five large banks, and contemplates establishing others.

Labor has now established twenty-five banks in the United States and is actively planning to open ten more. It is taking up real estate and building on a large scale. It is invading other business and financial fields. And it has ambitions to extend such activities as rapidly as its capital, ability and experience will permit.

Do High Finance and Big Business object? Not at all. The largest investment institutions in Wall Street recently joined a labor band in investing a large bond issue. The Armour and other leading grain corporations
in Chicago are offering to sell out lock, stock and barrel to farm cooperative organizations, so that our grain growers may be enabled to do their own marketing of their own crops. Utility companies are rapidly becoming owned by their customers.
Almost every progressive industrial corporation is making it easy for its wage-earners to become owners of its stock, and the day is already within sight when wage-earners will acquire control of certain important enterprises if they keep on as they are now doing. While, in its strict sense, this may be classed as "communism," it is a species that will be endored by all classes of Americans.

As a peach-loving city, New York has no equal in the United States. Chicago, with about half the population of New York, finds a demand for 1692 car loads of peaches each year.
New York uses 3939 car loads during the average year. A car load carries about 450 crates or 70,000 peaches.
Pittsburg ranks next with an average record of 1,000 cars per season.

The New York State Industrial
Commission reports a decline in factory employment in April and May amounting to 7 per cent. About 100-000 workers were dropped from factory payrolls during the two months.
The greatest decline has been in the apparel and textile trades with some slackening in the metal industry.

The assessed value of all property
subject to taxation under the general
property tax in 1921 was $128,667-
000,000, and the true value $178-
308,000,000. This does not represent the total wealth, inasmuch as personal property largely escapes taxation.

Respect for Books

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I RAN across grandmother's geography this morning, "The Village
Elementary Geography," standing prim-
ly beside Bob's "First Year Latin Lessons." Bob is my nephew. Grandmother's book is yellowed with age,
but, save for a few thumb prints, the pages are clean and without dog-ears.
It is still covered with the bright calico which her grandmother sewed on for her to keep the book from being soiled or injured while the little girl carried it to school.

Grandmother's name and the date
are on the fly leaf written in a cramped childlike hand, for grandmother was only eight when she got the book, and the date is near the beginning of the last century. They had respect for books in those days.

Roberts' book presents a somewhat different appearance. It was bought only a few months ago, but the cover is torn and battered and hangs by a thread. Inside pages are mutilated or missing and pen sketches and hieroglyphics are scrawled across the text, making it almost unreadable. As I turn through I find dignified Cicero
wearing sombrero and smoking a pipe,
and Caesar with a beard done in India ink. The book has suffered every insult and indignity possible to be thought of by a child of fourteen.
Robert knows more than grandmother
did at his age, but neither he nor the children with whom he associates have much love or respect for books.

As for me, I should as soon see a
dear friend abused as a book I have worked with and come to know and to understand. I do not mind the ordinary wear of use and age any more than I am annoyed by wrinkles in the face of my friends who are growing old, but intentional indignities hurt me.

Is it because books are so plentiful
or so cheap that we care so little for them? Is it because they cost us now
no sacrifice, no struggle, no tender thought or anxious anticipation that we think of them so lightly and treat them about so carelessly? I have heard grandmother tell how happy she was
and how proud when her father first
put the little geography into her hands.
Neither children nor college students often feel so today.

We give courses in the appreciation of poetry and music and art; we have made rapid advancement in teaching children since grandmother's time.
Why do we not still teach them to love
and respect their books?

Benjamin Rice, the youngest son of Ezekiel and Katie Rice was born July 25, 1924. He departed this life July 28, 1924, after an illness of a few days. At the time of his death he was twenty-three years eleven months and thirteen days of age. An infant brother and sister preceded him to the great beyond many years ago. He leaves to mourn his untimely death his father, mother, brother, sister and a sister, Mrs. Luther Hood, besides many friends and relatives. He united with the Bellevue Baptist church in the autumn of 1919, and remained faithful until death. We sympathize with the bereaved family in the loss of their loved one, but can only point to the one who has promised to comfort the mourner and wipe all tears from his eyes. He is our Savior and Redeemer. Services were conducted at the Baptist church July 10th, by Rev. Bush. C. S. Chambers had charge of the remains.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Burton, of Cincinnati, were week-end guests of Mrs. S. S. Asbury.

Mrs. James S. Asbury and Mrs. Ben S. Houston went by motor to Union Tuesday to attend the T. J. Judge sale and remained over night with their sister, Mrs. W. M. Rachel, Sr., and Mr. Rachel.

Miss Norma Winter Rachel and Mr. John M. Rachel, of Union, were guests last week of their aunt, Mrs. James S. Asbury and enjoyed immensely a picnic at the Aurora Beach Wednesday afternoon.

The series of lectures on the New Testament given by Prof. Snoddy, of Transylvania University, at the Petersburg Christian church last week was both enjoyable and instructive as was shown by the appreciative audiences that gathered each night to hear him.

A perfectly arranged luncheon-bridge was given Wednesday by Mr. Bernard C. Gaines, and seldom has there been a more delightful grouping of friends. Among the guests who enjoyed this pleasant occasion were Mrs. Stanley Palmer, of Auburn Indiana, Mrs. Robert Stark Hannah, of Los Angeles, California.

Mr. and Mrs. N. L. Moore returned home Sunday after a few days visit with relatives in the city.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard McNeely spent Saturday night and Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Horton.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Weiskopf of Rising Sun, spent the day Sunday with the former's sister, Mrs. Milton McWethy on Broadway.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Terrill and Mr. and Mrs. Everett McComas of Lawrenceburg, were visiting Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Sate, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Hensley and daughter Jaunita of Lawrenceburg, spent Sunday with Mrs. Hensley's sister and her mother Mrs. Helms.

Mrs. May T. Gridley of St. Louis arrived here Thursday where she will spend the summer with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Berkshire.
Miss Emma Nixon, Miss Mary and Olea Hensley and Justin Dolph, spent Sunday afternoon at Split Rock viewing the beautiful scenery there.

Among the many transient motorists in Petersburg Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. Maurice McCright and daughter Elizabeth and Mr. and Mrs. Tom Nixon of Cincinnati.

Petersburg was the scene of much wind and rain Saturday and much damage was done below town at the home of Mrs. E. L. Grant where the wind almost demolished the front porch.

We want news. If you know of any local happenings of interest please leave notes at Gordon's Confectionery where Miss Hensley, Mr. Gordon will see that they are published.

Prof. E. E. Snoddy of Transylvania College, Lexington, gave us some very interesting lectures on the New Testament at the Christian church last week, he was ably assisted by Miss Sadie Akers who led the singing and rendered several beautiful solos.

Mrs. W. T. Berkshire's residence near town was the scene Saturday night of much merriment when the young folks gathered there for music and dancing. That Mrs. Mary is a special hostess can be attested by the fact that all the young folks look forward to her parties.

Miss Maude Decker who has been attending Kentucky State Normal School at Richmond, has completed her studies and returned home. Miss Maude will teach one of the rooms in the Graded school here this fall and we believe she will make an excellent teacher for her grade as she is very popular with the "kiddies."

Most of Petersburg will be in Bellevue next Saturday when Petersburg and Bellevue base ball clubs cross bats in a double header which will no doubt be the deciding factor in the league as these two teams are slowly drawing to a close. Hubert White and "Paw" Brady have been selected as umpires for the game and are known by the writer to be two of as square "umps" as those two teams could have picked.

This is not a fish story in one sense of the word, but an actual fact; Chas. Shinkle caught a white bass, weighing 10 1/2 pounds in the river here one day last week without hook, line or bait. Mr. Shinkle and a party of fellows form here had been over at the mouth of Tanner's creek fishing without any luck and after getting out of the skiff on this side of the river upon their return the rest of the party had started up the bank when "Shinkle" noticed a fish swimming in close to shore and thinking to scare it waded in and succeeded in getting his hands in one of its gills after which it was an easy matter to bring it out on the bank.

Center View.
The W. M. V. met at the church Thursday, and spent the day quilting.

Oldest State Extant

In the Florence museum there is a schoolboy's slate 2,500 years old. Professor Halbherr says this is the most perfect specimen of an actual tablet for school exercises in Europe. The twenty-six letters run in Phoenician style from right to left and give the Chaldean form of the Greek alphabet brought to southwest Italy by European colonists.

If you feel like you must drink in the beauties of nature, its better to do it some time when you are not behind the wheel of an automobile.

STRICKEN WITH PNEUMONIA

H. R. Leidy, popular salesman and merchant of Florence, is very ill with typhoid-pneumonia contracted at a Fourth of July picnic. Mr. Leidy, whose general physical condition was already somewhat run down due to over work and responsibility, was exposed to conditions on July 4th that resulted in his contracting pneumonia. While his illness is not regarded as critical, at the same time his family and friends are very much concerned over his condition. He is under the expert care and attention of Dr. McCard, of Ludlow.

FARMERS ATTENTION

Don't forget that the care with which the crop is produced often has much to do with the results obtained when marketing time comes.

When a stranger comes into your community to start a local creamery don't forget that unless there are enough cows the venture will fail.

Remember that eggs are over 75 per cent water, see that the chicks are plenty of fresh water at all times.

The results in cooperative marketing depend upon services performed and how they are performed.

Watch chickens carefully for lice during the summer months.

The late plantings of sweet corn can be made up until the last of July.

Advance Millinery Shows an Era of High Crowns

Coming crowns cast their tallness before it is the crown which foretells the millinery trend. If it is high, mannish and "different" from that which we have been accustomed to see in the little cloche, then be assured it is a French model, just arrived. Its brim is quite sure to be narrow according to authentic forecasts, just as you see in this smart model fashioned of quality-lined black georgette crepe. Simple ribbon band with buckle is a director in the part of the millinery trim scheme outlined for the picture. A collar of sheer malines like that pictured, with a bit of graceful coque plume, counteracts any undue severity of line.

"Men are every now and then put, by the complexity of human affairs, into strange situations; but justice is the same, let the judge be in what situation he will."—Speech on "Conciliation With America."

We think at once of that ruler of ancient Sparta, who announced that the next man who violated a certain law should be put to death, and the first violator to be brought before him was his only son. The people pleaded with him not to break his own heart by sentencing his son, for the ruler was much loved and respected by his countrymen. He felt, however, as did Burke that "justice is the same, let the judge be in whatever situation he will." He reasoned that if the offender had not been his son, he would have been the son of some one else who would have loved him just as dearly, and that, therefore, the question of affection could not be considered.

Modern judges are rarely called upon to sentence their own sons; but they are frequently called upon to sentence their own ambitions. Our present system of electing judges makes it highly improbable that a judge who offends an important political boss or a strong organization will ever advance far in his profession. Some years ago, for example, there was a great scandal in one of our states about the spending of state money. The so-called graft cases were tried before a judge who refused to be influenced by anything except the evidence, and the millionaire grafters were found guilty. Those who did not escape by suicide were sent to the penitentiary. These men were friends of the strongest political boss then living. When that judge was nominated for a place in the Supreme court, his state was defeated for election, although all the state, with the exception of two cities, voted for him.

When a judge lets himself be influenced by the strange situation in which he finds himself, we may be pretty sure to hear of the tyranny of the law rather than of the justice of the law. Bacon, an eminent authority on the subject of judicature, if ever there were one, says: "One foul sentence doth more hurt than many foul examples. For these do but corrupt the stream; the other corrupteth the fountain."

And again: "A judge ought to prepare his way to a just sentence, as God useth to prepare his way, by praising valleys and taking down hills; so when there appeareth on either side an high hand, violent prosecution, cunning advantage taken, combination, power, great counsel, then is the virtue of a judge seen, to make iniquity equal; that he may plant his judgment as upon an even ground."

"HARD SHELL"

With all due respect to members of the Baptist church, it can be proved that they are somewhat "crabby" about their religion. Most of them are proud to be known as "hard-shell Baptists." The reference is to the "hard-shell crab," which has not molted recently and thus is known by its tough shell in distinction to the "soft-shelled crab," which is minus the advantage of a thick jacket. The term thus has come to stand for that which is unyielding.

DAIRY FACTS

Mixtures Favored for Feeding Dairy Calves

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Dairy calves in their second week will begin nibbling at grain, if any is available, and by this time they are one month old will often eat a half pound a day. Young calves relish wheat bran, which is often used in grain mixtures at the start. Corn has a desirable effect upon cattle of all ages and is available on most farms. It helps to make up for the fat removed from skim milk. Experiments have shown that cracked corn is better than ground corn for young calves. The United States Department of Agriculture recommends that bran and cracked corn be made the basis of the feed mixture when ever possible. Ground oats is a very good feed, but oats are not so generally grown as corn and usually cost more per unit to feed than corn and bran. The department recommends any of the following mixtures as suitable for young calves:

1. Three parts cracked corn and 1 part white bran.

2. Three parts cracked corn, 1 part wheat bran, and 1 part ground oats.

3. Three parts cracked corn, 1 part wheat bran, 1 part ground oats, and 1 part linseed meal.

4. Four parts cracked corn, 1 part wheat bran, 1 part ground oats, and 1 part blood meal.

5. Oats, ground.

Some time during the third month calves will probably be eating about 3 pounds of grain a day. When the grain is fed with the separate milk it should never be mixed with the milk, and it is questionable whether there is any advantage in soaking or bolting.

Change Calf Gradually From Whole to Skim Milk

When the calf is from two to four weeks old, whole milk can be replaced gradually with skim milk. The exact time of the starting of the change will depend upon the condition of the calf. Upon the first day of the change, replace one-half to one pound of the whole milk with an equal amount of the skim milk. The second day a like substitution will be made, and so on each day, until the calf is receiving nothing but skim milk. This makes for a gradual change and no ill results will follow. The skim milk will be increased in amount as the calf grows in size and gets older.

When the calf is about six weeks old it should be receiving about 18 pounds of skim milk daily. The skim milk feeding of the calf may be continued until the calf is from 8 to 10 months old. Calves may be weaned younger than this if it is necessary, but it would be much better if the feeding of the skim milk could continue until the calf is 8 or 10 months old.—Extension Service, Colorado Agricultural college.

Depraved Appetites of Cows May Be Dangerous.

Pregnant cows are apt to chew and swallow all manner of foreign substances, including rags, bones, leather, bark, dirt, crockery, paper, and even clothes off the line. This vice usually subsides after calving, but in many more instances all of the cattle in the herd seem to have the same bad habit. It may prove dangerous or fatal in some cases, for where vines, nails, or other sharp objects are swallowed they tend to penetrate the wall of the second stomach, diaphragm and sac of the heart, causing traumatic pericarditis. Be careful not to let wires from tags or sacks get into the feed, or where cattle can get at them. Wire brushes sometimes used to scrub out feed troughs and mangers are also dangerous and have caused many fatal attacks of the disease mentioned. Depraved appetite, or pica as it is technically called, and constant licking and smacking the tongue and lips, are, as a rule, the evidence of indigestion due to incomplete or unsuitable rations.

DAIRY NOTES

It's as unprofitable to overfeed a poor cow as to underfeed a good one.

Cows need as much care for the summer as for the winter, only of a different nature.

The milk pail and other containers have been found to be the greatest source of contamination.

Cows will do best if allowed as much green feed as they can handle. Caution should always be taken that they do not gorge themselves when they are unaccustomed to green feed.

Dairy animals relish green sweet corn exceedingly. It has wonderful qualities for sustaining milk flow in hot weather.

The average production of the dairy cows of this country can be increased fully 20 per cent through a better system of feed and care.

Use great care in milking to insure against barn flavors which usually get into the cream through careless methods in milking, which allow dirt to drop into the milk.

SUPERSTITIOUS OVER VOLCANIC ERUPTIONS

Result of Pele's Wrath in 1824, Hawaiians Believe.

Hilo, Hawaii.—Science and superstition vie with each other in explaining the present unusual activity at the Halemaunau fissure of the Kilauea volcano.

Science, in the person of Roy Finch, temporarily in charge of the volcano observatory at Kilauea, advances the theory that tons of rock, avalanched down from the sides of the crater, have choked the vent through which Mother Nature usually eases the pressure on the earth by pouring forth surplus lava into the great pit, raising the lava lake in the crater and withdrawing the fiery substance from the crater when pressure has been more than relieved.

The lava underneath the surface, unable to find its way into the open, generates gas which blasts its way out of the vent, carrying with it tons of rocks and dust. The explosions and earthquakes shake down further avalanches from the crater sides, which again may block the vent in an unending circle, according to the theory.

But the Hawaiians have returned to history and tradition, to the act of the great Kapelani, the Christian priest who dared the wrath of Pele, the fire goddess, exactly 100 years ago. They say that Pele waited a century to become "meh" or angry, with the people of the priest and to vent her wrath on the priest's impious act.

In December, 1824, the tale runs, the priest Kapelani, converted to Christianity by the first missionaries who came in 1820, forsook the worship of her people. She journeyed from Hilo to Maunaloa and spent the night on the brink of Halemaunau. She ate of the "tabu," or forbidden herbs, which were consecrated to Pele, an act of insult to the goddess. She stood on the brink of the crater, with its ever-active lava lake below, and cried to Pele: "Jehovah is most powerful, Jehovah is my God. I defy thee, Pele."

Hawaiians stood in awe while she spoke. Pele, they said, would surely rise in her wrath, make the earth tremble and cast forth the seething lava of her lake, as she did in 1790 when the army of the high chief Keona was annihilated. But nothing happened.

Kapelani had won a great moral victory, but today the Hawaiians shake their heads, some of them saying that Pele merely waited 100 years to open her campaign of vengeance.

Protest Over Idle Mozambique Land

London.—In an effort to enforce cultivation of land in the Portuguese province of Mozambique, in east Africa, the high commissioner of the province has announced his intention to annul concessions where the land has not been put to any use by the concessionaires. A large number of cases are involved.

Paints on Web of Spider

Berlin.—What is regarded as one of the most singular works of art in existence is now in the possession of a Berlin dealer. It is a painting 6 by 4 inches, executed on a spiderweb and preserved by being clamped between two plates of glass, so that one can examine it on both sides. The same depicted is that of a happy family sitting together.

Elk Annoy Farmers

Wenatchee, Wash.—Elk, said to be adept at scaling fences and making short work of ordinary haystacks, are troublesome to farmers near Okanogan. Organized groups repeatedly have driven the elk herds back into the foothills by firing blank shells over their heads, but with the return of hunger the animals revisit the farm lands.

Some Family!

Huntington, W. Va.—Deputy Marshal E. R. Burkirk of this city has discovered what is claimed to be the largest Republican family in the State. The head of the family, Samuel Spalding, eighty-one, lives in Wayne county, and is the father of 22 children. The oldest child is aged fifty-seven, and the youngest has just passed its first birthday.

Unhurt by Four-Story Fall

New York.—Katherine De Marco, three, is playing around her home in Brooklyn, none the worse after a fall from the fourth floor fire escape of the building. The child landed on a grass plot and was found to be suffering merely from shock. Her mother, Mrs. Rosa De Marco, became hysterical and had to be treated by an ambulance surgeon.

Not many things on the stage will bear close inspection.

Fashion's Vogue Brings the Ostrich Back Again

Ostrich has come back into fashion. Not only military uniforms, but the revival of the ostrich vogue, but costuming throughout is lavishly garnished with ostrich fringe, tassels and other novel effects. As a consequence of this favor for ostrich the old-fashioned ostrich bonnet is now new-fashioned.

Portrait effects through ostrich placements are part of the charm of millinery this season. The little roll-brimmed model in the picture says summer in its straw facing, while it speaks autumn in its black silk plush crown; therefore it is an ideal midseason type.

WHY WORRY?

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

"STRINGS" slouched into the office a few weeks ago and dropped into the chair in front of my desk a crumpled and despondent heap. He had been exposed to chickenpox, his best girl was going to a dance with a Phil Gam, and his quiz grade in philosophy was 59. He was the picture of gloom and despair.

"I tell you," he said, after a few moments of ominous silence, "I'm worried."

There are few states of mind more useless and harmful than worry. Half the things we worry about never happen, and the other half right themselves if we go along cheerfully and do our work.

I was brought up in an atmosphere of worry—that is, I lived as a child on a farm—and I early got my fill of it and learned its futility. There was the worry of chinch bugs and cut worms, of early frost and hot winds, of drought and wet spells, of low prices and falling crops, of hog cholera and bots and glanders and foot rot, and a thousand and one diseases and disasters which seldom overtook us.

"We are going to have a fine crop of corn this year," I said to a complaining neighbor.

"Yes, but I'm worried for fear we won't get anything for it," was his cheerful reply. "When we have a crop we don't get anything for it, and when prices are high we don't raise any thing."

And I never remember a crop failure or a time when things did not turn out pretty satisfactorily, though few ever learned to give up worrying.

There are few things so useless as worrying. It will not win a girl's love or raise the price of potatoes; it will not get a man a job or make him immune from the hives. It keeps no situation; it gets one nowhere; it is as gloomy and as uncertain a pleasure as the enjoyment of poor health.

There are few things which so inhibit and discourage progress or success as worry. It corrodes every pleasure; it destroys ambition; it is a foe to content; it robs a man of the will or of the desire to think or to work. When a man worries he must give all of his time to it.

The man who says he can't help worrying resigns himself to emotional slavery too easily. Worry is amenable to the will as is every other form of nervousness or hysteria. We encourage it by coining it and by yielding to it.

"Strings" told me the other day that he had a letter from his mother, telling him that he had had chickenpox when he was a child, so that there was no danger of contagion at this time; his instructor had raised his grade in philosophy—it was 83; and his best girl had just sent him a beautiful birthday cake with a heart in the center and with candles around it.

Why worry?

FOURTH-CLASS POSTMASTER EXAMINATION

The United States Civil Service Commission has announced an examination to be held at Burlington, Ky., on August 16, 1924, as a result of which it is expected to make certification to fill a contemplated vacancy in the position of fourth-class postmaster at Grant, and other vacancies as they may occur at that office, unless it shall be decided in the interests of the service to fill any vacancy by reinstatement. The compensation of the postmaster at this office was $658 for the last fiscal year.

Applicants must have reached their twenty-first birthday on the date of the examination, with the exception that in a state where women are declared by statute to be at full age for all purposes at eighteen years, women eighteen years of age on the date of the examination will be admitted.

Applicants must reside within the territory supplied by the post office for which the examination is announced.

Howard Kirkpatrick, who has operated the lynchtype machine in this office ever since the same was installed, was the victim early Monday morning of an attack of lumbago, putting him out of business for several days at least. This accounts for the scarcity of county news and other types that must set on this machine. On such sudden notice we were unable to secure an operator and were compelled to use plate matter in order to get out a paper.

Ben Jones, Jr., who has been in jail since April, was released last Saturday.

Elder H. M. Curry will preach at Mt. Pleasant at 11 o'clock Sunday, July 27th.

Clifford Sutton, of Cincinnati, spent the first of the week visiting relatives at McVillie.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Hall spent the latter part of last week with their daughters in Newport.

J. L. Kite and Postmaster Hickman attended I. O. O. F. Lodge at Florence, Saturday evening.

Hon. A. B. Rouse, wife and sons of Erlanger, spent Saturday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Blythe.

Hubert Rouse, of near Limburg, and F. H. Rouse and wife spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Kelly.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Berkshire and children spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Allen Thompson at Laurel, Indiana.

Mrs. Eugenia Bridgewater and children, of Akron, Ohio, are with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Fowler.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Gaines and children, and Miss Amelia Corbin, of Limburg, spent Sunday with Mrs. Alice Snyder.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Blythe and Mr. and Mrs. Haasner, of Lawrenceburg, Ind., visited Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Blythe, Sunday afternoon.

Dr. and Mrs. J. O. Farnish, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Revell Farnish, of Covington, were calling on friends in Burlington, Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Botta, of the East Bend pike, visited Mrs. Bortnoph, last Sunday, who was seriously injured in an automobile wreck, and is at St. Mary's Hospital.

Kentucky News Cullings

An epitome of the most important events transpiring throughout the state Frankfort—Everett Fields, son of Governor Fields, became referee of the workmen's compensation board at a $2,100 annual salary. Arthur T. Bryson, formerly was referee.

Lexington—Fayette County will continue to place a tax of 15 cents a $100 on farm raw materials, or unmanufactured farm products, it was voted at a meeting of the Fiscal Court. This class of property was at first exempted from taxation by the state Legislature, but later the levy was made optional.

Jamestown—B. A. Lawless, Russell County School Superintendent, sentenced to two years on a charge of altering a public record, has been granted an appeal by the Court of Appeals. He continues as county superintendent, having won an injunction suit against the Russell County Board of Education.

Maysville—Alexander Raines, 80, farmer, of this county, was killed instantly by a C. & O. passenger train at the foot of Market street. Witnesses say he walked directly in front of the train. Both legs, both arms and his neck were broken. He leaves a widow and five children. He was a Civil War veteran.

Covington—Stanley Craddock, Jr., three-and-one-half-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Craddock, was injured when he ran in front of an automobile driven by Roy Snoot. The boy, while playing with companions, ran into the street directly in the path of the automobile. Snoot stopped almost instantly, but his car struck the child.

Louisville—L. C. Cook, Negro, pleaded guilty to a charge of house-breaking and accepted a term of 10 years in the penitentiary. Cook was arrested following a number of robberies. When police searched the home of the Negro, among other things were several containers of Cuban perfume which had been reported stolen from the home of Mrs. J. P. Van Winkle and this led to his conviction.

Frankfort—Joe S. Boggs was re-elected state highway engineer by the State Highway Commission; W. H. Edwards, county engineer of Fayette County, was appointed maintenance engineer and B. N. Todd, of Oklahoma, engineer of construction to fill vacancies. The appointments all are at the pleasure of the commission. Chairman W. C. Montgomery said the election of Mr. Boggs was unanimous.

Lexington—Mrs. William Thornton Lafayette, widow of Judge W. T. Lafayette, former dean of the College of Law of the University of Kentucky, was appointed a worker in the extension division to look after work done by the university in co-operation with the women's clubs of the state. Mrs. Lafayette will return to Lexington from Cythlana, where she has made her home since the death of Judge Lafayette.

Mayfield—Horace Franklin Spraggins, 14, son of J. D. Spraggins, was drowned while in a pond near his home. He had been in the water some time when he swam out to deep water and cried to his companions around the bank, "look at me," and holding one hand aloft he grasped his nose with the other, all in a joyful mood, and dropped under the water. He came up once, his companions stated, his head just showing. When he failed to make his appearance again, the youngsters gave the alarm. The body was recovered about half an hour later. He was buried near his home.

Lexington—An opinion which gives victory to George Duncan Draper, in his suit against his mother, Mrs. Lily Duncan Draper of Santa Barbara, Cal., and Lexington, for the recovery of his share of a trust fund established by his father and amounting to a quarter of a million dollars, was handed down by Judge A. M. J. Cochran in Eastern Kentucky district of United States Court. Judge Cochran ruled that a gift deed made by young Draper of his share of the trust fund to his mother in June, 1917, was invalid. A confirmatory deed executed in March, 1923, likewise was not considered binding and the court saw no valid reason why the son should be denied his patrimony.

Lexington—D. B. Barrett, an attendant at the Eastern State hospital, was arrested and placed under $5,000 bond on charge of assault and battery following the death of John Johnson, 78, whom Barrett brought to the hospital from Barboursville. Condition of the patient when he arrived at the hospital, caused an investigation by Dr. Fred G. Larnie, superintendent. His body and arms were bruised and scarred, giving evidence that he had been tied. His death was caused by pneumonia, induced by two broken ribs.

Ashland—In a raid on an old building here federal agents seized several gallons of whisky, 400 gallons of home-brew, three autos and one truck, 68 cases of gallon jars, 75 barrels, 1,200 pounds of sugar and six brewing outfit. Two suspects are sought.

Danville—Dr. M. P. Hudson, Houston Tex., who was recently called, as pastor of the Danville Baptist Church and who accepted the invitation of the congregation, asked to be released because of his college work in Texas and the request was accepted by the church membership.

Madisonville—Attending physicians say it is only a few hours until Mrs. Effie Stewart, 17, bride of five weeks, who shot herself with a shotgun at Earles, Muhlenburg County, supposed to have committed suicide. She pulled the trigger with her toe and the charge struck her in the face. She is in the Madisonville Hospital with no hope of recovery.

Middlesboro—James Pennington, one of the oldest mountaineers of this section, died at the age of one hundred years, five months and several days from the effects of injuries suffered when he fell from an apple tree when he was 93. He was trimming the branches of the tree and never recovered fully from the fall. He is the last immediate survivor of his family and leaves a host of descendants.

Louisville—Something new in the way of a "dog bite" suit came to light when, in Circuit Court, Bertha Lee Martin, suing through S. A. Martin as next friend, filed a petition against P. J. Fisher, 3515 West Walnut street, for $1,000 damages. Plaintiff says she was on Brook street on June 15, when a bull dog jumped out of Fisher's automobile, which was passing, and attacked her. A. W. Doney and W. T. McNally are attorneys for the plaintiff.

Paducah—Suffering partial paralysis from a stray bullet wound inflicted by his son, Peton Crisp, 54, Caldwell County farmer, is in a critical condition at Riverside Hospital. Crisp was shot at his home, about eight miles from Princeton, by his son, Lee Crisp, 25, who was arrested by a Caldwell County officer. He said he had a "distinct motive" in shooting his father, who was hit with a 32-caliber bullet, which lodged in his spine. He was brought here.

Frankfort—The Citizens Bank of Stamping Ground, with a shortage running between $5,000 and $10,000, went into the hands of the state banking department. All surplus capital of the bank will be wiped out and a 100 per cent assessment will be necessary to pay depositors, said A. A. Phillips, deputy commissioner, when the institution was taken over by the state banking department. A $5,000 to $10,000 shortage was revealed following investigation by Mr. Phillips and H. H. Shanks, bank examiner.

Lexington—Upon the expiration of her term as acting dean of Hamilton College, Mrs. A. D. Harmon, wife of the president of the institution and Transylvania College, has retired. The board of trustees is expected to appoint a new head before the beginning of the fall term. Mrs. Harmon, who is a graduate of Cotner College, Nebraska, and a former teacher in that institution, took over the affairs of the school last summer. Under her supervision $40,000 was expended on the renovation of the building and grounds and the enrollment was increased materially.

Frankfort—The total cost for maintaining institutions under the care of the State Board of Charities and Corrections in the fiscal year ending June 30 totaled $1,067,346.50, Joseph Byers, commissioner of public institutions, declared in a report on "public wards of the state" made public. The report showed: "The average cared for during the year was: insane, 4,701; feeble-minded, 428; juvenile delinquents, girls 104, boys 390; state prisons, Frankfort and Eddyville, 1,901; total, 7,500. The average per capita cost, based upon total expenditures for all purposes and daily average cared for during the year, was $284.20."

Frankfort—Sixteen more auto bus transportation companies, operating between fixed terminals, have been licensed by Griffin Kelly, director of the Kentucky Automobile Bus Lines, bringing the total to fifty. Companies licensed include Curtis Hailton, Mt. Sterling; A. N. Denton & Son, Owingsville; Cadis R. R. Company, Cadis; R. D. Lee, Middlesboro; R. E. Rutledge, Winchester; M. M. Reid, Lexington; W. B. Graham, Warsaw; I. W. H. W. Barnes, Lexington; James Darlington, Rev. Smith-Safety Motor Carriers Company, Louisville; Charles S. Neal, Newport; Service Bus Company, Inc., Glasgow; A. L. Lathan, Owensboro; A. M. Glasscock, Wallingford and Grey Bros., Springfield.

Paris—In an attempt to learn to swim, with a boy companion as instructor, Forest Allen, 8, son of Mr. and Mrs. Zeh Allen, was drowned in Yancey's Pit near here. He was lying across a plank when he fell off and sank. An effort to save him by several boys in the pool was futile. The body was recovered fifteen minutes later. His parents, two younger brothers and a sister survive. The body was taken to Portsmouth, O., for burial.

ROAD BUILDING

HIGHWAY OFFICIALS' UNJUSTLY CENSURED

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Lack of understanding of the significance of highway cost figures is often the cause of unjust criticism of highway officials, says the bureau of public roads, United States Department of Agriculture.

Generally such criticism takes the form of comparing the cost of local construction with construction of the same type performed in some other section or at some previous time. The newspaper will naturally wish to inform itself about such matters, but his comparison should be thorough rather than superficial.

Differences in cost are often due to differences in thickness of pavement, width of roadway, drainage structures, grading, length of haul of materials and the care with which the material is prepared and placed in the roadway.

Even where the above conditions are identical there is often cause for considerable difference in cost due to wages of labor and prices of materials. To illustrate this point, the bureau has assumed a road in which the qualities per mile are as follows: Grading 8,000 cubic yards, high-type surfacing, 10,000 square yards and 75 cubic yards of concrete for drainage structures. Taking average prevailing prices it has estimated the mileage of road which could be built with $100,000 as follows:

	East, South, New	United States	England
1919	2.9	2.1	2.8
1920	2.4	2.5	1.9
1921	2.6	2.7	2.1
1922	3.3	3.3	2.3
1923	3.0	2.9	2.3

How Good Highways Assist the Farmer

They link the farm with the city.

They enable him to take advantage of favorable markets.

They prevent crop waste on the farm.

They bring the church, school house, township house nearer.

They increase his social opportunities.

They make the boys and girls satisfied with home life.

They make traveling a pleasure.

They prevent wear and tear on his motor vehicle.

They bring aid more quickly in case of fire.

They bring the doctor more quickly in the event of sickness.

They increase the value of his property.

They save time.

They eliminate the mud tax.

They make life happier and more worth living.—Ohio Good Roads Federation.

Road Building Projects in Alabama Are Booming

Alabama has something like 175,000 motor cars. At the rate of increase shown last year the state will have a quarter of a million motor vehicles at the end of 1923. The annual revenue is now around one and a half million dollars. The state highway commission will soon come into possession of something like $7,000,000 from the sale of state bonds, the entire proceeds going immediately into road building projects in the various counties. These sums, together with federal aid and the revenues from automobiles and the returns from the gasoline tax, should constitute a healthy budget for use in solving the road needs of the people. The amount will permit the continuance of road building on a big scale during this year and the next.—Selma Times-Journal.

Good Roads Notes

Scientists of Yale university and highway officials of the state of Connecticut are working on a plan for accident prevention in motor vehicle traffic.

The state of Georgia has scores of towns maintaining tourists' camps for motorists—with free lights, water, and other conveniences, and in some cases free gas for cooking. Georgia is crossed by the Dixie highway.

What, it is said, will be the longest "white way" in the South is to be made by electrically lighting the 22-mile concrete highway between the cities of Dallas and Fort Worth, Tex.

The United States Department of Agriculture estimates that 134,400,000 tons of farm products go over our highways yearly.

The Canadian Good Roads association is adopting uniformity in signs to be placed along the public highways in the Dominion. The caution symbols will be painted in black on a white background, the dimensions of the danger signs to be standardized at two feet square. The signs are to be located at a distance of 300 feet from the point of danger.

"Sleep that knits up the ravell'd sleeve of care."

The death of each day's life, sore labor's bath, Balm of hurt minds, great nature's second course, Chief nourisher in life's feast."

—Macbeth.

Man can live longer without food than without sleep. There are many recorded instances where men have gone for forty or more days without food and have recovered from the experience. I do not know the maximum number of days that a man can go without sleep, but it is far short of forty. The expert workmen who line the great digesters in paper mills must often work for sixty hours without more sleep than they can snatch during the time that new material is being brought in to them, never more than ten minutes at a time. Surgeons and doctors sometimes work continuously for fifty or sixty hours at a time after great battles. These men are always exhausted after such periods of work and sleep excessively long periods in order to get back to normal. It is probable that a man who was not working could go without sleep for a longer period; but it seems to be the general testimony of those who have been kept awake for as much as sixty hours, by third degree methods, that by that time they are willing to confess to any crime or do anything else to get sleep.

The virtues of sleep as a "balm of hurt" minds is sung by Shakespeare in the "Tempest" as follows: It seldom visits sorrow; when it doth it is a comforter. Young expressed much the same thought in the lines: Tired nature's sweet restorer, balmy sleep! He, like the world, his ready victim pays Where fortune milks—the wretched his forsakes.

While the ancients described Somnus, the god of sleep, as the gentlest of the gods, "the tranquillizer of minds and soother of care-worn hearts." Sir Philip Sidney sang of sleep as:

The balm of sleep, of wit, the balm of woe.

The poor man's wealth, the prisoner's release.

Mrs. Browning refers to the Psalmist's exaltation of sleep:

Of all the thoughts of God that are borne inward into souls afar, Along the Psalmist's music deep, How tell me if that any sleep, For gift of grace surpassing this— He giveth his beloved sleep.

Scientists try every now and then to find some substitute for sleep, just as they search for the secret of eternal youth and for perpetual motion. Instead of begrudging the third of our lives that we must spend in sleep, however, it seems much more to the purpose to try to live more intensively during the two-thirds of our lives that we are awake.

"... a pinch of salt."

—Silas Marner.

The first time I ever realized that salt was not just salt, no matter where it came from, was one morning when we had to wait for hours while a Canadian fisherman who was to take us across the bay removed the roe from a large sturgeon that he had caught and prepared it for shipment across the lake to one of our flourishing cities, where it was to be converted into Russian caviar. His part of the process involved the use of a great quantity of salt. He told us he used only German salt, which he declared was four times as salty as our salt.

Recently our interest in salt has been quickened by the statements that the alarming increase in golter is due to a deficiency in the salt we use. For a long time scientists have been puzzled by the fact that golter showed a tendency to be so common in certain sections of the world that they were known as golter belts or golter zones. Switzerland has long been known as a golter zone. Recently it has appeared that we have a well-developed golter zone in the region of the Great Lakes, one author claiming that a fifth of the school children in that area have enlarged thyroid glands, or physiological golter. Golter is rarely found among people living near the ocean. The reason became more or less evident when research workers discovered a few years ago that children suffering from golter could be much benefited by minute doses of iodine.

Iodine is an element that is most abundant in the ocean—the iodine of commerce is derived from sea weeds. Sea foods, and salt secured by evaporation from water, contain all the iodine needed to keep the body in good condition. It is claimed, however, that much of the salt sold nowadays is deficient in iodine, perhaps due to the refining processes that have given us whiter, finer salt than our parents knew.

One of the ironies of our everyday life is that the more we refine our foods, the more we find it necessary to eat something to take the place of what we have refined out of the original food. The highly refined salt must have iodine added. Those who live on bread baked from highly refined flour must eat bran to replace the bran fiber out of the ground wheat, and must eat yeast to supply the vitamin principle excluded when the wheat germ is left out of flour.

Man can live longer without food than without sleep. There are many recorded instances where men have gone for forty or more days without food and have recovered from the experience. I do not know the maximum number of days that a man can go without sleep, but it is far short of forty. The expert workmen who line the great digesters in paper mills must often work for sixty hours without more sleep than they can snatch during the time that new material is being brought in to them, never more than ten minutes at a time. MORE GOOD EATS

For the soup here is a good one worth trying:

Veronique Soup.—To three cupsful of veal stock add one cupful of stewed and strained tomatoes to which is added one-eighth of a teaspoonful of soda. Thicken with one and one-half tablespoonsful each of butter and flour cooked together; then add one and one-half tablespoonsful of salt, a few grains of cayenne, one-half cupful of cooked rice, one and one-half pintmeats cut into strips and one-fourth cupful of heavy cream.

Baked Larded Liver.—Lard and skewer the upper surface of calf's liver, place in a pan and spread with the following mixture: Cream three tablespoonsful of butter and add one and one-fourth tablespoonsful of salt, one-half teaspoonful each of ground clove and pepper. Pour around one-half cupful of boiling water and cook in a moderate oven one hour, basting every ten minutes. Remove to serving dish, skim off the fat from the liquor in the pan, add one cupful of good fruit juice and strain around the liver.

Salmon Salad.—Take salmon from the can in large pieces, drain from the liquor and arranged in a pyramid in the center of a round chop plate. Around the salmon place the curled leaves of head lettuce, in each a spoonful of peas well seasoned with mayonnaise dressing. Garnish with lemon quarters.

Halibut a la Creme.—Cook two cupsful of tomatoes twenty minutes, with one cupful of water, one slice of onion, three cloves, one-half tablespoonful of sugar. Melt three tablespoonsful of butter, add three tablespoonsful of flour and stir into the hot mixture. Add three-fourths of a teaspoonful of salt, cook ten minutes and strain. Clean two pounds of halibut, put into a pan, pour around it half of the sauce and bake thirty-five minutes, basting often. Remove to a platter and serve with the remaining sauce.

How to Remove Old Wax

Mix equal quantities of sal soda and slaked lime, using about one pound of the mixture to a pailful of water. Apply this with a mop, and afterwards scrub the floor with sand, soap and sulphuric acid, one part of acid to ten parts of water. Afterwards rinse in water containing a little ammonia and wipe dry. Remove any remaining traces of wax by means of turpentine, otherwise shellac will not adhere.

"... slow through the suburbs plodded the German farmer, with flowers and fruit for the market."

—Evangeline.

The descendants of the German farmers who plodded through Philadelphia's streets during Evangeline's day are the Pennsylvania Dutch of the present.

The land of the Pennsylvania German extends northward and westward from Philadelphia a hundred miles or so in each direction, and so far as language and customs are concerned is a foreign land. The country is rich farm land and the Pennsylvania German is a notable farmer.

His language is not German, but Pennsylvania German—a dialect that savants say has not been spoken in any part of Germany for nearly a century. In order to conduct his market business it has been necessary for the farmer to learn some English, but it is not unusual to find stay-at-home members of the family who can neither speak nor understand English, although they and their parents and their grandparents were all born in America. The English they do speak is a queer hybrid, of the sort spoken by the tired market woman who remarked that she was "teetotally auge-spelt."

Most of the Pennsylvania Germans belong to the Mennonite, or the Dunker church, although there are other sects among them, including one that holds it sinful to cut the hair or to wear buttons on the clothes. It is well worth a trip through a city market to see elders of the latter sect, long-haired, much-bearded men, with their clothing held in place by large hooks and eyes.

The women all wear dresses with tight-fitting waists and long, gathered skirts. The dresses are usually brown or black—never of any bright color. Their head covering is a little white net cap and a little dark bonnet. The young girl's dress is the frivolous style of the town until they join the church. Then they "turn plain" and don the conventional white cap. From that time forth they are required to keep their heads covered. On very hot days the matron at work in a hot kitchen may shove her cap back on her head, but she never altogether removes it.

Oyster Industry Is Large

GOOD ROADS

MICHIGAN HIGHWAY PROGRAM IS READY

Michigan's highway program, which contemplates the construction of approximately 735 miles of new turnpike at a cost of about $15,000,000, has just been completed and submitted to the administrative board. Of the proposed mileage 525 miles will be pavement and out of this a total of 374 miles will be newly authorized construction and 151 miles will be in completion of work started during 1923. The remainder will include gravel, grading and drainage. In all, the 1924 plan is not only the largest undertaken by the state since the present system of highways was planned, but exceeds the largest previous year's construction by almost 100 per cent.

When the construction program for the present year first assumed definite form the contemplated expenditure represented about $23,000,000 but, as a result of many months of work by Governor Alexander Groesbeck and the state highway commissioner, this was pared to the amount now indicated. Of this the federal government will pay 50 per cent of the construction cost of all roads which have been approved under the federal aid plan and the state and counties will bear the remainder of the expense. On all other roads the state and counties will supply the entire construction capital.

Practically all of the more important and heavily traveled trunk lines will come in for a share of the proposed work and at the completion of this season's activities it is believed that the main arteries both north and south and east and west will have been practically completed. One of the most important stretches of highway to be affected will be the Grand river road from Detroit and Muskegon, which will be practically finished. About forty miles of concrete will be required to fill in the gaps on the stretch between Detroit and Lansing. The stretch lying in Inola county between Lansing and Grand Rapids will probably remain as a gravel road due to the failure of the officials of that county to appropriate the necessary funds to cover the county's share of this construction. Some paving, amounting to $325,000, will be done on the road between Lansing and Jackson, but this road will not be completed due to the insufficiency of money to cover the whole cost.

U. S. in Midst of Record Period in Road Building

If proof were necessary that the United States, which, thanks to the development of the motor vehicle, is now passing through the most intensive period of highway development in the history of the world, is building roads that surpass in quality anything of the kind constructed since the days of the Roman empire, that proof is to be found in abundance.

It exists not only in the quality and quantity of American highways, but in the development of road building methods and materials. The road builders of this country have not only outstripped their ancient predecessors in the use of the most ancient materials, but are getting better results with greater speed, less labor and lower cost.

Advantages to Farmers in Living on Good Road

Living on a good highway with quick transportation the farmer is enabled to enter into the plans for the benefit of his village and of his community, to take part in the town meetings, to have a voice in the affairs of his district, to be helpful to his neighbors, to attend divine services on the Sabbath, to go to lectures, university extension courses and to aid in the organizations of those agencies that are helpful to the community and this assisting with his neighbors aids in the forming of co-operative associations that give him better marketing facilities and better prices for his products.

Good Insulation Improves Results

Un glazed Porcelain Should Not Be Used—Absorbs Much Moisture.

One of the most important things to remember when installing the receiving or transmitting antenna is that it should be insulated as nearly perfect as possible. After looking over the various aerials which have been put up during the last two years the writer, says an expert on radio, has come to the conclusion that radio fans never give insulation a thought. It is true that with the receiving set, high voltages are not employed, but it must be remembered that we are dealing with high frequency currents, which have a great affinity for escaping off to the ground before they actually reach the receiving set. It is therefore logical that as much of this current as possible be protected, so that its full force will pass down the antenna lead-in and reach the set without loss.

The usual form of aerial insulator used is the small unglazed porcelain cleat. While porcelain is considered as one of the best insulators to high voltage and radio currents, the unglazed cleat is a poor insulator and its use should be discouraged. This type of insulator absorbs moisture due to its unglazed surface and gets dirty with soot, forming a good short circuit path to the ground. The proper form of porcelain insulator is one that is about three or four inches long and which is glazed. The surface need not be in ripple form as long as the insulator is glazed over its entire surface. In the better stations the eight or ten-inch type of glazed porcelain insulator is used, one at each end. If the shorter type is employed two of them should be connected in series.

Ample Insulation.

This will afford ample insulation for the aerial of the one-wire type. If the aerial is a one-wire affair, the first drawing shows where the insulators should be placed. The lead-in in this case is taken off one end. The aerial wire may be made continuous so as to include the lead-in. A soldered joint will be satisfactory, but a wrapped joint should not be used for any length of time.

In B is shown the two-wire aerial with a spreader at each end. In this case the insulators are not put in parallel on the spreader, as is most always practiced. Parallel insulators on a spreader reduce the resistance and create a double path for leaks. It is better to use a long insulator at the spreader rope, or two insulators in series at this point will be more satisfactory. The aerial wires are fastened to the spreader by means of eye bolts screwed into the wood.

Another form of aerial. The end is generally spaced for a distance of ten to twenty feet and is attached to the side of a house. The spreader end comes together to a point. The lead wire may be taken from this end. One or two insulators may be placed at the point or lead-in end.

The single wire aerial shown in D, with a center tap, is often put up. If the aerial is exceptionally long it is better to take the lead from the center. In this case the insulators are placed at both ends of the aerial. Such an antenna is said to pick up stations equally well in all directions. The long one-wire aerial has slight directional effects.

Simple Switch Knob Is Made of Ordinary Spool

Those ardent radio fans who take pride in making as much of their own apparatus as possible can make a very neat looking, serviceable switch knob to go with the home-made aerial.

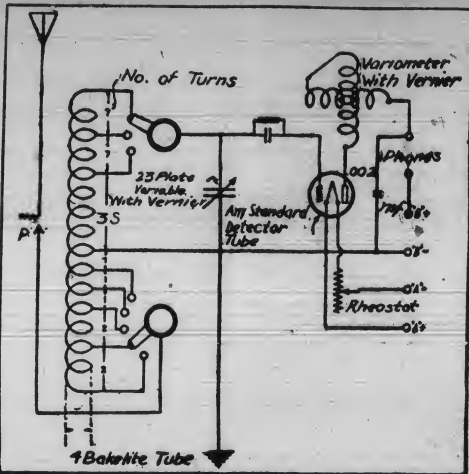

The top of an ordinary spool is cut off at the place where it ceases to taper and is sandpapered until it is clean and smooth. It is then given two or three coats of black enamel to improve its appearance. This makes the knob.

A long-threaded bolt of sufficient thickness to fit snugly into the hole in the knob is then pushed through the knob. The top of the hole is then countersunk so that the head of the bolt lies flush with the top of the knob. The contact arm is cut from a strip of brass or copper. A hole is made in one end and the arm is then tightened to the knob by means of a nut.

On the other side of the panel the usual arrangement of washers, tension springs, nuts and wire connection is followed.

RADIO

(Edited by O. Douglas Wardrop, Editor of Radio Merchandising)

The Hookup of the Modified Circuit is Easily Followed.

By ROBERT HERTZBERG

As can be seen from the illustrations, the outfit is an unusually simple one. The circuit was designed by Messrs. Haviland Halsted and Donald B. Stevens of New Rochelle and its efficiency can be judged from the fact that station 2LO in London was heard on one WD12 tube during the recent transatlantic tests.

The parts required are few in number. A 25-plate vernier variable condenser is used for the tuning, and an ordinary variometer supplies the regeneration. The shaft of the latter instrument is equipped with a geared vernier dial, which greatly facilitates the adjustment. A standard tube socket and a six-ohm rheostat (for the WD12) are mounted on the right-hand end of the panel, which is of high-quality composition, 18 inches long and 7 inches wide.

The variable condenser is mounted inside the special tuning coil, thus saving much space and making the connecting wires very short. The inductance coil is the feature of this receiver, but there is nothing particularly difficult about its winding. The diagram gives all the constants. A standard 4-inch cardboard or bakelite tube 8 inches long is wound with 56 turns of No. 24 double cotton covered wire. The end nearest the panel is the lower end in the diagram. The lower switch shown in the latter is the upper switch on the panel.

Beginning at the end of the coil nearest the panel, a tap is taken after two turns, another tap after another two turns, and then two more taps and one turn apart. These four taps and the end of the coil go to the aerial switch points. Skipping one turn from the last tap, connection is made to the ground, the plus of the "A" battery, and to the rotary plates of the variable tuning condenser. This winding is the "primary" and is untuned, as in all Rehnartz hookups.

Winding is Continued.

The winding is now continued without interruption for thirty-five turns, and a tap taken at the thirty-fifth wire. Fourteen more turns complete the coil, and two more taps made, one at the forty-second, the other from the end of the wire. This winding is the secondary, which is tuned in the usual manner by the variable condenser. The switch and its three contact points are beneath the primary switch on the panel, between the variable condenser and the variometer. The aforementioned potentiometer is fastened to the panel to the left of the condenser-coil assembly. Only two of its three binding posts have wires connected to them. The arm and either end of the winding are used, and it makes no difference which goes to the "A" battery.

As can be seen from the hookup, the connections to be made are few and simple. The grid condenser is a standard one, of .00025 mfd. capacity, with a grid leak of two megohms for the WD12. The battery and phone binding posts are all placed along the right hand edge of the panel so as to make the addition of an amplifier easy. From bottom to top the posts read: "A" minus, "A" plus, "B" minus, "B" plus, and the top two phone phones.

In operation, this set exhibits exactly the same characteristics as any variometer regenerative tuner. In turning up the variometer, a soft "ush" should be heard for about five seconds of dial movement, and then a "click" when the tube falls into oscillation. The set is in the most sensitive condition just before this click is heard, and it will be found that the vernier dial is of great value in working up to this point.

Tuning is Very Sharp.

The tuning of the secondary variable condenser is very sharp, and no trouble is experienced in separating the powerful local broadcasters. In hunting around for a station, the single-plate vernier condenser plate should be half-in. Then, after making as close an adjustment as possible with the main knob, the small vernier knob can be slowly turned either way.

To listen to the stations on the lower wave lengths, the secondary switch is turned down so that the fewest number of turns are in the circuit. The wave length range will increase as the switch is turned up. The setting of the primary switch will not be found to be critical. In most installations the switch arm can be left in one position for all stations.

It is very important that the rotary plates of the variable condenser be connected to the filament and the ground. This will do away with all hand capacity effects when turning the knob. If a WD12 tube is used, the "A" battery need only be a pair of ordinary dry cells connected in parallel, and the "B" a single 22½-volt block. If a UV199 or C299 is preferred, three dry cells are connected in series, and a 30-ohm rheostat used. The "B" battery remains of the same value.

As mentioned, the use of the potentiometer in series with the aerial wire prevents the set from radiating, or, at any event, it at least acts as enough of a choke to make any oscillations that do get by too weak to cause any harm. In addition, it aids quite noticeably in clearing the tone of many signals.—New York Sun and Globe.

A Battery Fuse

The practice of fusing the lighting circuit of a radio set is not recommended, because of the lagging time interval that takes place during the blowing of the fuse. In other words, it is not quick enough to save the filament. At present there is only one way in which the filament can be protected by allowing any heavy current to be potential to come in contact with the filament leads. In other words, be careful.

SHORT CIRCUITS

A burned-out vacuum tube makes an excellent grid condenser. All you need do is remove your present grid condenser and connect the grid terminal on the base of the tube to one end of the wire that was formerly connected to the condenser. Then connect a wire to the grid of the detector. Lead it to the plate terminal on the blown-out tube. Connect the grid leak from the grid to the filament minus or plus (trial is the test), and you'll be surprised at the difference in reception.

If your "B" batteries are run down and you are not in the position to purchase new ones for a few days, then place them in a warm oven for a few hours. You will find that they will greatly increase in voltage. Say that a "B" battery registered 80 volts, then after baking it will go to about 90 volts or perhaps more. This scheme is not recommended unless in an emergency, as it is a rather dirty job and is usually not worth the trouble.

If you have a potentiometer in your set you will find that the set will work a little better if you connect a .002 mfd. condenser from the movable arm of the potentiometer to one of the ends.

There is no need of soldering every connection in a radio set. In fact, it is better not to solder some terminals. For instance, it is absolutely unnecessary to solder wires to vacuum tube sockets. Place the wire under the screw, after looping it around, and tighten the screw with pliers. This will give you with transformers, some finding points, and, in fact, any connection that can be made really secure without solder.

STEPHENS' ROOM

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

THERE was a note from Stephens in the morning mail asking me to come to his room for a few minutes; he was ill, and he wanted to see me. I was not intimately acquainted with Stephens. He had worked in my office for a year or so, I had known that he lived in a rather remote place, that he went out little, that he got no help from home, but I had given him little serious consideration. He was always immaculately clean, his clothes were carefully kept, though he never had anything new. He had never seemed to me particularly remarkable or especially interesting.

I got a new idea of him when I entered his room. He was seated by a table a little pale from his illness, and he rose as I came in.

I'm ashamed to have taken so much of your time," he said, "but I've always wanted you to see my room." It was a cheap little room in the commonest house; it was heated by a soft coal stove, and lighted by a kerosene lamp; it was in every way old-fashioned and unmodern, but it had distinction and it told me more in a moment of Stephens' tastes and character than I had previously learned during all the months that I had known him.

Everywhere there was order and everything from the books on the table and the cheap printer's walls to the woven coverlet on the bed—it was one his mother had made as a girl Stephens told me—and the braided rug on the floor, there was refinement and simple good taste. I had not thought before that a room could reveal so much of a man.

He paid but four dollars a month for this room and he had no money to waste on decorations, but he had put himself into it, he had gloried in it, he had surrounded himself with the most beautiful things he had or could afford and these things gave him pleasure, they added to his self-respect, and they gave pleasure and satisfaction to all who came to visit him.

As I sat looking around at the simple, cheap, but satisfying appointments of Stephens' room, my mind reverted instinctively to Mrs. Clayton. She is an interesting woman who dresses elegantly and almost tastefully and who lives in a pretentious house. When one talks to her she reveals the external signs of education and cultivation. She has traveled, she talks easily, she goes with the best people in town. It is only when one enters her house that one sees how vulgar and commonplace her tastes are. Everywhere the taste is shrieked in one's ear from the ornate ugly furniture to the silly tawdry pictures on the wall; from the expensive glaring rugs on the floor to the clutter of blazer, tie-a-brac huddled together on every available table and mantel-piece. Everything in the little room in which Stephens lived cost less than one-half as much as the smallest of Mrs. Clayton's ugly rugs; he had no money, but he had taste.

Perhaps we should hesitate, many of us, to have our characters read or our tastes determined by a look into our closets or our bureau drawers, or a visit to the homes or the rooms in which we live, but all of these things like Stephens' room tell a vivid gripping tale of our ideals, our tastes, and our real characters.

UNLESS SOME CHANGE takes place in President Coolidge's present plans he will do little or no campaigning about from Washington. Some Republican leaders have urged him to take the stump for a long and strenuous speaking campaign through the Middle West, in view of the tours to be made by LaFollette and Davis, but the President does not want to go, believing that just as much can be accomplished via the radio. Then, too, he is sorrowing deeply because of the death of his youngest son, and feels that during the next few months, or at least until autumn his life should be as quiet and private as it is possible to make it.

MRS. ROBERT M. LAFOLETTE who went to the same law school that her husband attended and who has fought by his side in all the political battles in which he has engaged, will have charge of organizing the women in this campaign for the Presidency. She is a politician of great experience and ability and expects to be able to line up many thousands of feminine votes which might otherwise go to the Republican or Democratic candidates.

DEMOCRATIC LEADERS are admittedly wiser over the sudden and spectacular bolting of the party by Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, the famous investigator of the Department of Justice under Daugherty. Immediately after the New York convention it had appeared that the Democrats were going to get together and that harmony would prevail throughout the party. Wheeler is a genuine dyed-in-the wool progressive, however, who felt that his place was with LaFollette rather than with the old guard of the Democrats. The only other outstanding Democrat in Washington who is likely to follow Wheeler into LaFollette's camp is Senator Dill of Washington, but it is pointed out by the supporters of Senator LaFollette that if leaders like Wheeler and Dill are ready and willing to publicly bolt, there must be plenty other voters in the country with similar feelings.

PRACTICALLY ALL the political experts in the capital these days can't see anything else this winter except a President selected by Congress rather than by the Electoral College. Of course, the general campaign is in full swing, but most of the experts point to a deadlock in the election that will have to be broken by the House of Representatives, as provided by the Constitution. Even the House may not be able to do the job, which will put it up to the Senate to make the final decision. It will then be that LaFollette will try to get his running-mate in the White House as the Senate would make its selection from the vice-presidential candidates.

NOTIFICATION CEREMONIES for both Coolidge and Davis will mark the first big fireworks of the campaign. The President is holding daily conferences with members of his Cabinet, party leaders to work out the general plan of the speech in which he will formally accept the Republican nomination. In many respects the speech will parallel the G. O. P. platform, but it will go into considerable detail in setting before the country the personal platform upon which his campaign is based. The Maine woods writing of the speech which he will deliver in accepting the Democratic nomination at his home in Carkesburg. It is upon this speech that progressive Democrats of the type of Bryan are counting in their demand that the Democratic candidate make it plain that there is nothing reactionary about his views and that he is a progressive from the ground up.

JOHN WILLIAM DAVIS, Democratic nominee for the Presidency received hundreds of congratulatory telegrams soon after his nomination.

Two of the telegrams are worth reproduction. One from a man in comparable manner his kind, who was born a wit, made a politician, and elected to Vice President:

IF GOOD WISHES HELP, YOU HAVE MIND.

Thomas R. Marshall.

The other was from a woman, from whom such words were significant: Heartiest congratulations to you and the party. I feel that in your hands the things that Mr. Wilson fought for will have a worthy champion. Congratulations to Mrs. Davis. Mrs. Woodrow Wilson.

A LITTLE COURSE IN SPELLING.

While our summer school is in full blast we sincerely hope that part of the time that that worthy institution will be taken up in impressing upon that body of folk the terrible need of a little course in spelling and we might add in penmanship too. Since teaching these two important subjects in our common schools have gone out of style and studying at home is a thing of the past, running a paper and correcting the spelling in the copy turned into the office of the print shop is some job.

Just how a grown up man or woman can go thru life without learning to spell and write with a little ease is more than we can tell, in fact we believe it is due to cursed "oneryness" on the part of the individual and of inefficiency of the instructors of the present age.

For poor spelling and penmanship is no excuse. An hour each day with a pocket dictionary, a good pen and a few sheets of foolscap paper will in a few years improve the situation.

Any teacher who fails to push either of these subjects in school does not deserve the name and should not be re-employed.

BOBBED HAIR AND WIGS.

How can women shear their hair, burn it, electrocute it, bleach it and dye it, and still retain it as their crowning glory, beautiful, abundant and wonderful? In a day of well-nigh universal bobbing, mere man observes glorious coiffures in the avenue, in the park, at the theatre, everywhere, and he is puzzled. Yet there is a need for him to exhaust his mind over the puzzle, for the answer is simply: Wigs.

Women's wig fills history. But to the grande dame of the past the wig was no more a thing to be hushed up than the vanity box of today. As far back as the time of Rameau II women were not content with the crowning glory nature supplied. One of America's leading wig-makers tells of examining a wig taken from the sarcophagus of an Egyptian mummy. Roman ladies of the empire wore wigs, and the golden hair of German barbarians was imported wholesale to meet the demand. Even early Christians in spite of the denunciation of the Fathers of the Church, sometimes yielded to temptation, as the Auburn wig found in the grave of a Christian woman at St. Cyril's bears witness. In olden days wigs were fashionable as wigs. Today beautiful hair is the mode, and wigs are merely a substitute for hair destroyed by being bobbed, burned and bleached.

The wig business is booming. Wig makers assert that nearly one-half the dainty, lovely ladies with flowing tresses are wig wearers, and it is intimated that many of the manufacturers are in collusion with the barbers. The hair cut from a bobbed head is sold to the wig-maker and some other woman is ornamenting her silk gown with human hair perhaps from the head of her dearest friend.

SMITH-JONES.

Julius Smith, 17, and Miss Jessie Jones, 17, were quietly married at Covington, last Thursday evening by Rev. H. H. Webb of the First Christian church.

Miss Jones is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Jones, of Erlanger. Mr. Smith is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James G. Smith, of the Bellevue and Burlington pike.

The newlyweds will reside with the groom's parents for a while.

The bride and groom were accompanied by their intimate friends and school chums, Mr. and Mrs. Wilford Rouse, of this community. Mrs. R. and the bride and groom were members of the graduating class of Boone High School this year, while Mr. R. graduated last year.

CARD OF THANKS

We desire to express our deepest appreciation and sincere thanks to our friends for their many kindnesses as shown us during the illness and death of our little baby Earl Junior Mudman, who died June 7th, 1924. We are profoundly grateful to Mr. C. Scott Chambers and Rev. R. F. DeMoisey for their kind service at this time.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Mudman.

MOONSHINE STILL

Of Ten Gallon Capacity Found In The Hills of Gunpowder Creek.

Deputy Sheriffs Utz, Snyder and Percival found a large still on the farm owned by George Maddin on Gunpowder last Thursday. The still was warm when they first found it and it was not disturbed for some hours afterwards. Near the still was about five hundred gallons of mash ready to be distilled. The officers also found and destroyed four hundred pounds of corn sugar, as well as twenty-four pounds of yeast. A short distance from the still, covered with grass, two five gallon jugs were found which contained moonshine. The outfit was complete with a pressure cooking outfit, tank and burner. Mr. Maddin stated that he knew nothing of the still being on his farm and had not seen it until after the officers had located it. A party who had resided in Cincinnati, but had lived in a tenant house on the Maddin farm was supposed to be operating the still and he had left a short time before the officers arrived and had not returned. About ten gallons of moonshine could be made every day with the still which is now in the court house. In making this raid the officers were out all night and until noon the next day.

Acting upon reliable information received, Deputy Utz made the affidavit upon which the warrant was issued. It is unfortunate that after this time and effort had been expended the operator was not brought to light, however with the information gathered he may yet be ascertained.

NO AGE LIMIT FIXED.

How old must a woman be to be an old maid?

There are no national or state laws relating to this question as there are to the ages when she may marry, or vote.

Nor has society passed on it authoritatively, although it has been before the people since shortly after Adam's time. Moses made it the study of men to annex to one woman as many as they could support, so that a man might have an unlimited number of wives, and no woman need be without a husband.

But the women of today won't submit to the Mosian plan, nor will legislators permit it.

Some sociologists of scientific turn have gallantly stepped to the front with light, or what he calls light, on this rather dark subject.

Some women are younger at 40, in appearance and manner, than others are at 30. In this connection it is proper to consider the most suitable age for a woman to marry. This depends upon circumstances, for the reasons above given.

A generation ago, when 25 was not far from the average marrying age, a woman may have been considered verging on old maidhood at 30. Nowadays, however, the tendency is to marry late rather than early in life, and the sensible woman who at 35 finds herself still unpaired by no means despairs of being led to the altar.

The practical man looks for a matured, steady and practical mind, usually found in the woman of 35 and 40, and forgets her age.

Where women make the greatest mistake, however, is in trying to appear younger than they generally are, thus placing themselves in a false position and utterly marrying whatever other charms they may possess.

While every woman should be as young as she possibly can, it can hardly be called wisdom for her to hide facts by painting out certain lines and painting in others for, no matter how clever the brush marks are likely to show more clearly than the marks of time.

The county road force did some much needed repair work on the streets through Burlington, last week.

PARENT-TEACHERS

ASSOCIATION WILL HOLD MEETING AT THE HOME OF MRS. W. L. CROPPER.

Next Tuesday evening August 5th, the local organization of the Parent-Teachers Association will hold a meeting at the home of Mrs. W. L. Cropper for the purpose of perfecting its plan of action for the coming school term.

The Parent-Teachers Association is a national organization and is destined to be one of the greatest forces for betterment of schools in the nation.

There are three locals in this county already at work, one at Verona one at Walton and one at Burlington. Their aim is to assist the teachers and school board in the performance of their duties.

They have done a great work at Walton and Verona and intend to do as much, if not more, at Burlington.

They must however enlist the aid of more parents in the community if they carry out their present plans, which include the repairing of the High School campus and the interior of the building. It goes without saying that each parent in this or any other community is vitally interested in school work and desires to see it improved in every way, but it has been conclusively proven in every public actively now gawogogalokz must be had before any great amount of good can be accomplished, therefore, ye varent align yourself with this movement, attend this meeting and assist the second greatest institution in the community to become one of which you will be proud.

It is but a question of time until there will be a local in each community in the county.

ANSWERS FINAL SUMMONS

MRS. JANE BEEMON A SPLENDID OLD CITIZEN CALLED BY DEATH

Mrs. Jane Beemon, 83, widow of Albert Beemon, died at her home in the Hopeful neighborhood, about 4:30 o'clock last Saturday, July 26, 1924. The deceased was stricken with paralysis several months ago, from which she never recovered. She was a patient sufferer and every attention was given to her by her children and relatives, but to no avail, the fatal stroke came, she peacefully closed her eyes in death.

Jane Beemon was Jane Barlow before her marriage to Albert Beemon, and she was born in this county October 1st, 1841, in the neighborhood where she has lived all her life. She was a loving wife, a good mother and neighbor and splendid woman, being held in the highest esteem by all who knew her.

She is survived by nine children, five daughters, Mrs. Owen Ayler, Mrs. Owen Ross, Mrs. W. L. Kirkpatrick, Misses Eta and Laura Beemon, and four sons, Joshua, Clinton, Martin and James, and two brothers, J. M. and W. H. Barlow, all of this county.

Funeral services were held at Hopeful Lutheran church, of which she was a member, at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon, July 28th, conducted by the pastor Rev. Geo. A. Royer, who spoke beautifully of her patient suffering through her long illness. Interment was in Hopeful cemetery. Undertaker Philip Talinferro, of Erlanger, had charge of the funeral arrangements.

EYE INJURED

Stanley Clore, of the Waterloo neighborhood, had the misfortune to injure his right eye very seriously last Monday morning. He was pulling a fence a pole with a file, when he struck the file with a hammer, chipping off a piece of steel, which stuck in his eye. He came at once to Dr. Yelton, who succeeded in removing the fragment of steel, which, fortunately, will not impair the vision.

FATAL SHOT

IS FIRED BY FRIEND, VICTIM FORMERLY RESIDED IN THIS COUNTY.

A charge of murder was filed by Covington, Ky., police against Hammond Smith, 40 years old 615 Washington street, Covington, following the death of James Slayback, 55 years old, 511 Montgomery avenue, Covington.

Slayback was shot through the abdomen following an argument on Montgomery street near his home. He died within three hours at St. Elizabeth's hospital.

Before his death he told Covington police that he and Smith had been close personal friends for several years and that Smith had fired at him without provocation. Smith had no statement to make.

The shooting occurred at 6 o'clock Saturday night. Slayback died at 8:45 o'clock.

James Griffith, Covington fireman, and a son of Fire Chief Edward A. Griffith, disarmed Smith following the shooting. He told police that Smith was trying to fire a second shot at Slayback when he reached the scene. Griffith disarmed Smith and turned him over to the police.

James Slayback was a son of Abraham and Mary Slayback and he resided in this neighborhood until he moved to Covington about ten years ago. He is survived by his widow and children and several brothers.

UNION BAPTIST CHURCH

LOSES A SPLENDID PASTOR (AND BOONE COUNTY A VALUED CITIZEN IN REV. GARBER.

Sunday, July the 20th, will ever be kept vivid in the memory of the members of the Union Baptist church for that day marked the separation of that good and noble, whose life of love and fellowship were so closely knitted together, that the parting brought grief of grief to each and the host of friends who gathered to do him honor on that day.

Only the call of duty toward the further preparation of his ministerial duties could in a measure soothe the aching hearts, for Rev. Garber has served the church faithfully and ably for three years and seven months during the early part of his pastorate he organized a "Men's Bible Class" which has been a power for good in the community and the church. In a recent meeting of two weeks in which he did part of the service by Rev. A. S. Cutts, of Erlanger, he had the joyful satisfaction of seeing several of the young men whom he had taught in the class surrender their hearts and lives to God, seventeen following him in baptism, five by letter, in all twenty-two.

We pray God's blessings upon them in a life of happiness and usefulness in His vineyard.

Thus thru these various activities of usefulness, splendid preaching, untiring efforts and kindness to all with whom he was associated, he and his excellent wife have very greatly endeared themselves to this people and community.

Unfortunate Accident

Limb Broken for Second Time This Summer.

Thomas Virgil Hensley, little four-year-old son of Thomas Hensley, Sr., met with a singularly unfortunate accident last Saturday, about 12:30 o'clock when a grind-stone fell on his leg snapping the bone just above the ankle. Dr. Yelton was called and succeeded in setting the limb satisfactorily.

This is the second time in the last three months that "Buster" as he is called by everyone, has suffered a broken bone. About ten weeks ago a cow stepped on the same leg, breaking it about an inch below the present break. The little fellow had just gotten so that he could handle his limb properly and now he must go through the same ordeal again, which would be hard for an even older person to bear.

CAMP FIRE GIRLS ENJOY A NICE TRIP.

The organization of Campfire Girls, chartered by Mrs. O. S. Eddins and Miss Virginia Clore, made a trip to Cincinnati last Friday.

While the trip was supposed to be educational, it was at the same time highly enjoyable, as all the girls will testify. They visited the Art Museum and the Rockwood Pottery.

Those making the excursion were Misses Mary Louise Renaker, Alta Rouse, Sarah Cropper, Virginia Yelton, Hazel Marie Clore, Helen Walton, Mary Katherine Arlen, Lucille Rice, Zelma Rue, Katherine Clore, Zelma Lee Stephens.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

THE TRAGEDIES OF NATURE.

Such a calamity as the recent tornado that tore its way across Northern Ohio with such fearful destructiveness may induce a bitter feeling in the minds of some. It may seem that such an event proves to be hours of cruelty of nature.

Yet are the forces of nature wholly responsible for such tragedies? Some of these disasters are created by disturbances of the order of nature for which men are responsible. When men cut down the forests so ruthlessly, they must create a condition where violent wind storms are more likely to arise and sweep across the country.

When men gather in cities, they create conditions under which severe wind storms are likely to be especially disastrous. If men built their homes more strongly and thoroughly, the danger from destructive winds of modern living are artificial, and of modern living are artificial, and create an exposure to calamities that could not exist to any such extent in a state of nature.

Mr. and Mrs. Liston Hempling entertained at dinner Sunday July 20th, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bentham of Baltimore, Md. The guests present were Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bentham, Rev. and Mrs. Geo. A. Royer and daughter Mabel, Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Hempling and son Charles, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Wenzel, of Price Hill; Mr. and Mrs. Bert Wagner of Ft. Thomas, Misses Elizabeth MacLasson, Lucille Sullivan, of Hyde Park; and Misses Elsie and Annie Gruenger of Avondale.

We are in receipt of a card from Hon. D. B. Wallace, President of the Equitable Bank and Trust Company, of Walton. The card was mailed from Yellow Stone National Park July 22. Mr. Wallace says: "We are having a nice trip, but it is cold. Ice formed here yesterday morning. I would not give Boone county for the whole Yellow Stone Park."

Hon. Ellsworth Regenstein was a Boone county visitor last Friday. He was here in the interest of the Inter-Southern Life Insurance Company, of which he is State Manager, with office in the Dixie Terminal Building in Cincinnati. Mr. Regenstein was formerly State Superintendent of Public Instruction and is well known in this county.

Miss Lutie Ryle, who taught school last term at Locust Grove, returned Friday from the Christ hospital, Cincinnati, where she recently underwent an operation. She is rapidly recovering from its effects and will be able to resume her calling in the fall.

Geo. Espenschied, who recently underwent an operation for stomach trouble at a Cincinnati hospital, and who was doing nicely for a while, has suffered an attack of pneumonia and the hopes entertained for his recovery are very grave.

Two new culverts were put across the street in Burlington, last week, one at the west corner of Locust and First and one at the corner of First and Second streets. The Fiscal Court also ordered one put across the entrance to the back part of the Court House.

A number of contractors were in Burlington last week looking over the proposal of the Boone County Deposit Bank, relative to the moving of the present building and erection of a new one on the present site. The contract will be let August 1st.

Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Huey, Mrs. W. L. Riddell, Mrs. Karl Rouse, Misses Esselle Huey and Mattie Kreylich will leave next Sunday for a month's trip through the Canadian Rockies and to California.

A. B. Renaker visited his aged mother in Grant county for a few days last week. Mrs. Renaker is very ill and at this writing is not expected to live.

The Sheriff has had notices printed notifying the taxpayers of Boone county of the time and places he will meet them to collect their 1924 taxes.

Miss Rachel Porter, who is studying nursing at the Deaconess hospital, Cincinnati, is spending her vacation with her aunt, Mrs. W. L. Riddell and other relatives.

We received a postal card from Everett Walton directing the Recorder sent to the following address: "1125 N. Grand Ave., St. Louis, Mo."

Next Monday is county court and the following Monday the August term of the Boone Circuit Court will convene.

Gov. Garber left last night for Washington, Va., where he will spend a short vacation before entering college this fall.

Born to Mrs. Mary Utz Eklager of near Burlington, on Monday, July 28th, a fine boy.

The following letter was received one day last week, from J. A. Williams, editor of the DeWitt Herald, published at DeWitt, Mo:

"My father was Anderson Donathan Williams and formerly lived in Boone county. He was born in Mason county, Ky., in 1826, but lived in Boone county several years. He came to Missouri a few years before the Civil War and while he was yet a young man.

My grandmother Williams came to this county with her two other sons at the same time my father did. My father's brothers were Volney and Benjamin.

Volney Williams was married when he left Kentucky. Benjamin and my father married women reared in this county. Volney Williams married Sophia Merrick, and their first child, a daughter, Evaline, was born in Kentucky.

Sophia Merrick had brothers named Price and John L. Merrick. She had other brothers who came to Missouri and lived in this region, but I do not know their names. She also had a sister who married a man named Neal, but I did not know her first name.

My father must have left relatives either in Boone county or Mason co., but so far I know, he did not communicate with them for several years before his death.

My father died in 1893. His brothers, Volney and Benjamin died several years before that time."

"THE MADDING CROWD"

A popular novelist once wrote a story called "Far from the Madding Crowd." Many people still feel that way. When their vacation comes, they tie themselves to remote forests and secluded haunts, and are thankful to get away from human contacts.

The majority of Americans enjoy getting out on automobile roads crowded with speeders. They throng into populous summer resorts, and are perfectly happy in watching the stream of faces that go by, and observing the fun and frolic of the crowd.

Let each type of individual find its own type of enjoyment. The people who enjoy solitude have resources of personality by which they are independent of the world. A few choice friends and a good book is all they ask for happiness.

The crowd lovers, on the other hand, have a friendly personality that is not fretted by people. They may not go so deep into philosophy as the solitude seekers, but they may be better able to take life as it comes.

WHAT THE COUNTRY DISTRICTS NEED

We are living in a world of large organization. Most human activities move in large masses. We have great combinations of labor and great combinations of capital. These vast forces control the field of industry with dominating power.

The farmer until a recent date has been an individualist, who was reluctant to join in this tendency toward concentration. He feared to merge his own individual chances with any mass movement of farmers. He was afraid that somehow he would fail to get his rights, and he preferred to play a lone hand.

The failure of farmers to organize and secure the advantages of mass action that both capital and labor have obtained, is perhaps the most important single cause of whatever depression may exist in agricultural industry.

Even if a farmer is thoroughly educated for his specialty, so that he is raising his crops according to good scientific methods, he may still fail of satisfactory results, if the entire market for his products is depressed as the result of the lack of organization.

The time has gone by when farmers can safely devote themselves wholly to the problem of raising stuff on their own land. Some portion of their time must be spent on the problem of marketing stuff after it is raised. If a satisfactory individual market is not in sight, then the necessity arises for the farmers to get together, and gain the advantages that come from union and combination.

Organizing systems of efficient marketing are a problem in executive management in which farmers often need the help of the business men. It will pay the business men of Boone county to do all they possibly can to help the farmers of this county secure the advantages of the modern idea of combination.

FARM FACTS

Cooperative marketing associations are business enterprises formed to render marketing services for their members.

Remember that quality and uniformity are valuable aids in selling products.

Now is the time to make the necessary repairs on tobacco barns.

Don't forget that cows need feed during the summer time in order to go into winter in good condition.

The farm that has the fence rows clean is usually owned by a good farmer.

Kentucky lambs are going to market infested with stomach worms. They can be treated for 1 cent a head for material.

Don't forget that farm organizations cannot be successful without the farmers.

"HEIRS APPARENT"

In a clever novel by the above title, the noted English journalist Philip Gibbs discusses the young people of today. His pictures would prove true to some extent of the young crowd of Kentucky.

He pictures English young people as being impatient of authority, extremely self assertive, disposed to rough at the fears and principles of their parents, and inclined to disregard the moral conventions of society.

For instance, one young couple started off to walk a long distance when their automobile broke down. They put up at a hotel over night, and occupied adjoining rooms. They were represented as clean and moral young folks, and they could not see why their conduct, which violated the customs of society, should have created the scandal that it did.

In so far as American young folks are following after such ideas, it can be remarked that each generation has set aside the traditions of its predecessors to some extent. But the customs of society on the whole are good and are adopted to restrain people from wrongdoing. Where great freedom prevails between the sexes, and they do not follow the customs of conventional morality, the chances of sexual irregularity are increased. There are more broken homes, and more young people make a false start in life.

While the old timers no doubt are too conservative in some respects, yet this story represents young people as being very selfish in their insistence on having their own ideas and disregarding the judgment of their parents. The young folks of Boone county do not go to extremes in these matters. Yet there are many families even here whose young people are much disposed to have their own way, with too little regard to the principles and the wisdom of the parents to whom they owe so much.

ANOTHER SECTIONAL LINE FADING

It was a notable event in church and American history when the general conference of the Southern M. E. church at Chattanooga, Tenn., accepted the proposal for an organic union with the Methodist church North by an overwhelming vote, which seems to make it likely that this proposition will finally be agreed to by both these religious bodies.

It has seemed singular, after the states of the union have been living together in peace and concord for almost 60 years, that the members of this great religious organization should feel it necessary to live apart. The time has come when such sectional lines ought all to be wiped out, and the forces that make for righteousness and peace should be lined up all over the country against those that tend toward disorder and evil.

BASE BALL.

Bellevue chalked up their third straight shut out, and Joe Brady, their stellar pitcher, his second straight, when they defeated Hebron last Saturday by a score of 3 to 0. Joe Bullock of Hebron was also in great form, but his team-mates could not give him any assistance in an offensive way. Errors, however, contributed to the score against him. The fans of Boone county will soon hail Joe Brady as the premier pitcher, if, in fact, he is not already the best.

Hits off Brady 2; off Bullock 8. Two base hits—Black, R. Brady Struck out by Brady 7. By Bullock 7. Hit by Brady (C. Goodridge). Petersburg and Burlington played two uninteresting games from a local standpoint last Saturday on the High School campus. The first game was not so bad as far as the score was concerned, but nevertheless the game was listless. A home run by Ray Conner with two on base accounted for Burlington's three runs. Wilson and McCarty each pitched a nice game, while Walton at second base for Burlington contributed the fielding feature, although he had to retire from the second game after having received a badly spiked hand. Final score 7-3.

Struck out by McCarty 3; Wilson 7. Bases on balls off Wilson 1. Hits off Wilson 11; off McCarty 7. Two base hits—McCarty, McCarty. Three outs—Cox, H. Conner, White, McCarty. Home Run—Ray Conner.

The second game started as tho it might be a very nice game, until Petersburg broke loose in the sixth and scored 11 runs before a man could be retired. John Snelling started in the box for Burlington but had to retire under this bombardment, being succeeded by Shinkle who fared little better. Ray Conner finally went to the mound and succeeded in retiring the side. Hitzfeld's all-round playing was the feature of this one, while White and McCarty of Petersburg garnered six hits each in the two games. Bryan Snelling was behind the bat for the first time for Burlington. Final score 22-7. Struck out by Matthews 1; White 4. J. Snelling 6; Petersburg 4. Two base hits—White, Thos. Bonta, B. Shinkle, McCarty, Home Runs—Nixon, White, Klopp, R. Matthews.

The Burlington club still maintains an unusual record, but Manager I. C. Weaver is still hoping that some kind hearted manager will let him have one before the season is over.

W. M. S. NOTES

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Bellevue Baptist church met on Thursday July 24th at the church. In the morning a devotional program was rendered and at the noon hour the lunch was served picnic style. In the afternoon came the study and business program. There are now forty-one members of this society.

There will be an all day meeting here at Bellevue on Thursday August 14th, which is the day the Quarterly meeting of the Association W. M. U. On that day the ladies from each and every Baptist church in North Bend Association are invited to come and enjoy the day with us. Come, and if your church fosters no Missionary Society at present you will see what a glorious work you are missing.

Please remember that the Bellevue W. M. S. will furnish lunch. Also remember that Mrs. L. L. Roberts, our State W. M. U. President will be with us. This is quite an honor. So you come, too.

MRS. E. W. RICE

Publicity Chairman Bellevue W. M. S.

All left at a late hour wishing Mr. Brown many more happy birthdays to come.

Farmers to Visit Orchards

The Boone County Orchard Tour will be an event of next Wednesday, August 6th which will be of great interest to the Fruit Growers of this county. The tour will start from Hubert Conner's at 9 a. m., thence to Frank Rouse's orchard at Burlington at 10:30 a. m., and to J. W. Goodridge's orchard at 11:30 a. m., and if time will allow other orchards will be visited.

The tour will be conducted by the local Orchard Club cooperating with our County Agent and W. W. Magill, Extension Horticulturist from the College of Agriculture, Lexington.

Each orchard visited will be studied from the standpoint of orchard practices and their effect upon the production of fruit. Orchardling is fast becoming one of the most profitable side line on a great many farms in this section. In order that a profit to the orchard owner, it is necessary to make a very thorough study of insect control, fruit diseases and fertilization of the orchard. In the orchard tour some results will be seen at each orchard visited, something that will be a help to you in your own orchard whether it be large or only a few trees.

Mr. Magill has had a wide experience with fruit all over the state of Kentucky and will have many new and interesting things to tell us. Come and bring a basket lunch to be served picnic style. Signs placed at Florence, Burlington, and Hebron will direct you to Mr. Conner's orchard.

The Maysville Boys Band known as the Kentucky Cardinal Band have been engaged to play at the Dearborn County Fair to be held at Lawrenceburg, Ind., August 13 to 16. The fair will be held day and night. Auto Polo is one of the great free attractions. For catalogue write the Secretary E. E. Elder, Lawrenceburg, Ind.

Boone county must still be up among the select society in dairy cattle, as W. D. Sutton, formerly farm agent of this county, and now occupying the same position in Hopkins county, had two fine male calves shipped to him from W. G. Kite last week. Mr. Kite has some of the finest Jersey blood in the State.

The Sheriff has been delivering this week the ballot boxes for the primary election to be held next Saturday.

Some wind instruments are hard to blow, but few people ever seem to have any trouble blowing their own horns.

Once upon a time there was a boy under the legal age limit who didn't drive his father's automobile.

Mrs. Newton Sullivan, Jr., returned home last Saturday after a week's visit with relatives in Indiana.

The price of corn is still going up, so it will pay to give the crop another plowing and save the hay.

K. M. Aylor, of Huntington, West Va., sends us a $1.50 for more news from his old Kentucky Home.

Mr. and Mrs. O. S. Eddins entertained a number of relatives from Cincinnati, last Sunday.

It must be awful to be a presidential candidate with nothing to do until next November.

So far he have heard of no home-grown tomatoes being on the Burlington market.

The colored people are having a new galvanized roof put on their church building.

Blackberries made their appearance on the Burlington market last Thursday.
